INTRODUCTION

The need to Investigate Human Rights Violations

The great countries of the world are not those that have never experienced periods of darkness and barbarity, but rather those that have been able to examine such times without fear and overcome them. True democracies must be capable of examining their past; only in this way can they embrace the future. . . . True peace does not come from silence nor from ignorance, but from the clear and open recognition of our limits and errors.

The Facts Speak for Themselves: The Preliminary Report on Disappearances of the National Commissioner for the Protection of Human Rights in Honduras (New York, 1994, p. xi).

The practice of appointing Commissions of Inquiry to investigate mass-scale violations of human rights is of recent origin in Sri Lanka. The country in the last three decades has experienced two armed insurrections in the South and a continuing civil war in the North and the East. A large number of persons were killed during the 1971 JVP insurrection which lasted for about two months (April to June). However, the Criminal Justice Commission created in terms of Act No. 14 of 1972 tried and punished only the leaders of that insurrection (the Act itself received condemnation as being obnoxious to the established domestic and international norms of criminal jurisprudence). In so far as the acts of the State Agencies were concerned, except for the isolated case of Premawathie Manamperi (the festival queen of Kataragama) where the officers responsible for her murder were prosecuted and punished[1], no action was taken to investigate human rights abuses which took place during that short period of time. Also, no serious attempt has been made to study the conduct of security forces in a crisis situation.

Some may have thought that what happened in 1971 was an aberration in the history of this country until similar events overtook us in the North by the end of the 1970's when the youth took up arms against the state. According to the findings of Amnesty International, over 680 people had "disappeared" in custody in the North and the East between 1979 and mid-1987. Howeover, no investigation or prosecution in respect of these has taken place up to date. During the Second JVP Insurrection beginning from mid-1987, the South also experienced a wave of "disappearances" and widespred human rights abuses. There were disappearances during the 1971 insurrection, but "disappearances" as a practice of dealing with opponents began in the late 1970's, and continue to exist even up to date.

[1]Wijesuriya V. The State (1973) 77 NLR, p. 25: This case contains valuble analysis of the position in low of a soldier during a time of insurgency'.

The leaders of the second insurrection were not given an opportunity to face a court trial but were killed under mysterious circumstances in state custody. Other suspects also met with a similar fate. It is true that the second insurrection lasted for about two and a half years creating enormous chaos in the country and subversives were also to be blamed for extra-judicial killings and human rights violations. However, even a perpetrator of heinous crimes is entitled to a fair procedure and trial dictated to by the rule of law as a value ingrained in individual freedom. No man should be condemned unless tried by regular court.

There was tremendous pressure, locally as well as internationally, to investigate the continuing human rights abuses in Sri Lanka. In consequence of the demands President Ranasinghe Premadasa appointed in January 1993 a Presidential Commission of Inquiry into the involuntary Removal of Persons. However, the mandate of that Commission covered only the period beginning from January 11, 1991. Therefore, the most critical stage of the second insurrection was not covered by that Commission. This is equally true in respect of incidents prior to 11.01.1991 associated with the war in the North-East.

During its election campaign, the People's Alliance made a pledge to the people promising speedy action on human rights abuses in the past. After its electoral victory at the parliamentary Elections in 1994, the new government set about to appoint three commissions to investigate involuntary removals or disappearances alleged to have taken place from 1988. However, President D. B. Wijetunga was not agreeable to appoint Commissions to cover the period prior to 1991. According to a statement issued by the Presidential Secretariat (see, Daily News, 14.09.94) the reasons geven, inter alia, were:

> The years 1988, 1989 and 1990 were years during which bullet reigned supreme over the ballot. There were near civil war conditions as well as total chaos and anarchy in the country.....The country was retrieved from the abyss of total destruction and anarchy by the armed forces and the police.
> The President was also of the view that it will be difficult to secure reliable evidence regarding incidents that took place during this period of extreme turmoil, when there was a complete breakdown of law and order. The appointment of Commissions of Inquiry to inquire into the incidents that took place would only provide an opportunity for interested persons to maliciously implicate others on false evidence.
> Further, the President is of the view that the Commissions of Inquiry act does not confer sufficient powers for inquiries of this nature. Such Commissions of Inquiry are basically of a fact-finding nature. Hence, it will not be possible to mete out justice to the persons affected.

When your Excellency assumed power as the President of the Republic of Sri Lanka, one of the first acts of your new government was to appoint three Commissions of Inquiry on dissappearances. Our experience has shown that your decesion to appoint these commissions to investigate incidents prior to 1991 stands validated. A few observations are pertinent at this point:

1. About 96% of the total complaints received by this Commission in respect of disappearances of persons belongs to the period not covered by the 1993 Presidential Commission of Inquiry (out of 8739 complaints, 8403 belong to the period from January 1, 1988 – January 11, 1991). We understand that the other two Commissions have also received a large number of complaints regarding disappearances during this period. This indicates that an opportunity had been denied to the family members of these victims for several years to get a hearing from the state. When the 1993 Presidential Commission was appointed, some of these families had written to that Commision to be told later that their complaints did not fall within the mandate of that Commission. During the "period of terror", most of these people did not even have and opportunity to lodge a complaint at a police station, a basic right that a citizen is entitled to. During the sittings of this Commission, we repeatedly heard the saying: "when we went to a police station, we were chased away like dogs." We are convinced that the appointment of the Commissions has fulfilled a fundamental task – that is to provide an opportunity for affected families to present their cases before a body officially appointed by the state, an important step towards national reconciliation.

2. A feature that struck us most forcefully in our inquiries was the utmost care that had been taken not only by individual perpetrators but also by the system itself to prevent these occurrences from being reflected in the official records of the country. Starting with the refusal of the local police to record complaints – which was a general frature in all three prvinces, through the blatant use of vehicles without number plates, right up to the refusal to allow the bereaved to take possessions of corpses identified by them let alone obtaining death cerificates in respect of them, there is clear evidence of a systematic attempt to keep these deaths/disappearances from being recorded in the official annals. A nation which takes pride in the fact of having a recorded history of thousands of years should not leave a dark patch of unrecorded events in the rcent past.

3. As Your Excellency's Commissioners, We Should emphatically state that we have been at pains to give no opportunity to anybody to "maliciously implicate others on false evidence." Whenever such possibilities arosde, we severely admonished and repromanded the witnesses. However, except in a negligible number of cases, the demeanour and the general composure of the witneses left us with no doubt that they were conscious of the obligation cast on them to assist the Commission to ascertain the fate that had befallen their loved ones. A statement made by a witness grapically illustrates the genuineness of their purpose. As one mother, with tears rolling down her cheeks, giving an account of how certain police officers (identified by her) came home and abducted her son, when asked as to how she could be so sure as to the identity of the perpetrators named by her, said:

   Am I not giving evidence on oath? If I give the wrong name, wouldn't I be exculpating the real culprits who took away my son.

4. We are mindful of the limitations of the powers of our Commission which has been appointed under the Commissinos of Inquiry Act, No. 17/1948. Regarding the penal aspects of our findings, we have made certain recommendations to be followed up in order to bring to book those who had been responsible for the extra-judicial treatment meted out to the disappeared persons.

Justice does not simply mean the punishement of offenders, and therfore, the penal aspect constitutes only a part of the problem. The question of how to "mete out justice to affected persons" should be looked at from a broader perspective. Being a fact-finding Commission, we were able to go beyond the narrow confines of a judicial tribunal to address our minds to the other issues of long-term importance cotemplated by the mandate. Disappeared persons have left thousands of dependents – old parents, spouses (some were pregnant at the time of the disapperarnce), and children – and their economic and emotional rehabilitation is of crucial importance both to their own families and to the stability of society. We have also made several recommendations to Your Excellency regarding measures to prevent the occurrence of such tragic incidents in the future, an issue contemplated by the mandate. These recommendations are our response to the problems revealed by the evidence before us.

5. We would like to mention here that even the time limit given in the mandate of our Commission (the period beginning from January 1, 1988) was issufficient as the second JVP insurrection in the South began in mid–1987. As a result, we were unable to investigate the incidents of disappearances which took place prior to January 1, 1988.

PART I

CHAPTER ONE

THE WORK OF THE COMMISSION

Your Excellency by a Warrant dated 13.11.94, appointed us who are signatories to this report as commissioners to inquire into incidents after 01.01.1988 of involuntary removals or disappearances of persons in Western, Southern and Sabaragamuwa Provinces. In view of the enormity of the work involved, Your Excellency was pleased to extend the period of the mandate eight times, thus enabling us to continue our work without interruption until the end of our mandate on September 03, 1997.

The work done by us during our tenure may be classified as follows:

(a) Pre-inquiry stage
(b) Inquiries
(c) Follow-up action
(d) Reporting to Your Excellency.

(A) Pre-inquiry Stage

1. With the appointment of Mr. Wimaladharma Ekanayake as the Secretary of the Commission, the Secretariat was set-up in January 1995 at the BMICH.

2. Collection of Information: As there was no official and authentic data-base of disappeared persons, representations were invited through newspaper advertisements, electronic media, and notices displayed at over 5000 Grama Niladhari and Divisional Secretary offices. Apart from this, a number of government departments and NGOs made available to us names and addresses of petitioners who had communicated with them on earlier occassions. Among these various institutions were the Presidential Secretariat, the Prime Minister's Office, Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Defence, Human Rights Task Force (HRTF), the Presidential Commission of Inquiry into Involuntary Removals (appointed in 1993), the Mothers' Front, the Lawyers for Human Rights and Development, Hambantota, the Parents' and Children's Front of the Disappeared Persons, Mothers and Daughters of Lanka Front, the Parents' Front of the Disappeared School Children of Embilipitiya, Movement for the Defence Rights (MDDR) and INFORM.

We made contact with the IGP and the Commanders of the security forces to submit to us particulars of members of their respective forces and their family members who have been involuntarily removed or disappeared during the relevant period.

We also made coantact with Grama Niladharis of the three provinces through Divisional Secretaries to report to us about disappearances in their respective areas. Divisional Secretaries also provided us with lists of names of those who have either received of applied for compensation in respect of disappearances. There is a close congruence between the numbers reported to Divisional Secretaries for death certificates and the applications received by us.

We also called for representations from all the registered political parties, and information was obtained from those who appeared before the Commission. Through our Diplomatic Mission in Geneva, we requested the UN Human Rights Committee's Working group on Enforced Disappearances (WGEID) to assist us with its data-base on disappearances in Sri Lanka. The WGEID responded to our request enabling us to sort out information relevant to our three provinces.

3. A questionnaire (i. e. a Victim Identification Form) was prepared by us on the lines of the U. N. Human Rights Committee's questionnaire but adapted to suit the terms of reference issued to us by Your excellency. We sent questionnaires to every person who either responded directly with this Commission or whose names and addresses were provided to this Commission by other agencies. 16,800 questionnaires were sent out from this Commission. There was a certain degree of duplication at the initial stage, because in certain cases the same name had been given to us by different institutions. In certain other cases, several questionnaires had been sent to us on the same person by different family members. After the setting up of our computer data-base, this repetition was eliminated.

It should be mentioned that we did not insist on a closing date for the receipt of complaints, thus allowing affected families to report to us up to the last date of our mandate. When petitioners came before the Commission, we probed whether there were any other disappearances relating to their cases, and if there were, we initiated communication by writing to the affected parties, and depending on their response, questionnaires were sent to them.

This Commission has received complaints in respect of 8739 disappearances. We have also received 191 complaints from returned detainees and 12 complaints of physical injury.

4 The following units were set up to assist the work of the Commission.

(1) Computer data base
(2) Legal Unit
(3) Independent Investigation Unit

(B) Inquiries

1. After the receipt of completed questionnaires, we issued summons on complainants and other witnesses to give evidence before the Commission. We commenced our sittings on March 10, 1995, starting with the Colombo District. We travelled on numerous occasions to outlying areas in order to give the complainants easy access to the Commission. We have held inquiries in respect of 7761 cases of disappearances (88.8% of the total number of complaints received).

2. In the course our sittings, 9744 witnesses appeared before the Commission. We also summoned 54 special witnesses such as representatives of various political parties, officers of security forces, representatives of NGO's and other organizations to give evidence on various aspects of the phenomenon of disappearances and its context (see Annexure B).

(C) Follow up Action

1. On penal Aspects

Based on the evidence revealed at our inquiries, the following measures were taken by us in regard to penal aspects.

(1) Verification of personnel, including officers in charge of police stations, through the IGP

(2) Ascertainment of the existence of some unacknowledged army camps and clandestine places of detention (including a place of detention maintained by subversives)

(3) Inspection of location, lay-out, and other physical features of places of detention (e. g. Sevana Rural Training Institute at Embilipitiya which was then known as "Sevana camp," the premises of the Batheegama Temple, STF Headquarters in Ganemulla, the locations of the Eliyakanda Camp and the JOC headquarters at Matara, the premises of the rural hospital in Middeniya etc.)

(4) On the spot investigations conducted through our Investigation Unit.
   (a) location of alleged mass graves
   (b) ascertainment of the existence further witnesses and the content of their knowledge
   (c) perusal of police records including tracking down their location.

(5) Procuring written records such as medical, court, and service records; particulars of registration of ownership (including government-owned vehicles) from the Registrar of Motor Vehicles; Grama Sevaka records; prison records of detention and prison records of escapes from detention; Defence Ministry records of release from detention (pertaining to the Jayalath Committee); records of the Commissioner of Rehabilitation of instances of abduction/disappearances following on the release of some rehabilitated detainees.

(It should be noted that this Commission's attempts to procure army records of arrests, detention, transfers of detainees, maintenance of temporary army camps, operational activities of personnel etc. met with little success. (See Annexures G1 to G5)

(6) In response to petitioners' queries whether the disappeared persons were still being held in prisons, we obtained relevant records from the Commissioner of prisons. Our investigations however did not yield any positive results.

We will be making our recommendations on the issue of penal responsibility in a separate chapter in this report (see, Chapter Seven: "The Legal Proceedings Regarding Responsibility,")

2. On Relief Aspects:

Apart from the devastation and trauma the members of the affected families had been subjected to, we have also identified a wide range of problems these families have had to face on account of members of their families being involuntarily removed or disappeared. These may be listed as follows:

Property related problems
Employment related problems
Inheritance and succession related problems
Insurance, Bank Loans, housing loans
Funds lying to the credit of the disappeared persons
Destruction of movable property and misappropriation of movable property by the alleged perpetrators
Inability to obtain legal services to institute appropriate legal action notwithstanding the availability of evidence

In cases where on the evidence before us we were satisfied that the alleged involuntary removal or disappearance was proved, we took steps by prevailing upon the appropriate authorities to respond to the said problems wherever possible. Steps taken by us in respect of some of the areas identified above, the responses received from appropriate authorities and the nature and extent of relief sought to be afforded to the affected families will be referred to in some degree of detail in a subsequent chapter in this report (see, Chapter Nine: "Relief Measures").

(D) Reporting to Your Excellency

During this period, we have submitted to your Excellencey four Interim Reports, including a Special Interim Report on the Disappearance of Embilipitiya School Childern. As Your Excellency is aware, we made several observations and recommendations in those early reports, and we have integrated some of them into this Final Reports.

CHAPTER TWO

PRINCIPLES ADOPTED BY THE COMMISSION IN RELATION TO PROCEDURE AND TERMS OF THE MANDATE

I. RULINGS OF THE COMMISSION RELATING TO THE MANDATE

A. Cases Falling Within Mandate
B. Cases Falling Outside Mandate
C. Suicide Resulting From Political Threats

A. Cases Falling Within Mandate

(a) EX FACIE FALLING WITHIN MANDATE

(i) Involuntarily removed allegedly by agents of the State (Police, Army, etc.) of Para Military groups in collaboration with them or subversives or unknown persons and subsequently disappeared (in the sense, the present whereabouts of the corpus are unknown)

(ii) Allegedly held under detention in unauthorised Army Camps or Police Stations and subsequently disappeared (the present whereabouts of the corpus being unknown)

(b) OTHER CASES

This category of cases stemmed from the query raised in the course of our proceedings namely, whether killings fell within the terms of the Commission"s Mandate.

This category of cases may be classified as follows:

(i) Involuntarily removed allegedly by agents of the State (Police,Army, etc.) or Para Military Groups in collaboration with them or Subversives or/ unknown persons or allegedly held under detention in unauthorised Army Camps or Police Stations and subsequently found killed (body identified by witnesses)

(ii) Alleged agents of the State (Police, Army, etc.) or Para Military Groups in collaboration with them or Subversives or unknown persons invading the residence etc, of the corpus and killing corpus.

Our determination reflected in Category (b)(i) above was based on paregraph (a) of the Mandate read with the reasoning that it would be illogical to draw a distinction between a person who has disappeared after being involuntarily removed and a persons who was killed after being involuntarily removed.

Illustrations

(a) A case where the evidence showed that the corpus had been in a detention camp after being involuntarily removed and subsequently found dead on a public road.

(b) Cases where girls who had been abducted from their homes as hostages by unidentified persons who had come looking for their brothers or fathers were later found to be raped and killed (in one case the body burnt)

(c) Cases where three brothers had been involuntarily removed and while the dead bodies of two of them had been subsequently discovered the third disappeared without any trace and remains missing to date.

In regard to category (b)(ii) above although ""the killing"" was not preceded by and involuntary removal in a physical sence, taking into considaration the phenomenon we have been called upon to investigate as perceived by us namely, to ascertain the fate that had befallen certain persons during the period under investigation as a result of extra-judicial and/or unaccountable conduct, we were of the view that, it was unrealistic to draw a distinction between physical disappearance and a killing (disappeared from the face of the earth). Even if a distinction could be drawn it is a distinction without a difference. Furthermore, in an enforced disappearance and inevitable presumption to be drawn would be that the corpus had been extra-judicially executed. Accordingly, we were of the view that it would amount to violating common sense and logic to regard a case where the evidence directly establishes an extra-judicial execution as not falling within the scope of our Mandate.

Illustration

A tenant cultivator from Embilipitiya had gone to the paddy field. On his return home he found two of his sons had been burnt alive inside the house. A third son had been removed. The cultivators wife and his daughters who were waiting at the doorstep had not been able to identify the perpetrators of these acts.

If a view contrary to the one expressed above was adopted it would mean that, while the case of the son who had been removed would fall within the Mandate the case of the two sons who were killed inside the house would fall outside the Mandate. We were fortified in the aforesaid view by what is envisaged in paragraph (c) and (g) of the terms of our Mandate.

(iii) Disappearances or Killings without evidence of prior involuntary removal

we enumerate below the factors that influenced us in this category of cases

(a) The surrounding circumstances and/or climate of the times

(b) The personal antecedents and/or socio-economic and socio-political involvenents of the corpus.

Illustrations of 'Disappearances'

Corpus had gone to the Market place/Junction/friend's or relatives's place to attend a function/work place/some other errand on the day in question where there had been a official curfew or a crufew imposed by subversives/the complaint being "I think my son/husband/Friend/relative must have been taken away by the Police/Army/subversives".

Illustrations of 'Killings'

(a) Unknown persons had thrown a bomb at a Hindu Kovil. A woman street dweller who had been in the vicinity had become a victim of this act.

(b) One rainy night unknown persons had left a parcel near a playground of a school. The following day three children meddled with this parcel wich turned out to be a bomb. On the bomb going off the children had died.

(c) A large number of cases where the corpora had been found killed on a road side ; near a paddy field ; on and under bridges ; tied to lamp posts and trees ; or burnt on tyre pyres etc.

In these cases the evidence revealed circumstances similar to those referred to in illustrations given in regard to disappearances above.

A variation of the above theme was where the complainant suspected that the corpus must have been abducted in a "Cordon and Search" operation or from somewhere "because he is young", "because someone must have petitioned that he is a subversive out of personal jealousy or otherwise", "because he was a political activist", "because he was involved and/or took the lead in strike (employee/trade union) action etc., "because he put posters on behalf of the J. V. P.", "because he went to vote at the Provincial Council elections", "because he went to vote at the Provincial Council Elections", "because another family member was a UNP/SLFP/JVP activist."

Illustrations

(a) A brother, a graduate teacher giving evidence stated that in September 1989 ghis brother who was a Ruhuna Medical Student had disappeared. A month prior to this incident another brother also a graduate teacher had been abducted by unidentified persons. Their father was a UNP loyalist.

But thereafter their family had laid off politics. The Police had warned them that there had been petitions against their family that their residence was being used to conduct JVP lectures. Witness stated that no such thing happened in their house.

The evidence suggested that the disappearance had been orchestrated by persons out of personal jealousy with the aid of para-military groups.

(b) A mother giving evidence before the Commission stated that her two sons who were both in their early twenties were missing since March and September 1989 respectively. The evidence revealed that the complainant's daughter had been a SLFP activist and had been a polling agent on behalf of the SLFP at the 1988 and 1989 elections. A family closely related to them were supporters of the UNP. Members of that family had repeatedly threatened the witness that her son will be 'lifted' because of the daughter's involviement with the SLFP. The incident had taken place around the Presidential Elections time in 1988. The evidence suggested that the disappearance had been instigated by this rival family with the assistance of para-military groups.

(iv) Cases of Physical Injury Resulting Eventually in Death

There were several cases falling into this category where unidentified persons had by the use of arms inflicted physical injury on the corpora. Sometimes the perpetrators had invaded the residence of the corpora for this purpose ; or had waylaid and shot at a crowd thereby injuring them. While the majority of these incidents were alleged to have been caused by subversive action on account of the corpus "not heeding warnings calling upon them to resign from Government employment" ; "failing to publicly denounce involvement with the political party (generally the UNP) to which the corpus belonged", "refusing to join and/or assist the JVP" or "for breaking the unofficial curfew". There were also cases where the allegations were against the armed forces. Taking into consideration the type of arms and instruments used by the perpetrators, the location selected for the infliction of the injury and other surrounding circumstances, we were of the view that death had resulted from the physical injury so inflicted in the absence of any evidence to the contrary. In two cases the interval between the injury and the death had been one and half years and two years. In the latter case the corpus had even taken treatment in hospital. Nevertheless, in the absence of evidence that, there was any nova causa interveniens we felt that it was justified to hold that the death fell within the terms of our Mandate.

B. Cases Falling Outside the Mandate

(i) Jurisdictional bars (or Territorial ouster)

(ii) Time Bars

(iii) Other Cases -

(a) Cases of insufficient evidence

(b) Disappearance resulting from private quarrels

(c) Cases of physical injury

(d) Some cases of temporary involuntary removal

(i) Jurisdictional Bars (or territorial ouster)

Certain police areas cover parts of the districts falling within our three provinces as well as districts falling outside our provinces. For example the Embilipitiya Police area is located in Embilipitiya in the Ratnapura district falling with the Sabaragamuwa Province (which falls within our Mandate). But the Embilipitiya Police area covers parts of the Moneragala district in the Uva Province (not falling within our jurisdiction). Consequently, if the evidence revealed that the alleged involuntary removal or disappearance had taken place within the territorial limits of the latter we were obliged to rule that the complaint did not fall within the scope of our Mandate.[1]

[1] However, this type of case was referred to the appropriate Commission possessed of jurisdiction to inquire.

(ii) Time Bars

Paragraph (a) of the Warrant decrees us to inquire "Whether any persons have been involuntarily removed or have disappeared at any time after January 1, 1988". Consequently complaints relating to alleged involuntary removals or disappearances prior to January 1, 1988 stood excluded ex facie on the Mandate, (Vide: paragraph (a) of the warrant).

(iii) Other Cases

(a) Cases of Insufficient Evidence.– Several cases illustrate this category. In all these cases we found that although a disappearance per se had been established the super-added requirement of an involvement on the part of agents of the State or Para-military groups or subversive groups or even an unknown external agency (tied up with the criteria discerned earlier such as the climate of the times, personal antecedents of the corpora and other surrounding circumstances) which would have brought the incident within some limb contemplated by the Mandate was altogether absent[1] or was based on pure surmise[2] or hearsay evidence[3] (or the evidence was found to be lacking in credibility)

(b) Disappearance Resulting form Private Disputes or Quarrels.– This category of cases is based on variations of the theme highlighted in category (i) above, for example, the family of the corpus had been involved in a boundary (land) dispute with a neighbouring family. During or aronud this period the corpus had disappeared. Witnesses had sought to impute motives to the said neighbouring family. "We have no one else to suspect" the mother of the corpus had conceded.

Some of the cases had even resulted in litigation. In one such case a father giving evidence before the Commission disclosed that, in August, 1988 his

1 Around 1.00 p.m. on an afternoon in June, 1989 the corpus had gone fishing in the area in a boat and had not returned home.

(b) The corpus had been an army soldier. One day he had come home and said that he had left the Army. Shortly thereafter he had disappeared.

(c) A woman had been killed in the course of a house-breaking and robbery incident. The husband giving evidence had not even made an allegation against anyone whom he suspected to be the perpetrator.

[2]A Mother giving evidence before the Commission stated that her 19 year old son who was studying for the Advanced Level examination had disappeared in November 1989 when he had gone to the town. She had no one to suspect in particular but she surmised that UNP supporters might have been responsible for the incident because her family were strong SLFP supporters.

[3]Witness had stated that a list containing their names had gone to a strong supporter of a UNP politician. Asked by the Commission as to who had given them this information the witness had said "we heard from various people". But the witness had failed to name a single person who might have given the alleged information.

son had been abducted by a crowd of persons and later killed. The killing had been executed as a result of a property dispute which his family had with a party connected to the suspected killers. Proceedings had been instituted in the Magistrate's Court against the suspect. The main suspect had turned state witness. Immediately thereafter he had been killed in mysterious circumstances. Consequently, the other suspects had been discharged in the court proceedings for want of evidence.

A mother alleged that the respective families to which her son and daughter had been given in marriage had killed her said son and daughter through envy.

A witness stated that her husband went to a hotel resort by the sea with his lover. As a result of a quarrel they had had at the hotel the corpus had left her and run towards the beach and never returned.

(c) Cases of Physical Injury per Sc. – This was another category of cases coming before us which ex-facie did not fall within the terms of the Mandate for the reason that neither the element of involuntary removal nor disappearance was present.

(d) Some Cases of Temporary Involuntary Removal.–A variation of the theme in (iv) above was represented by a number of cases where the complainants appeared before the Commission on the basis that they had been "involuntarily removed". It was apparent however that their object was purely speculative. Illustrative of this category was a case where the witness claimed that: In May 1989 unidentified gunmen had come in a Delica van which had no number plates to the hotel where the petitioner was working and forced him to get into the van. After asking him to show where he lived the unidentified gunmen had dropped him off on the road. Probed by the Commission the witness had claimed that the unidentified gunmen were members of the armed forces and that he had been abducted bucause he had been involved in the 1971 Insurrection.

There was no independent evidence to substantiate any of these claims. Further examination of the witness revealed that the reason for his coming before the Commission was to obtain financial assistance to run "his hotel". He was also the owner of 8 1/2 acres of tea.

C. Suicide Resulting From Political Threats

This case, by the very nature of it presented us with a novel problem for consideration. During the period of terror under investigation the evidence revealed that many persons had been subjected to threats (directly through warning letters and notices as well as indierctly through anonymous calls or warnings notes) by subversives as well as para-military groups (sometimes allegedly instigated by political opponents). In the case under consideration the corpus had been subjected to continuous threats to leave his work place and give up his political affiliations. This had induced in his mind a state of fear and a condition of anxiety. He had committed suicide allegedly in a state of neurotic depression.

The immediate question we were faced with was whether the case could be brought within the terms of the Mandate. Clearly, there was no involuntary removal or disappearance in the literal sense. If, instead of threats, the group had caused some physical injury to the corpus he would have been compensated. A consequential death would have fallen within the Meaning of "involuntary removal or disappearance". (in the sense that it was an a fortiori disappearance). The question we had to determine was whether, instead of a physical injury that had been inflicted, "the threats" which had led to the State of neurotic depression followed by death, the proximate cause being the act of the corpus himself, could be regarded as a case falling within the meaning of "involuntary removal or disappearance". On the basis of the principle that, "true nervous shock is as much a physical injury as a broken bone or torn flesh wound"[1], we accommodated in principle such cases as coming within the terms of our Mandate. Consequently, we took the view that the felonious act of the corpus himself in taking his own life would not break the chain of causation between the state of neurotic deperssion he was said to have ben subjected to as a result of threats and his death. However, we found that in this particular case the evidence placed before the Commission (particularly the absence of adequate medical evidence) in regard to the claim that "the corpus had committed suicide in a state of neurotic depression forced by JVP threats" was not sufficient for us to come to a positive finding on the said claim.

II. MATTERS OF PROCEDURE

1. The Procedure followed to ascertain the existence of a prima facie case

At the very commencement of our work and within a short period of it becoming public that disappearance Commissions had been established, we received over sixteen thousand eight hundred requests for victim identification forms from the next of kin of disappeared persons and social interest groups. More than half the completed victim identification forms contained names of alleged perpetrators.

In view of:

(i) The large number of complaints to be dealt with within a relatively short period of time, in which more-over the many aspects covered by our Mandate required attention,[6]

(ii) The likelihood/possibility that the same name would transpire in respect of more than one/several incidents coming within our Mandate,

(iii) The fact that our findings do not afect the rights of the persons identified as named perpetrators,

We proceeded to ascertain the existence of credible material prima facie indicative of the person or persons responsible for the alleged removals of disappearances.

[1] Eldredge, Modern Tort Problems. p. 76

[2] See Mandate paragraph (g)

We found justification for this approach in the judicial observation that.

> Even a public officer who has to decide whether to prosecute ought first to decide wheather there is a prima facie case, but no one suppose that justice requires that he should first seek the comments of the accused or the defendant on the material before him.[1]

2. Evidence Under Oath or Affirmation

Given the fact that the essence of the oath is its solemn appeal to witness that statements which are to be made are true we felt that the formal administration of an oath or affirmation with its underlined consequences for perjury would induce in the minds of the witnesses to speak the truth.

3. Decision to Hold Hearings in Camera

(a) Section 7(e) of the Commission of Inquiry Act (Cap.393, LEC, 1956 Revised ed.) confers power on the Commission, subject to any direction contained in the Warrant -

(i) to admit or exclude the public from the inquiry or any part thereof;

(ii) to admit or exclude the press from the inquiry or any part thereof;

The Warrant issued to us by Your Excellency also directed that "such part of any inquiry relating to the aforesaid matters, as may in your discretion determine, shall not be held in public."

(b) In terms of the aforesaid Provisions we, in our discretion, decided to hold all our sittings in Camera. In taking this decision we had regard to the sensitive nature of the matters to be inquired into in terms of our Mandate.

III. Decision to Send Under Separate Cover Names of Alleged Perpetrators

Althouth our proceedings are not going to affect the legal rights of persons we are mindful of the adverse effect publicity could have on their character and reputation, before the further investigations against such persons as recommended by us could commence.

Accordingly we recommend that the lists of names of persons alleged to have been responsible for involuntary removals or disappearances sent by us under separate cover be not published.

Notes :

1. The category "Professionals" include 1 Doctor, 4 Engineers, 4 Lawyers, and 4 Accountants.
2. Among the buddhist priests, there were 10 teachers; therefore, the actual number of teachers should read as 115 (105+10).
3. Among the Buddhist priests, there were 26 undergraduates ad 20 students. When they are also added to the student category, the actual number of students should read as 782 (736+26+20). The total number of undergraduates was 129. Except for Bhikku undergraduates (26), others are already included in the student category.
4. Skilled workers include Technicians and Artisans (74), Mechanics (78), Carpenters (233)Masons (270), Electricians (62), Machine operators (40), Welders (34), Tinkers (05), Plumbers (05).
5. The category "others" includes 8 artists, 2 musicians, 11 painters, 13 photographers, etc.

The statistical information reveals that the overwhelming majority of disappeared persons were males (8543),.This number accounts for 97.76% of the total number of disappearances.

Table 2 shows that 3230 (about 37%) of the disappeared persons were married. Even though the nmber of females disappeared is relativel very few (196), a large nmber of women were adversely affected as a result of the desappearauces of their husbands. Besides, a large number of them also have children of school–going age. Of this number (3230),'the Commission, has inquired into 2928 cases. During the sittings of the Commission, we had an opportunity to assess the economic difficulties of the affected families, and found that 2475 families are in need of some kind of financial assistance to support the education of their school children. This clearly shows the low–income level of the affected families (for a deteiled discussion on the impact of disappearances of women and children left behind, see Chapter Thirteen). The statistics in table 4 show that 24 victims were children below 9 years. They were actually killed in various incidents such as reprisal killings of families, cross-fire, and bomb attacks. (See Chapter Two, on the issue of whether killings fell within the Terms of the Mandate). There are 44 victims within the age group 10-14. Most of them were also killed in incidents similar to what was described earlier. However, there were also several cases of abductions within this group. For instance, a 10 year old boy was abducted by security forces as a hostage in a bid to find his father who was suspected of subversive activities. His father was subsequently captured and killed but the boy never returned home. The statistical data have revealed that the disappeared persons were predominantly the youth. About 63 percent of the disappeared persons belong to the age group between 15 to 29. The most vulnerable group was between ages 20 to 24 (about 28%).

Table 5 indicates, a very high literacy rate among the disappeared persons. Of them, 2243 (25.66%) had primary education and 5476 (62,67%) had secondary education. There were 129 undergraduates and 86 gaduates. The statistical information on the occupations of the disappeared persons suggests that the spectrum of their economic activities was very diverse. The most affected categoris among them were cultivators, labourers, traders, and skilled workers. The overwhelming majority of the victims belong to low–income level groups. It is well Known that the cultivators in Sri Lankan rural sector are small holders, and a considerable percentage of them are tenant cultivators. Likewise, petty–traders constituted the vast majority of traders. In a rural settig, even the skilled workers are not financially well remunerated. The numbers given as "unemployed" do not reveal the true position in respect of this category. The reason being that a considerable percentage of persons recorded as employed are in reality persons who are under–employed or seasonally employed. Besides, occupational status is mot mentioned in respect of 315 persons. Therefore, one can safely assume that the actual number of unemployed persons is probably higher than the figures given in the category "unemployed".

It should be noted that some of the well-known cases belonging to the elite of the society had not been reported to this Commission, and as a result, they are not reflected in our statistics. Since such cases are very few, they would not have significantly changed the overall picture in terms of percentages.

What is given so far is a profile of the disappeared persons. We now proceed to indicate certain patterns of abductions during the period uder review. A staistical breakdown of ivoluntary removals classified according to date of the incident is given in Table 7 and 8 (and also in Figure 2). Table 9 (and Figure 3) contain a statistical breakdown of involuntary removals classified according to the time of day of the incident (by 4 hourly periods).

NOTE: This is in respect of disappeared persons only

As the Mandate of the Commission covers the Period beginning from January 1, 1988, figures relating to the period following on the Peace Accord of July 1987 are not reflected here. It is generally held that the "reign of terror" in Southern Sri Lanka began since mid-1987, particularly after the signing of the Indo-Sri Lanka Peace Accord in July 1987.

It is evident from statistical data in table 7 (and also from Figure 2) that the worst period of disappearances took place during the second half of 1989 and the first quarter of 1990. Of the number of cases reported, 5964 (68.21%) disappearances took place during this period. As a year, 1989 represents the worst period; however, there was a marked difference between the first half and the second half of 1989. The number of disappearances during the first half of 1989 was 768 (8.78%) whereas it was 4974 (56.89%) during the second half of 1989. There were 990 (11.32) disappearances in the first quarter of 1990 alone.

Table 8 gives a more detailed breakdown (on monthly basis) of the disappearances. Accordingly, the period between August 1989 and January 1990 represents the worst period of disappearances. 5208 persons who had allegedly been abducted during this period have disappeared. This number accounts for nearly 60% of the total number of disappearances.

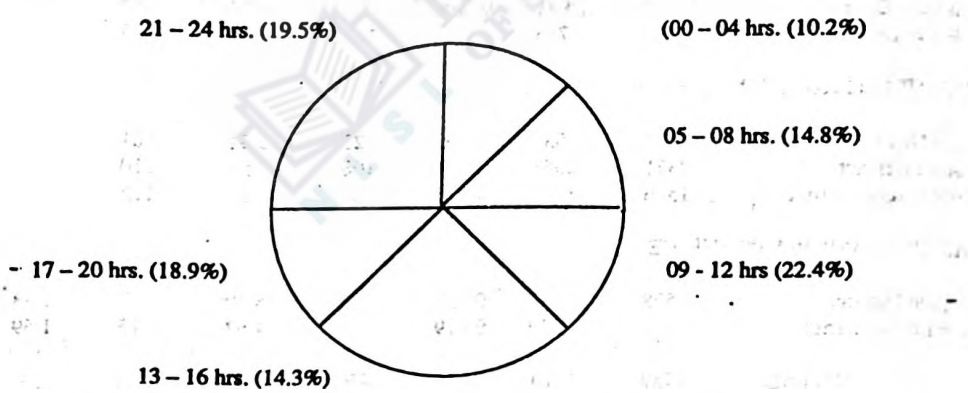
INVOLUNTARY REMOVALS (1988–1990)
ACCORDING TO THE TIME OF DAY OF THE INCIDENT (BY 4 HOURLY PERIODS)



Exact time of abduction unknown: 14.51 %

The breakdown of abductions by time period of the day, as given in Table 9, (and also Figure 3) reveals a very significant feature of this period - the climate of impunity. Quite contrary to the popular belief that most of the abductions took place during night time ("midnight knock on the door"), abductions took place throughout the day. The perpetrators acted with a sence of impunity without being inhabited by spacio - temporal factors. People were abducted not only from their homes but also openly from public places.

We have so far given statistical data on all the reported cases of disappearances (8739) since January 1, 1988. However, we were required to inquire into and report on certain matters under the terms of the Warrant. Therefore, our observations and findings contained in the main body of this report are based only on cases inquired by us during the period of our tenure.

As indicated in Table 10, we have already inquired into 7761 cases. This number accounts for 88.81% of the total number of disappearances reported to this Commission. Another 436 cases (4.99%) were listed for inquiry but they could not be completed as the complainants did not respond to summons. 542 cases (6.20%) remain to be inquired into.

CHAPTER FOUR

DISAPPEARANCES OR INVOLUNTARY REMOVALS

Nature of Evidence and Present Whereabouts

I. Paragraphs (a) and (b) of our terms of reference require us to inquire into and report on whether any persons have been involuntarily removed or have disappeared etc., any time after January 1, 1988, and whether there is evidence availble to establish such alleged removals or disappearances.

II. The preamble as well as paragraphs (a) to (f) of our terms of reference make it clear that the phenomenon under investigation to be one brought about by the wrongful act of an external agency. Consequently, we found that out of the 7761 complaints inquired into by the commission, in 7238 an involuntary removal or disappearance was established as contemplated by out Mandate.

III. Those Affected were

1. Those Involved in Political Activities.–
whether:
   (a) Subversive activity, ranging from killing to pasting posters on behalf of subversives or attending classes conducted by subversives.
   (b) Activists of the political opposition to the governing party of the time.
   (c) Activists of the ruling party.

While (a) above was the target of the state and allied agencies and (c) the target of the subversives, category (b) was victimized by both state etc. agencies and the subversives.

2. Those Allegedly involved in Political Activity v. the Ruling Party : the practice of "Lists".

3. Persons Caught in Apparent Intra-party conflicts :

   (a) Within the government alliance, eg. Intra-UNP, UNP/CWC etc. or (b) Among the subversives

4. Reprisal Killings.– Reprisal killings victimized by-standers, neighbours, passers-by, and persons in detention. Reprisal killings were a device used by both government agencies and subversives.

5. "Punishment" for "Failure to Obey Commands".– Eg. "Resign from the Army"/"Resign from a government job". "Punishment" for refusing to join/ joining the other side. Speaking disparagingly of one side : This was a device used mainly by the subversives. However the retaliatory killings of whole families in "Punishment" was practised by both sides, "as if" families were mere appurtenances. Failure to "obey" a curfew was "punished" by both sides.

6. Elimination of Personal Enemies.– This is a category of cases where individuals took advantage of the situation to eliminate personal enemies in the guise of "subversive" of "counter-subversive" action.

IV. Nature of the evidence Acted Upon

A. To establish a de facto disappearance

B. To establish the involuntary nature of removals or disappearances as contemplated by the Mandate.

A. To Establish a de facto disappearance

(a) Oral evidence of witnesses (as a rule, corroborative evidence was called for)

(b) Documentary evidence

(i) Grama Sevaka's certification

(ii) Certification by a priest of the village temple

(iii) Certificates or other writings issued by Principal of School attended by children of corpus

(iv) Certification by independent organisations and persons such as the ICRC, WGEID

(v) Police reports

(vi) Written initiatives taken by political personalities.

B. To Establish the Involuntary Nature of Removal or Disappearance as Contemplated by the Mandate

(a) Oral evidence of witnesses (as a rule corroborative evidence was called for)

(c) Evidence procured in terms of Section 7 of the Commission of Inquiry Act, No. 17 of 1948.

(d) Besides the categories of specific evidence enumerated above, in determining that a de facto disappearance amounted to a disappearance as contemplated by the Mandate, we took into consideration the Socio-political antecedents of the corpora and other members of his family, surrounding circumstances such as the climate of the times, and other spacio-temporal factors.

V. We now proceed to consider "present whereabouts of the persons alleged to have been so removed or to have so disappeared", as required by paragraph (c) of the terms of reference. In this regard, the cases inquired by us fall into several categories :

1. Where there is evidence that the victims were killed and their bodies were found and identified (1513 cases).

2. Where there is evidence to show that the victims were seen in places of detention after their abduction (1026 cases).

3. Where there is evidence regarding abduction but no evidence to ascertain where they were taken afterwards. This category constitutes the majority of the cases.
4. Where there is no evidence either to abduction or detention. For example, a mother said : "My 24 year old son left home in Matara to go to Colombo by bus but never returned home". In view of the situation that prevailed at the time, petitioner's perception was that he could be presumed to have fallen into the hands of security forces who constantly carried out search operations during this period. Such "age-victims" (in the sense that they belonged to a certain age group-youth), would have been suspected of terrorist connections. This was the time when young people travelling from certain towns in the Southern province were treated with utmost suspicion when buses and vehicles were checked at security points. Also when terrotist attacks took place in a certain area, people around the place were also taken in for questioning and some disappeared as a result.
5. Those who were abducted but later released from detention. They are presently among the living. 191 returned detainees have reported their cases to this Commission.
6. Those who re-appeared several years after their alleged disappearance. We came across four such cases. In one case, the person concerned was in hiding until he was arrested by the police on suspicion. He was arrested in October 1994, and his father had sent a complaint to the Commission two months later. When asked about the reasons for sending a complaint, he said : "For us, the law is like a crown on our head. I thought that I should report this case to the Commission to clear my son's name since he was considered a disappeared person for a long time till we found him." One cannot rule out the possibility that some of the "disappeared" persons may have left the country or are living in hiding inside the country without even informing their families (if at all, this would be a small number). It should be noted here that under Section 9 of the Registration of Deaths (Temporary Provisions) Act No. 2 of 1995, there are procedures to be followed if person registered as dead is found to be alive.

   A few observations regarding the following three categories are pertinent at this point.

   (i) Where bodies were found and identified

   (ii) Those who were seen in places of detention but disappeared afterwards .

   (iii) Returned detainees

(i) First Category : Where Bodies were Found and Identified

The general pattern in the case of subversive killings was that the bodies of the victims would be found in close vicinity to their home. Out of 779 subversive killings, bodies were found in 628 cases. In most cases, inquests were held and B Reports were filed. In some cases, however, inquests could not be held due to the worsened security situation.

In the case of killings done by the agents of the state/paramilitary groups, it is in some cases only that bodies were found and identified. In a vast number of cases, family members had no access to bodies for identification. Floating dead bodies in rivers, bodies on roadsides, burning bodies on tyres, were a common sight during this period of terror. However, in some cases bodies were publicly exhibited. For instance, a group of army personnel shot dead two university students when they were at a well washing their faces. Their bodies were brought on to the road, tied to two boards stating that they were leaders of the J.V.P. and, the bodies taken away in a truck and exhibited them at three junctions.

(ii) Second Category: Those who were seen in places of detention but disappeared afterwards

Serveral patterns of disappearances could be discerned in this category.

(a) Family members or other witnesses had seen the corpus in state custody, but authorities denied their detention and offered no explanation as to their whereabouts.

(b) Family members were allowed to speak to the detainees or to give them food and clothes. Clothes were given back to the family members to be washed and brought back. Subsequently, however, they were told that detainees were transferred to other places of detention such as "Boossa camp." When family members visited such places, they were categorically told that such a person was not brought to the camp.

(c) In some cases detainees were seen by family members for weeks and months till the last day of the closure of those camps. Family members had seen them being taken out in vehicles but the subsequent whereabouts were not known.

(d) In some cases reterned detainees gave evidence testifying that some were tortured and killed inside the camps or taken out of their rooms but never brought back.

(e) In another set of cases, the authorities themselves had explained that the detainees were killed while trying to escape or in cross-fire.

(f) In some cases, detainees were released from places of detention to be abducted by unknown persons coming in "hi-ace vans". There is evidence that such incidents took place with the connivance of the authorities. In one case, the police purposely delayed the release of a person till dark; and as he went out he was picked up by persons who had been earlier seen inside the police station.

(g) Persons discharged by the Magistrate were abducted by unknown persons on their way back home.

(h) Some persons who surrendered as a response to and in obedience to requests made by the state had also disappeared. During this period, there was also a practice of surrendering persons to the Government Agent of the area who made arrangements to hand them over to rehabilitation camps.

Some of them have also disappeared. In one such case, "X" was handed over to the Government Agent of a certain area by a Grama Sevaka of his village as the security forces were looking for him. The Government Agent then handed him over to a rehabilitation camp. After three months however the C.S.U., of a certain police station took him into custody from the camp. According to the records of the C.S.U., "X" had been admitted to a hospital as he had a chest pain and is missing from the hospital. Our investigation into this case revealed that there is no mention whatsoever in records at this particular hospital to say that "X" was admitted to this hospital during the period concerned. "X" has also not been issued with a detention order.

In the 7761 cases (88.8%) inquired into the bodies of the victims were found only in 1513 (19.4%) cases. Others have disappeared without a trace. However in the given context, the word "disappearance" is only a euphemism for the death caused by extra-judicial killings.

(iii) Third Category: Returned Detainees

While our Mandate requires a consideration of the category of persons who were involuntarily removed but have not disappeared, constraints of the time available has led us to give priority to the inquiry into alleged instances of disappearances. We were further fortified in this decision by the fact that the main thrust of our Mandate is on the phenomenon of "Disappearance".

Numbers

We have received 191 petitions from persons alleging they have been involuntarily removed.

The Kind of Complaints

The nature of the complaint of the petitioners may be classified as follows:

1. Unlawful arrest and detention
2. Assault and injury
3. Humiliation, pain of mind psychological ill-effects

We find all these grounds of complaint to be covered by our Mandate. We recognise and accept that they have suffered.

Several of these persons came before us primarily in order to bear witness to the injustices and illegalities that were prevalent, and they constitute a powerful body of evidence to the practices at that time.

We Recommend--

That the Human Rights Commission should be requested to advise the government "in formulating legislation, administrative directives and procedures" for the protection of the fundamental rights of this category of petitioners. They have lost their right to petition the Supreme Court in respect of the breach of their fundamental rights to freedom from illegal detention and torture by reason of the constraints of the time limit placed by the constitution on the invocation of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in respect of an allegation of a breach of fundamental right.

CHAPTER FIVE

RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ALLEGED REMOVALS OR DISAPPEARANCES

Ciriminal Acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstance unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religions or any other nature that may be invoked to justify them ;[1]

Although the recognition of the fact that all crimes are to be condemned should never be lost, it is most important to emphasise the special character of the crimes committed by the state which uses its power to violate the law rather than to uphold it. [2]

Your Excellency has mandated this Comission to report on

"Whether there is any credible material indicative of the person or persons responsible for the alleged removals ordisappearances"[3]

1. The Material Available

This will be considered under:

(a) The material available with regard to individual perpetrators

(b) The material available with regard to the category of perpetrators

(c) The material indicative of the existence of a Political Dimension.

A. The Material Available with Regard to Individual Perpetrators

1. According to the available evidence the cases inquired into by us could be placed in three categories :

(i) Where there is credible material indicative of the person or persons responsible to warrant further investigations for the purposes of legal proceedings.

(ii) Where the material available is insuficient to warrant further investigation for legal proceedings

(iii) Where there is no material wahatsoever to identify the individual perpetrators.

[3] Paragraph (d) of the Mandate.

2. In respect of all these three catergories we do not have before us the evidence of the persons against whom there are allegations. Until further invetigations by the investigative authorities are held confidentiality must prevail, both in respect of the nature of the evidence available and inrespect of the identity of persons implicated by such evidence. Accordingly we are submitting to Your Excellency under separate cover the list of names of individuals in respect of whom there is credible material before this Commission.[1]

3. This list is sub–divided into three parts :

(i) The first section consists of names of persons who are implicated in three or more instances coming within our Mandate ;
(ii) The names of persons thus implicated on two occations ;
(iii) The names of persons who are implicated in respect of one incident

4. In view of the serious nature of the acts revealed by the evidence available to date, Your Commissioners recommend that the investigations by the IGP should be under the supervision of the Attorney General and be referred to the Attorney General for the determination of the appropriate legal proceedings that should ensue.

B. The Material Available with Regard to the Category of Perpetrator

In the 7239 cases where disappearance was proved the identification by the petitioners of the category of perpetrators responsible was as follows:[2]

- Agents of the State/para military groups in collaboration with them – 4858
- Subversive Groups – 779
- Personal enemies Acting in collaboration with agents of the state/ paramilitary etc – 59
- Unknown – 1543

[1] This list is not a part and parcel of the Report.See further Chapter on "The Legal Proceedings Regarding Responsibility".

[2] Except in the case of Tamils lost in Colombo, the subversive group denoted by witnesses before the Commission was always the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP). This was the case even when the group involved had identified itself as Desapremi Janatha Vyaparaya (DJV). For a consideration of the case of Tamils lost in Colombo See Chapter Eleven.

The category " Identity unknown" it will be noted, is the description given by the petitioners. It would not include " personal enemies", as personal enemies would be within their knowledge, and therefore idetified by them as such.

The method of operation favoured by the subversives was one of killing and publicly exhibiting the body. A prompt implementation of the requisite procedures of law by the police and courts by way of investigations and iquests took place in such instances. It can be safely said that the greater part of these 1543 incedents categorised as "unknown" which lacked both these characteristics, would not have been at subversive hands.

1. Identification by the petitioners of the category of perpetrators responsible we found to be based on the following factors :

* Factors Specific to the Corpus
  Such as his political affiliation, or that there had been an evasion of earlier searches for him ; [1]his refusal to identify himself with the polotical structure at village level ; [2]that he held public office/was a Government employee/a family member of a member of the Security Forces/had asserted his right to vote or contest at elections,[3]

* Factors Specific to a Perpetrator who had animosity towards the corpus
  Eg : A person who was a locally recruited Reserve Police Constable, MP's Security Guard etc. allied with the fact of the Security Forces' acceptance without independent investigation of an 'Information' laid by such person, invested that person with the power to 'use' the Security Forces for his own ends.

* Factors Specific to the times
  Eg: The corpus was taken in a combing–out operation by the Security Forces, or modern weapons and vehicles were used in the incidents of abduction, or killed for defying an "unofficial curfew".

  In all these instances the petitioners were clearly aware that what had happened went for beyond what could be attributed to a break–down of relations between the particular perpetrators and the victim. While seeking to identify the person who had been the immediate link in bringing the 'system' into operation against them, they would describe the prevalent situation graphically and in concrete terms.

2. The Pattern Of The Incident

* The patern of the incident was a general indicator of the agency involved. The subversive act was a destruction[4] of a person in as public a manner as possible. The corpse would be left identifiable bearing several ante–mortem injuries of a brutal nature and a placard be displayed, bearig a message such as " Death to Informers". There would usually be instructions that the body be buried without ceremony, and the marks of respect to the dead usual in our society.

The Technique of abduction and disappearance adopted by the Forces was of a different nature. While the abduction would be done very publicly, the re-emergence of the body if at all, would be in a multilated state that made its identification difficult. When these bodies were left in public places they were not accompanied by a claim as to who were the prepetrators[5]

[1]Either by the security forces of by the subversives.

[2]Either the po–Government political structure or the subversive.

[3]This last group of factors was usually associated with the perpetrators being subversives.

[4]Usually a killing

[5]Ironically, the very absence of a claim and the very attempt to prevent identification of the body, came to be an easily identifiable 'trademark' of the perpetrator

* The Payment of Compensation by the State for loss due to Subversive Act

It is now over 7 years since the occurrence of the incidents under review. In that period a distinguishing mark of the category of the perpetrators has come into existence by reason of the fact that until August 1994 the State paid compensation only in respect of loss suffered at the hands of one category of perpetrators i.e. the subversives[1]

* The Recording of Complaints by the Police

In the period under review another pointer to the category of perprtrators was the nature of complaints recorded by the police. If the act complained of (in the opinion of the police) had been committed by subversive elements the complaint had been recorded, B Reports filed and Post Mortems held. If the case was otherwise, in the majority of cases no complaint had been recorded at all. In instances when the complaint was recorded the police had either refused to record the name of the alleged perpetrator when taking down the complaint or had described it as "perpetrator unknown".

* Youth at Village-level who Displayed Leadership Quality[2]

There was a perception that the JVP had targeted outstanding youth who revealed leadership quality at village-level for recruitment. This led to the "elimination of outstanding youth" at the local community level.

Time and time again this theme came up in evidence before the Commission.

> My son was popular, the youth turned to him for advice.
> My brother was the only educated youth in our area; everyone came to him when a letter needed to be written.
> We are of the depressed caste, but my son was an outstanding sportsman and popular among the youth.

The Elimination of "potential groups" had become a permitted tactic of counter-subversion. The petitioners before us spoke of this from their personal experience.

[1] The classification of an incident to be a subversive act of otherwise was on the basis of a Police Report. But there were exceptions. Eg: there are instances where H.E. the President has ordered compensation to he paid although the act in question was not alleged to be a subversive act. But those are few in number, and not a real exception since those decisions were based on the fact that the petitioner had appealed to his personally at the then popular "Presidential Mobile Service"

[2] 'Kapee-penena Aya'

* "Broilers"

A practice of keeping in unrecorded detention "stocks" of detainees of a certain age-group, who had been taken into custody in combing-out operations or casually off the road/beach was evident in several instances from the evidence of returned detainees. These persons then disappeared without trace after being taken out of the camp generally following on a subversive act that had caused loss of life or damage to property or on the camp being dismantled. Given the parctice of 'reprisal killings'[1] a sinister significance attached to these disappearances from State custody. Hence the slang of the period :

"Broiler" = an article for consumption.

It is clear from the evidence before the Commission, that counter-insurgency tactics of 'physical elimination' often took the facile from of the socalled identification of "Groups of 5".[2] In fact the recurrence of the feature of abductions/disappearances occurring in "Groups of 5" was a revealing mark of the perpetrator like 'the mark of ash on the shoulder of the thief of the ash-pumpkin' in the popular village tale.[3]

The arrest of persons perceived to come within specially targeted groups for questioning, is possible under recognized procedures of law. That "abduction" rather than "arrest" was the preferred method of operation, is a clear indication that physical elimination of the persons taken-in was not ruled out. Given, additionally the unrecorded nature of the initial abduction and detention the temptation to adopt 'elimination' as a parctice was inevitable.

C. The Material Indicative of the Existence of a Political Dimension

1. The testimony of Individual Petitioners

The common features of the narration by thousands of humble petitioners in respect of thousands of abductions and disappearances, bore powerful witness to the fact that what we were looking at was an orchestrated phenomenon and not a series of isolated instances explicable in terms of "excesses" by individual transgressors.[4]

[1] A practice adopted by both the security forces and subversives in the period.

[2] On the basis of the principle of marxist organisation of "Cells" of five.

[3] "Puhul Hora Karen Deney." As the parents related to the Commission on an occasion when the commission had found five separate abductees had been taken, the initial denial by the suspect personnel was followed by the boast : "Don't forget not only are the goods ours we are also the judges." (Baduth ape naduth ape)

[4] This testimony gained touching authenticity from the silent testimonial of their conduct subsequent to the alleged removal or disappearance. An endless trek from local MP, Police Station to Army Camp, and the despatch of letters of entreaty to an astonishing range of persons believed to be in a position of authority and able to help, ranging from the President of the Republic, the Army Commander, the Inspector General of Police, to the Joint Operational Command, International Committee of the Red

The transactions spoken to by these witnesses are mainly 2 fold :

(i) Killing on the spot or following on shortly after forcible removal. In both instances the resulting dead body itself constituted a "Weapon", with its display constituting an intimidatory warning, this would happen to you too if you do not accede to our wishes."

Where the Killing was at subversive hands, a placard was often displayed at the spot, couching this message in so many words. These bodies often bore marks of brutal practices. Several autopsy reports lead in evidence bore witness to this. Autopsy reports on certain other bodies, almost invariably ascribed by witnesses to be killings by the Security Forces, bore evidence of the use of modern fire-arms, while some in this category were cut and chopped about in savage mimicry of subversive killings and alleged they were the work of this-or-that "vigilante" group in reprisal for subversive acts.

(ii) Disappearances following on abdutcions : These abductions were actually witnessed, or they were abduction inferred from surrounding circumstances within the knowledge of witnesses including "the climate of the times", which was so markedly hostile and mechanical of execution as to justify naming the resulting category of victims as "Age-Victims"[1]

The Clandestine nature of these transactions is very clear. The series of acts described are clearly done with knowledge that the conduct was altogether outside permitted boundaries of the law.

Killings on the spot, termed extra-judicial killings, constitutes the ultimate in "involuntary removal". Disappearance following an abduction is in our finding only a euphemism for a killing, a reality that the absence of recovery of the body should not be allowed to obscure.

2. The evidence of returned detainees

A valuable pointer to the fate that befell many of the abducted is to be found in the evidence of the many returned detainees who have come before the Commission whether as petitioners on their own behalf or as witnesses to the fate of others. They constitute a powerful credible body of evidence on:

(i) The serious, often fatal injuries suffered by the prevalent practices of torture by the authorities with the attendant issue of disposal of bodies.

(ii) The transporot of detainees to undisclosed destinations in circumstances loudly speaking to the clandestine nature of the journey–Removal of number plates/affixing of false number plates to the vehicles, use of fire arms, implements for digging old tyres taken along, on these journeys being inconsistent with the object of the journey being a lawful one.

(iii) In some instances "confession" to participation in such "extermination" under duress etc.

[1] See further Chapter Three: "A Statistical Profile"

3. Mutilated Bodies at Public Places

The evidence of members of the public was that mutilated bodies at public places was a common sight.

4. Mass Graves

Mass Graves came into existence Contemporaneously. The inference as to who were the creators is inescapable when the massive logistics entailed, not to mention their proximity to locations under state ontrol, are taken into consideration.[1]

5. The United Nations Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disppearances (WGEID)'s

The UN Working Group's compilation of a list of 12,000 separate cases of disappearances reported by voluntary organisations, and the ICRC's records.[2]

6. Habeas Corpus Applications filed in this period

These cases provide a record of the allegation of disappearance from state custody[3]

7. The Political Dimension

Acknoledgement of the political dimension inherent in the scene revealed by the evidence before this Commission, is a necessary response to the trust and confidence reposed in the Commission by the thousands of witnesses who spoke openly placing their hard-earned experience. and perceptions on record.

(i) The Public Perception.– The Public Perception was that the conspicuous spectacle of impunity[4] could not have existed without the complicity of the political leadership. The various allegations before us of the close participation of the local politicians in the exercise, the various allegations of 'informers' who functioned as the channel of mis-information from the politicians to the security Forces, the allegation of 'Lists' of names of political enemies being supplied to the Security Forces for elimination, are all based on this perception.

(ii) Confirmation by 2 Senior Officials.– This perception of the pertitioners has found confirmation in the evidence of two Senior officials of that time, one of the Police the other of the Army, who have given evidence under oath on the role played by politicians of the governing party in the counter-subversion exercise, the practice of the preparation of 'Lists' of names by them, and the issue by them of illegal orders, for execution by the Police and Army respectively.

Mr. E. E. B. Perera, Inspector General of Police, 01.08.1988 to 18.11.1993:

When the second insurrection-wave struck the Police Force was dependent on informers. Hence the phenomenon of Members of Parliament who were providing the political direction to the anti-subversive drive being supplied with

[1] See further on"The Phenomenon of Mass Graves"

[2] The WGEID by its mandate, considers only disappearances from detention by Govt. officials, or those acting with the support or permission of the Government.

[3] See further Chapter on "Habeas Corpus Applications"

[4] See Chapter Six 'Issue of Impunity'.

'Lists' of names by informers, who in turn passed them over to the Forces and the Police. In 1971, the Political authority at District level was required to give support to the Forces. By the second insurrection the Provincial Councils had come into operation. There was an administrative direction that the Deputy Inspector General (DIG) should be subjected to the control of the political authority usually the Chief Minister, notwithstanding the fact that Polic powers had not been devolved to the Provincial level under the 13th Amendment.

This confirms the practice of 'Lists', whose source was the local politician. It also clarifies the path by which the Security Forces came to be used in the narrow interests of particular politicians.

Further it makes clear that the police had to put into effect directions that were clearly outside the law.

Lt. General Rohan Daluwatta, Commander Sri Lanka Army, has stated

While I was co-ordinating Officer, Ratnapura certain political pressures were brought to bear on me. I was given a list of names with the direction to take them into custody, that theywere JVPers. I received the List from a former Minister.....When I checked the list with the Police, I came to know that they were SLFPers. I was told, that area could be cleared were I to catch them[1]

(iii) The use of the Forces and Police in the Narrow Interests of Politicians.– This was spoken of by two Inspectors-General of Police in their evidence before us.

Mr. L. G. D. Cyril Herath was IGP December 1985 to 31.07.88. Mr. Herath said:

In the promotion of Udugampola, SP over 15 more senior officers, to the rank of DIG, I saw the portents of the plan to use the Police Force in the narrow interests of politicians. It was clear to me that alternative structures of command were being put in place within the Police Force for the purpose. I realised that a system of promotions to this effect was being put into operation.

W. B. Rajaguru – IGP 29.07.95 to-date. Mr. Rajaguru, the present IGP stated:

I am a aware that there were specific instances where rapid promotions were given. One was that of Mr. Premadasa Udugampola who was an Inspector of Police in 1977 and had rapid journey through the ranks of A. S. P., S. P., Senior S. P., and became Deputy Inspector General by about 1988 (in 10 years time). At that time is was mentioned that this officer had moved over 180 other officers at different stages.

[1] Presidential Commission of Inquiry on certain matters relating to the Parliamentary General Election and Elections to Local Authorities of the Eastern Province and Vavuniya held in 1994. Proceedinge of 14.01.96 at 9.45 a.m." Procured in pursuance of this Comission's Powers under Section 7 Commissions of Inquiry Act No. 17/1948.

Among the rank and file there was a degree of disillusion and heart-burn, for there were persons who had become able to move upward quite freely within the police. This disillusion affected discipline.

A specific instance I will give is the Mulkirigala By- election.[1] At this time I found that contrary to specific orders made at Head Quarters there were certain police offivers moving about the electorate. At this time I was DIG Greater Colombo and Southern Range. I found that Mr. Udugampola, then SSP Gampaha had moved into Mulkirigala electorate on his own. He had brought with him several officers in charge from his division. There were no orders for him or other officers in charge to perform any duries within the electorate. Later, there were many complaints received about bands of police intimidating the public and committing acts of thuggery; and there was evidence that the police had beaten up voters to prevent them from going to vote.

My experience is not limited to the day of election. This feature I have described was continued police thuggery. The complaints came from Kirama, Weeraketiya, Walasmulla and Middeniya. It was organised and widespread.

We have also noted that former Inspector General of Police Mr. E. E. B. Perera in his evidence bofore the Presidential Commission of Inquiry into Disappearance of persons, unlawful Arrest of Persons and the Operation of Places of Detention at the Batalanda Housing Scheme" had stated that

There were several occasions when we had to put into effect directions that were clearly outside the law. Not just one occasion. It was undoubtedly due to the fact of undue interference by the Executive that Ronnie Gunasinghe was not taken into custody.[2]

Some instances of the political control of the structures follow.

(i) The Lakshman Perera Case: Lakshman Perera was a dramatist and poet and Pradeshiya Sabha MP of the Governing Party. Soon after posters appeared in and around Colombo advertising his satirical play termed "WHO IS HE? WHAT IS HE DOING?", he was abducted from his home and disappeared. His wife's identification of the abductors is as follows:

I do not see personal enmity to be the cause. This abduction is an indication of the hollow nature of the profession of democracy by the ruling party. We were at the police station very shortly after the abduction, but the police displayed utter indifference.

[2] Proceedings of 12.03.97. The last sentence is a reference to the Warrant of the Magistrate in the Richard de Zoysa murder inquest, to produce in court Ronnie Gunasinghe Senior Superintendent of Police.

(ii) The Richard de Soyza Case : The case of Richard de Soyza Journalist and Broadcaster (who was abducted on 18.02.1990. is another instance.[1])

(iii) The Adiruppu Street Case : A UNP organiser of a Colombo Central area was abducted by an armed gang who came in modern vehicles in the night. The incident, apparently, is a consequence of an intra-UNP leadership struggle. His wife giving evidence before the Commission said:

> There was no UNP high-up who didn't know my husband. And yet no one would move in the matter of his abduction and disappearance.

The disappearance from police custody of suspects regarding the assassination of a political leader during this period is a striking instance of the practice under consideration.

(iv) The Disappearance from Police Custody of Suspects Regarding the Assassination of a Political Leader: The Vijaya Kumaratunga Case

Vijaya Kumaratunge, Leader of the SLMP, was assassinated on 16.02.88. Lionel Ranasinghe and Tarzon Weerasinghe were taken into Police custody as the suspected assassin and accomplice respectively. The mother of Lionel Ranasinghe and the sister of Tarzon Weerasinghe, have stated to the Commission that these persons disappeared from Police custody while they were detained at the 4th floor of the CID Headquarters in Colombo. Tarzon Weerasighe's sister produced to the Commission a letter from the ICRC that an ICRC representative who visited this place of detention had been informed by a co-detainee that this person had disappeared while in the custody of the CID in March 1990.

This Commission was unable to summon the said witness as the ICRC informed the Commission that they are unable to disclose the co-detainee's identity to the Commission. The CID's position to the IRP had been one of the denial of detention of Tarzon Weerasinghe. The mother of Lionel Weerasinghe stated that she visited her son in the custody of the CID and the last time she visited him was 16.09.89. She was then informed that he was in remand custody. Both petitioners have had no further information about these persons' fate until they read newspaper accounts of the evidence trasnpiring at the Special Presidential Commission of Inquiry into the assassination of Vijaya Kumaratunga.

The finding of the Commission of Inquiry into the assassination of Vijaya Kumaratunga on the dissappearance of Lionel Ranasinghe from custody is as follows:–

> The preceding account clearly shows that the conduct of the police regarding the transfer of the suspect from the CID to Homagama, his interrogation for five days at Homagama, the ambush of the police party and the escape of the suspect, is laced with falsity at every turn. The evidence of the respective police officers stretches credulity to breaking point and more.[2]

[1] See p. 172 ante and Vol II. Special Report on the investigation into it.

[2] Sessional Paper No. 1/96; p. 49

That Commission's finding on the disappearance of Tarzon Weerasinghe from custody is as follows:–

The evidence is, that Tarzon Weerasinghe was not seen alive after his detention in the CID.[1]

It is in evidence before us that no disciplinary inquiry or action of any kind was taken against the errant police officers.

(v) The Masssacre on the Eve fo the Presidential Election 1988 at SLFP Chief Organiser"s Residence

NF was the SLFP Chief Organiser for Panadura at the Presidential Election of December 19, 1988. His residence was the centre for nominating polling agents and other campaign work. On December 18, 1988 he secured the release of some of his supporters who had been arrested by the police on the false pretence that they were JVP and returned home around 10.30 a.m. where several members of the party Youth League including the Branch Secretary and the treasure had assembled. Within minutes the residence was sprayed with bullets. Eight of his suppoters had been killed on the spot; another had succumbed to his injuries later. The police had arrived within minutes at his house and given him protection. On the previous morning, December 17, two persons clad in army uniform had called over at his house and inquired about the state of his security. After requesting for some posters of the SLFP Presidential candidate "to be put up when she wins" Thay had identified themselves as personnel attached to a temporary army camp at Wadduwe.

NF: Even after such and incident when so many people were killed in my own house the culprits have not been found. There were posters against me by the JVP. But I had no direct threats from them.

My House is situated two or three miles from the police station. But they arrived within a few minutes at my house. When I reflect on all these matters I think the Army was responsible for this incident and that the police also was aware of it.[2]

This incident is a clear indication of the political dimension of the use of the structure.

(vi) The Promotion of some Security and police officers found to be in breath of fundamental rights by the Supreme Courts:

When the Supreme Court in a 5-Judge Bench decision found a Viharadhipathi had been prevented from exercising his fundamantal rights to "Freedom of Speech and Expression including Publication" by a police officer, the state media announcing the decision that evening announced, also that the said police officer had been given a promotion. The incident that had violated the Viharadhipathi's fundamental rights was the seizure of posters objecting to the Referendum, at the time of the Referendum 1982.[1]

[1] Ibid pp. 52-53

[2] The case filed by the Police in the Magistrate's Court has been laid by as an "Accused Unknown" case.

The same juxtaposition is discernible in the circumstances of the failure to investigate, prosecute or hold disciplinary inquiry into instances where the courts has found a Forces or Police officer to have acted in breath of a fundamental right or to be responsible in a Habeas Corpus Application.

Three aspects of the evidence before the Commission requires special mention in this regard.

The case of Wijedasa Liyanarachchi[2]

At the conclusion of the trial-at-bar on the death of Liyanarachchi from 100 injuries suffered in police custody the court, accepting a plea by two of the accused police officers to the crime of wrongful confinement, passed the following strictures on Premadasa Udugampola DIG Southern Range, who had been a Witness at the trial:

The inescapable and irresistable inference deducible from the entirety of the proved facts in this case is that in actual fact no such applications for detention orders and detention orders were in existence on the third of September 1988, but that these documents were fabricated later with collusion between the first accused and witness Udugampola for the avowed object and authority on an otherwise illegal arrest, illegal detention and the illegal removel of a mutilated Liyanarachchi to Sapugaskanda so as to mislead and deceive the ultimate deciding authority as to when these injuries were in fact inflicted.

The court went on to state, as part of its judgement, as follows:

It is the fervant hope of this court that the Hon. The Attorney General the law enforcement Agencies and the executive will in the near future probe and investigate into the issue as to who caused this death, using the varied facts, matters and information disclosed in these court proceedings.

No steps, as directed by court, have been taken to this date. Nor does the service record of Udugampola show that any steps have been taken by way disciplinary inquiry or any other v. this officer departmentally. By the time the judgement was delivered in the Liyanarachchi case, 18.03.91 Udugampola was Head of the newly established Bureau of Special Operations, on presidential directive.

Case of Sunil of Obeysekerapura

The Case of Sunil of Obeysekerapura: Sunil"s abduction and disappearance occured in the context of the inner party rivalry that occured at the Colombo Municipal Council Elections 1991. Sunil, a strong UNPer and friend of one 'Malu Nihal' a leader of the local under world-gang, fell out with Malu Nihal as they supported the rival UNP candidates who contested the election. Sunil was abducted by police officers attached to the Bureau of Special Operations. His mother traced him to the office of the BSO.

The Bureau of Special Operations was a special unit of the police established according to its mandate to "fight narcotism" corruption, smuggling and terrorism", with operational jurisdiction island-wide, which was set up in January 1991 on Presidential direction with DIG Premadasu Udugampola as its Head.

There was no allegation that Sunil was engaged in "narcotics, corruption, smuggling or terrorism" when he was abducted by the B. S. O.

All dissent had come to be equated to "subversion".

The petitioners before the Commission perceived this clearly. They said:

My husband let the SLFP hold the General Election meetings in our compound when others wouldn't. They came in a jeep in the night time and abducted him, My complaint to the Inspector General of Police was referred for inquiry to the same officer. now, Asst. Supdt. of police of the area.

I know the murder of my 18 year old President's Scout son just after his return from an international Scout jamborec was by the Army, at the local politician's behest. The local Army Commandant who ordered, and the local politico who put him upto to it, are both equqlly guility.

When my 3 brothers, one of them the SLFP Branth President and all 3 quite outstanding, were abducted, it wasn"t to keep them alive. It was to stifle political discussion.

The then President of the Bar Association of Sri Lanka in his evidence to the Commission brought this out clearly from his analysis of the Lawyers who were abducted or were killed out-right during this period. Lawyers who filed Habeas Corpus applications, who worked with Christian Service Organations in the Free Trade Zone for the welfare of workers, Lawyers who appeared in Trade Union Matters, in legal aid work, met with the same fate.[1]

A large number of lawyers who were handling Habeas Corpus and fundamental rights matters were killed by unidentified gun men. C. L. was handling a large number of Habeas Corpus Cases in respect of persons who had been taken into custody and disappeared. Mr. N. N. of Gampaha had been involved in a number of Hebeas Corpus Cases, but at the date of his killing he was not involved in these, Mr. K. A. who was killed had been involved in a large number of cases in respect of University students who had been taken into custody and could not be traced, He was also active in the Sarvodaya Legal Aid Centre, Mr. S. K. at the time of his death was engaged as a Junior Counsel in a Magistrate Court Case in Theldeniya, where 7 Police Officers of Theldeniya Police were accused on killing a school boy in a demonstration. Prior to the murder of S. K. his clerk and another lawayer's clerk who were eye-witnesses to the shooting of the school boy, had been killed A delegation of the BASL met H. E. the President of Sri Lanka and requested that the Police and Army personnel should come to an agreement that BASL would be informed with 24 hours of a lawyer being taken into custody. H. E. The President agreed to this. The agreement with the three service Commanders was signed on 21.08.89. On several occasions lawyers were threatened and taken into custody and subsequently released at my intervention. Mr. G. K. who was practicing in Gampaha was not involved in Habeas Corpus matters, but he was involved in Trade Union Work for SEDEC, a Catholic welfare organisation in the Katunayake Free Trade Zone. Mr. B. of the Negombo Bar was helping in the work of the Movements for Inter-Racial Justice and equality (MIRJE) a general feature of the abductions of lawyers was the fact that they were carried out by persons in civils coming in un-marked vehicles. This would be followed by my telephoning the Secretary/Defence who would say: I will ring some People and ring you back; thereafter he would phone to say: Your man is safe.

8. An attitude of considering only one's own human rights as 'Rights' had come into existence

The Secretary Movement for Development and Democratic Rights (MDDR) an umbrella organisation of voluntary organisations who work in the field of political, civil socio-economic and cultural rights, stated in evidence :

> At the time terrorism came to be used as a political tool in the North, the state's view was that it could be brought under control by slaughter. The resultant State Terrorism could have only restricted operation in the North. But within the Police and Army and even the Govt. the prevalent view was that killing was an essential tool, and machinery to this purpuse, to be put to use at any time whatsoever, was set up by the state. This machinery was set up in a frame-work that couldn't be challenged via the courts. The only legal weapon available against abduction and killings was the writ of Habeas Corpus. If the inquests and investigations requisits under ordinary law operated, the law would not have been reduced to this state of helplessness. Emergency Regulation 55 permitted a burial without on inquest. EF55's "message" to the Security Forces was that a human body was no more than that of a dog or other animal. All this took place in the context of an attitude of considering only your own Human Roghts as "Rights". This was reflected among lawyers also. On one occasion our orgnisation proposed that as a principle we should oppose all Murder, by whomsoever. Those who opposed this took up the position that what was necessary was condemnation of killings by state forces and not killings by others. When we showed that this was not only incorrect in principle but was in itself a threat to Human Rights, there were threats to our lives. And as they were in a position to carry them out, these were not idle threats either.[1]

See Further post.

9. The Minister of State for Defence on the Government's Policies

Finally it is the responsibility of this Commission to place on record the words in Parliament of the Minister of Defence.

A. On 25.01.90 speaking in Parliament in the debate to extend the Emergency, the Minister stated as follows :

> I know that there are abuses black sheep in the Police Department and the Forces, but by and large the Services and the Police are highly disciplined and they have done a good job for all of us – not only for us, but for all of us. I am concerned about the abuses and I am personally following up the action that is being taken against the culprits. I have asked for a list of name of persons in the Army, the Navy, the Air Force and the Police who have been acused of murder, extortion, rape, robbery and connivance with the JVP. I will follow up action until they are punished and put in their places. No. matter who they are, no influence will be tolerated.
> We are in the process of cleaning up the local Maffia. That is why we want the Emergency Extended for a little more time to finish up all this also. You cannot do these things under the normal law. It takes a lot of time. By the time my good friends who are lawyers take time to slove these things the match will be over (Interruption). We have finished the first eleven and the second eleven. Now we are tackling the under fourteen fellows.[2]

1. There is no record of follow-up action against any person in any Army, Navy Etc. in respect of the series of acts that constitute a disapperance.

2. "We have finished the first eleven and the second eleven. Now we are tackling the under 14 fellows" is seen to have an almost literal meaning. Not a single leader of the JVP was brought to trial after the arrest of thirteen out of fourteen Members of the Polit Bureau in the period November-December 1989. Nane of them are alive.

3. The incidents attributable to the State Forces continued after December '89.

[1] The subversive killings reported to this Commission are a prime example of the attitude of considering as "Rights" only one's own human rights.

Presumable these were the second elevan and under fourteens referred to by the Hon. Minister ?[1]

B. In the debate on the extension of the Emergency April 1990, the Leader of the Opposition raised the question :

> The Hon. Minister for Defence always keeps saying the match is over and normalcy is restored, what is the necessity for this Emergency ?
> The Minister for Defence said :
> In regard to the continuation of the Emergency, we have still a few criminals and murderers masquerading. Yesterday we caught a youth aged 19 yrs who confessed to me about 70 murders. There are 9 others in that gang. We after these criminals who have got used to murdering. They must be rid from society and the police are doing that.[2]

> Just 6 weeks later this "most wanted Youth" was alleged to have "escaped from custody".[3]

After notice issued from this Court an affidavit has been filed by V.T.S. Chief Inspector setting out the circumstances with regard to the arrest of; the said persons. According to the affidavit, on 28.12.89. the said two persons and two others were being taken by a party of Police officers to be detained at the detention camp at the Race Course, Colombo. On the way at a place called Koskandawila Junction the four suspects escaped from the custody of the Police officers while the officers were engaged in changing a flat tyre of the vehicle in which they were travelling.

These bodies have thereafter been disposed of under the Emergency Regulations.

I direct the learned Chief Magistrate of Colombo to hold an inquiry without delay, into the matters contained inthepetition and the affidavits filed in these two applications. In particular the learned Magistrate will inquire into the following matters.

10. Subversive Acts

"We hid from everyone" Subversive killings in the period 01.01.88. to 31.12.94 as reported to this Commission is 779.

The overall impact of these acts, as revealed by the evidence, leads th commission to the conclusion that these 779 cases are 779 instance o "Punishment for Dissent."

(i) By 1, January 1988, the second Southern Insurrection was well under way The stated objective of the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (JVP) was t establish a marxist State including the overthrow by force of th Government in office, However, from the evidence before this Commissio we conclude that the impact of the JVP's activities was that of stiflin opposition to it.

(ii) The number of subversive killings in the period 01.01.88. as reported to th Commission is 779.

(iii) The evidence before this Commission reveals the objectives behind these actions included

A. crippling the administration;
B. control of community;
C. punishment;
D. elimination of competition.

A. Crippling of the Administration

Among the activities of the JVP were:

(a) the killing or the disappearance of –
  (i) Grama Sevakas, Co-operative employees and other public servants including government teachers; and
  (ii) elected representatives of the people from local government to parliamentarians and

(b) arson to state owned or controlled property.

It was clear that this was the JVP's method of bringing the administrative activities in the area under the scrutiny of the Commission to a stand still.

B. Control of a Community

During the period under scrutiny, the JVP called for a ban on radios and the government controlled media and insisted on informal curfews, work stoppages and the extinguishing of lamps and electric lights in the night thus heightening the sense of isolation in a community. The reaction of the JVP to non compliance to its demands by the community reanged from arson to private property to the killing or disappearance of persons.

Amongst the persons thus killed or disappeared were youth who had refused to join the ranks of the movement. Some other victims were persons who had refused to provide support in the form of food, shelter or information, which was expected to be available on call from the community. The JVP also engaged in socalled "Cleaning up" operations, establishing their own form of investigation and punishment of crimes. The investigations of the Commission revealed the maintenance of a torture camp in the Ratnapura district by the JVP.

The activities of the JVP were conducted, very often, with maximum publicity including the public humiliation of suspects of crimes the display of mutilated bodies of victims and a public branding of activities oposed by them and the persons engaged in such activities. The effect of the public nature of these acts was the control of the community concerned.

C. Punishment

The JVP asserted "a right to punish" persons who did not comply with their directives or requests or dissented from the ideology and practice of the JVP. The punishment took the form of arson to private property, assault of persons and killings or disappearances and torture. The victims included not only the direct violator of the JVP's directives but also members of their families and their friends.

Amongst the victims of the Victims of the JVP were police officers, members of the armed forces[1] and their families who were targeted as the hurdle to the transformation of the JVP from local based groups to "the ultimate repositorty of the state power".

Another group who were victimised by the JVP were persons aligned with the ruling United National Party.

Persons who exercised their right to stand for elections and the right to vote, were punished and even killed.

Almost a third of the incidents reported to the Commission took place in the five month period in the run up to the Presidential and Parliamentary elections in 1988 and 1989, which the JVP was opposed to, highlighting this attitude.

Time Period	Aug '88	Sept '88	Oct '88	Nov '88	Dec '88	Jan '89	Feb '89	Total	Mar '89

Security Froces	13	9	22	49	130	52	47	322	52

D. Elimination of Competition

Many of the incidents reported to the Commission are only explicable in terms of the elimination of competition. The victims of the JVP included local based politicians belonging to opposition parties and in particular to the other Marxist-based parties.

Community activists including bhikkus and trade unionists who were not aligned with them and people who had left the JVP at some point or the other but continued to be held in public regard. Any possible threat to the overall control of the community by the JVP was immediately dealt with.

IMPACT OF THESE ACTIVITIES

The impact of the activities of the JVP is discussed in length in Chapter Twelve. For the purpose of the issue of responsibility, the Commission wishes to stress the following:

(i) the persons who were revealed to have felt the impact of these actions were amongst the most disempowered of the Community.

(ii) communities were isolated into pockets from the mainstream of activity in the country and deprived of the community services which were usually available to them (public transport, schooling, medical attention)

(iii) the JVP conducted a campaign to eliminate space for dissent.

[1] The JVP had made request of all members of the armed forces and the police to resign/abandon their posts.

SOME CASES ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE SPECTRUM OF SUBVERSIVE KILLINGS

Case of PPD of Pattiyawala

PPD was a Grama Sevaka. On a night in March, 1988 he had been abducted from home by subversives. His charred body had been discovered two days following the incident of abduction. In this case the witness (Mother of PPD) revealed that two of her grandsons also had been killed on the same day. The JVP had threatened the three sons of another Grama Sevaka to resign from their posts around the same time.

Case of DLS of Nagoda

DLS was an LSSP activist. By the year 1988 he had counted 25 years in politics at Village Committee (Pradeshiya Sabha) level. In April 1988 he had left home to hand over his nomination papers for the Provincial Council elections. On the same night while taking a wash at the well close to his house JVP activists had come and shot him. A few months later DLS died in hospital. Prior to the incident DLS had been under constant threats from the JVP. An year later the elder son of DLS was also killed by the JVP.

Case of PAD and PAL of Makandura

PAD and PAL (two brothers) were active supporters of a well known political personality 'X' in the Communist Party. (Presently a Provincial Council Minister). On a night in May, 1988 they had been abducted by subversives. Within a matter of ten minutes the inmates of the house of PAD and PAL had heard gun shots. The inmates later recovered the dead bodies. PAD had also been a Branch Secretary of the Communist Party. The families of PAD and PAL had been earlier threatened by subversives for working on their paddy fields, during an unofficial curfew. PAD and PAL had been jointly providing for six families who had now been left destitute as a result of their demise. Later another relative of PSD and PAL who had been a UNP supporter had been killed by the subversives.

Case of HPG of Sevanagala

HPG was a USA candidate at the 1988 Provincial Council elections. He had not been successful at the polls. Shortly thereafter a group of armed subversives had broken into HPG's house. The other inmates ofthe house had been shuffled into a room and HPG had been forcibly removed. Within a few moments the inmates had heard gun shots. HPG had been found dead in a pool of blood.

Case of HGK of Ambalantota

HGK was a UNP activist and a father of two minor childeren. His wife was in the fifth months of pregnancy. On a night in October, 1988 an unidentified crowed of persons had abducted HGK from his house. His body was later found hanging from a transfomer. His head had been severed. There was a poster near the body which read "Death to the traitors". On the day of the funeral HGK's family had received threatening letters with the warning Do not carry the coffin above knee-level.

Case of ES and EP of Mawarala

ES and EP (son and father) had been burnt inside their house on an evening in January, 1989, Earlier seven armed persons (three were named by the wife of EP) had come to the house, forced the five daughters and the witness to leave the house and tied them to trees a little away from the house. The family had watched helplessly as they saw the house was set on fire with ES and EP inside. In or about 1985 the JVP had endeavoured to recruit two other sons of NMS to their Cadres without success. Those two sons had disappeared in 1985.

Case of KAA and DMD of Panadura

KAA was a candidate of the UNP at the 1988 Provincial Council elections. He had been subjected to threats by the JVP. On a day in February, 1989 both KAA and his wife were killed by subversives. Subversive activities in this area concerned had reached high proportions around this time. Two months after this incident, his sister DMD, a member of the Municipal Council was also killed.

Case of BM of Embilipitiya

BM's brother-in-law 'X' was a member of the armed forces. BM's was a cultivator family in Gangeyaya, Embilipitiya. The family had been under constant threats from JVP who had demanded the resignation of 'X' from the army. In the middle of the night on a day in February 1989 BM's family had heard several gunshots in the vicinity of their house. BM was not in the house at the time. Later the members of BM's family discovered that BM along with six others had been killed. Thereafter the army had for a period of six months provided the members of BM's family with protection from subversives.

Case of HWD of Baddegama

HWD a support of the United National Party and an active participant in Youth Affairs in the village. Prior to the 1989 General Elections the JVP had threatened to kill those who would attempt to go to the polls. On a night in April, 1989 when he had been visiting his uncle subversives had abducted HWD from his uncle's Later he had been found killed about quarter of a mile from his uncle's abode. His hands and legs had been tied, teeth broken and several stab injuries found all over his body. HWD's uncles also had been killed on the same day.

Case of DP of Suriyawewa

DP was a father of four childern. He was a cultivator and worked openly for the SLFP at the 1989 General Election defying JVP threats. One night in February subversives had broken into his house. He had been blindfolded and abducted. His wife who was in the fifth month of her pregnancy and the other inmates had been warned not to leave the house. DP was found dead the following morning near his house. His body was riddled with bullets.

11. Conclusion

• The information and material placed before us impel the observation that the State with allied agencies as well as subersives were responsible for the removals and disappearances that prevailed during the period under investigation. Those families whose members fell victim to the subversive terror as well as families devastated by the counter subversive measures adopted by the State and its agencies will probably continue Vindictam Spirantes. Both these groups however cannot overlook the misery that had befallen the surviving members of all victimised families. In the address of these needs lies the means to bring about a national reconciliation.

• In this regard the perception of the members of the public who do not fall into either category would be important in that this perception would be the yardstick to measure community concern in a crisis situation.

• National reconciliation necessarily pre-supposes the existence of conditions for commanding public confidence in the existing structures. A failure to hold democratic elections when due, promotion of handpicked police officers particularly when they are found to have transgressed the law by the highest court, and attempting to stifle political leaders of the opposition did not help towards that cause.

It is unreasonable to expect that the further evidence required for the identification to pin individual liability in the "vertical structures" would be available to the petitioners before us. Only persons who were within the system itself either decision-makers, participants, or as witnesses to same could provide such evidence. The political dimension of the events in respect of which responsibility is sought to be identified is very clear, however from the few witnesses with personal knowledge of the times who came before the Commission. We have analysed their evidence in the foregoing paragraphs.

> The South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission and some Latin American ones have provisions enabling the admission of participation, and consequent amnesty, to witnesses who come before the Commission.[1]

Finally on the issue of "Responsibility", a distinction needs to be drawn at all times in the identification of "those responsible" where the State is under the control of a civil government, as in our case, from the situation where the state is in the control of a military regime. Whatever may be said in support of an identification and punishment of a few military leaders in the situation where the state is in the control of military regime such a limited exercise can never suffice or be condoned in the situation of a state which is under the control of a civil government.

CHAPTER SIX

ISSUE OF IMPUNITY

The Issue of Impunity

No circumstance what so ever whether a threat of war, a state of war, internal political instability or any other public emergency, may be invoked to justify enforced disappearances.[1]

To the extent that a society or government dismisses the principle of accountability as unnecessary, it under-mines its possibility of becoming a true democracy, in which citizens can feel confident that their rights are firmly protected.[2]

1. The Spectacle of Impunity

- The climate of impunity was so tangible as far as the witnesses before this Commission were concerned that many of them did not even trouble to list its features. This Commission discovered that the features ranged from the most spectacular and sensational to the most mundane disregard for the Rule of Law. These features included the sight of scavenging dogs feeding on mutilated bodies left in piles on the road-side.

- the sight of 'tyre-pyres' with bodies set alight on them, (and still more gruesome wearing 'necklace' of a burning tyre leading to the reflection was it a corpse of a living person who had been so garlanded)

- the sight of vehicles moving around with no numberplates of obviously false ones, without check by traffic polic of soldiers manning the many road blocks.

- the experience - one's own or of a neighbour friend of relation - of the violent entry into one's home at any time of the day or night of heavily armed men who forcibly abducted the males - most particularly the youth taking them in as public a manner as possible, never to return.

- the knowledge, common to all, that the attempts of the relatives to inform the police would be unsuccessful; that the complaint if recorded at all would be of a disappearance only, leaving out all the material particulars disclosed by the complainant.

- the knowledge that not one jot of attention would be paid in official quarters despite the regular newspaper reports that showed opposition M. P.s raising the matter of disappearances in Parliament, tabling the lists of the disappeared.

– the knowledge, worst of all, shared by the whole community, that there would be no official acknowledgement, not noe perpetrator punished, even though these were not the acts of a foreign invader.

This was the picture conjured up again and again in the evidence of petitioners before the Commission from all quarters of the South, West and Sabaragamuwa Provinces, though the rates of incidence varied from place to place. From the honogeneous nature of the evidence before us, Your Commissioners are confident that this will be the picture revealed before all the three Commissions appointed by Your Excellency.

From The Table of Incidents proved to the Commission, The claim of impunity on the part of everyone concerned including the subversives, is very clear.

2. State Terrorism as an Instrument of counter–Subversion

The use of illegal acts as "weapons of war":

The prevention of offenses such as rape, arson to dwelling house, are yard-sticks of the respect for law and order in a society. Such acts as well as brutal acts of murder in addition to disappearance follwing abduction, went unrecorded and unpunished. It is as if these illegal acts were weapons of war designed to subjugate the people, not to reinforce the law-abiding qualities in them.

The Main Casualty was Civil Society

3. Structure of Impunity

3.1 The Denial of Recourse to Ordinary Procedures of Law:

Persons who sought the protection of law encountered a complete denial to them of recourse to the ordinary procedures of law enforcement ie. reporting to the police, the reports being followed up by an investigation by the police, a contemporaneous police record of the incident of disappearance and statements of witnesses, and police reports of courts with the attendant safeguards for witnesses, including the complainant, and assistance in obtaining relevant further evidence including forensic evidence.

I went to the police 76 times, but we were driven away like doges.–Father

I summoned soldiers of the army-camp when an armed gang who came in trucks seized one of my graduate teachers during school hours, but the soldiers stood by on seeing the abductors and did nothing.–School Principal are some of the incidents related to the Commission.

3.2 Distorted/Non Existent Investigations:

The Distortion of the Investigations to conceal more than to reveal, and mechanically labelling as 'subversive act' without investigation, were some of the practices of avoidance used in the rare instances where the authorities could not refrain from semblance of an investigation.

The case of Richar de Soyza

R, a Journalist, filed reports critical of the government's record on human rights to I.P.S., an international news agency. In February '90[1] R's abduction from his home by an armed gang who came in vehicles in the night was reported both to the local police and the Senior Superintendent of the area simultaneous with the incident, and recorded as a disappearance. R's corpse was discovered floating in the sea the next day, with gun-shot injuries through the neck. This series of incidents received wide publicity nationally and internationally. At the inquest the Magistrate ordered the arrest of a senior police officer indentified by R's mother to be one of the abductors of her son. The order was not carried out. The reports of investigation filed by police in court instead referred to an anonymous letter received by the police containing a general allegation of a connection of the deceased to an incident of murder of a film stars girl-friend which was currently a popular sensation. On the day R's mother was due to give evidence on oath and be available for cross-examination by the several lawyers for the defence, the representative of the Attorney General stated that he would not be calling her as witness as her evidence was 'irrelevant'. The Magistrate accordingly terminated the proceedings. Files at the Attorney-General's Department shows that the AG in August directed the Inspector-General of Police to 'hold further investigations'. There is no record of further investigations by the police/further directions by the AG[1]

The case of Sarath Sepala Ratnayake

S, a Human Rights lawyer and SLFP candidate at the forth coming General Election who was killed at his home in January" 89 along with his retainers and his body hung up on a tree by persons who were picked up by a vehicle after the event. This vehicle had travelled without challenge and record by the security forces on a road where the infrequent vehicle travelling at night would invariably have been checked by them at the many road blocks along the way.[2]

The case of the Hokandara Mass Grave

When there was ground to suspect an act to be that of the security forces, police officers now holding senior rank failed to report their personal knowledge of such acts although Police Regulations required the records of an investigation and report to superiors of such facts. This aspect was very clear from the evidence before the commission in respect of the incident of the "Hokandara Mass Grave" where a bomb crater on a public highway was transformed into an open grave containing several charred corpses.[3]

3.3 The absence of prosecution despite clear chain of evidence :

No investigation and prosecution occurred even of cases where a clear chain of evidence exists up to date.

"Dambarella Incident" 18 youths of Hambantota District disappeared after abduction and detention at Sevena Army Camp in Ratanapura district. The following facts are clearly established by eyewitnesses. Hundreds have witnessed the round up of the men of the village to the village school. Detainees at the school

[1] See special Report on "the investigation in the Richard de Zoysa case"?

[2] "I am happy to have the opportunity of giving evidence before this Commission. Until today there has been no inquiry or police investigation. Four the people died in my house that day. I told the police I could identified one of the abductors of my son if an identification parade was held. They said: are you a lawyer? The perpetrators could have been found if an identification parade had been held. There were eye-witnesses who should have been questioned. The villager who warned me on the previous day that Green Tigers had come to the area could have been questioned," S"s mother.

[3] See Special Report on "The investigation of the Hokandara Mass Grave".

since released have seen and identified the missing 18 persons at the school. Relations and half the village watched as these 18 persons were loaded into trucks and the whole convoy of vehicles bearing the soldiers went away. Several relations of the abductees have followed on moter cycles, tractors and public transport and have witnessed the vehicles enter Sevana Army Camp[1].

Mawarala Incident : Several youths of the Mawarala police area who were in detention at the Diddenipotha Army Camp were permitted visits by their relations. Relations took food to the detainess, spoke with them while they were in detention, and took the detainees used cloths to be laundered. On 27.6.89 on hearing the soldiers were striking the camp the relations went there. They saw 22 youths including their children being loaded into a private vehicle. The Army Commandant told them that he has handed over their children to Mawarala police and that they would be released by the police on the following day. The parents saw the vehicle containing their children leave accompanied by the HQI and other officers of Mawarala police travelling in the police vehicle. That is the last they saw of their children. 13 Habeas Corpus Applications have been filed in respect of youths who disappeared in this incident, naming as respondents the Army Captain, the HQI and others. The Army officers position in court is that he handed over the youths to the HQI on the day in question[2]. The HQIs position is one of complete denial. He says he and his officers visited the camp to make their fare-wells to the Army personnel who were leaving that day, they stayed to lunch and left in the afternoon. He denies he took charge of the detainees on that day or any other. He denies that the incidents of handing over described by the petitioners took place. The evidence recorded by the Commission supports the petitioners. It transpires from that evidence more-over, that the youths were dropped off later that day at a rubber plantation adjoining Mawarala Police Station on the directions of the HQI. No official investigation or prosecution has taken place to date.

The Dickwella Incident : 35 persons were taken into police custody in a combing-out operation on the eve of the visit to the area of the governing partys Presidential candidate at the 1988 Presidential Election. Their subsequent detention at the local police station was witnessed by several persons. 13 of these persons disappeared thereafter. The disappearance of these persons has been the subject of judicial inquiry in 3 Habeas Corpus Applications in which the Court of Appeal has made exemplary awards on finding the allegation established. The evidence before this Commission established this recital of events and identification of perpetrators in respect of all 13 cases of disappearance from state custody.

The three examples cited are not isolated departures-from-practice or "excesses". They exemplify a generalised practice, which in its turn warrants the reasonable inference that this practice denotes a generalised direction NOT to investigate such incident.

[1] The camps registers contain no record of the arrest of these persons and the local police have recorded ralations" complaints as disappearances merely. No official investigation, prosecution or disciplinary inquiry has taken place.

[2] He is unable however to produce any records of detention and release.

3.4 Unauthorised Places of Detention :

Ample evidence of the practice of detention at places of detention other that th official ones was forthcoming in the evidence before us. These places of detentio were often maintained in close proximity, and even within, the periphera boundaries of the official army-camp or police station.

This Commission has no reason whatever to doubt the veracity of any witness o his statement that a particular place of detention existed. Most of the places o detention were the subject of general knowledge in the area concerned.

The case of the Disappeared Embilipitiya School Boys

In this case the Commission had no difficulty in discounting the position take up by the Army that Sevana Army camp was not a long-term detention camp, i the light of the evidence to the contrary of a considerable number of residents o the area.[1]

Some records were maintained at these camps. In the case of the missin Embilipitiya School Boys the Food Register maintained at the Sevana camp provided valuable information confirming that several alleged eyewitnesses were in fact in detention in the relevant period.

The case of the "non existent" Kumbalgamuwa Army Camp

It was proved to the Commission that a person released from Kumbalgamuwa Army Camp on the condition of weekly signing the register at the camp, disappeared after entering the army camp on a weekly visit. Army Head Quarters' response to the Commission's direction to furnish the name of the Officer-in-Command of the Camp in the relevant period was: "There is no record of a Kumbalgamuwa Army Camp".

These are a few of the many examples proved before the Commission.

A list of the places of detention revealed by withnesses to the Commission is annexed as Annexure D.

3.5 The Failure to Record Detention :

The practice of keeping prisoners in detention without recording the fact was amply proved before the Commission. Besides, the credible oral evidence of families and returned detainees, letters sent by the International Committee of the Red Cross to the family of a detainee sighted during their visits to places of detention proved a valuable source of evidence of Unauthorised detention.[2]

[1] See Special Report on Embilipitiya School Boys.

[2] The practice of the ICRC is to obtain the signature of the detainee to the letter sent to the family informing his whereabouts. A copy of an ICRC letter is annexed.

We came across several instances of ICRC "Sighting" of persons in unauthorised detention at authorised detention camps. This is a sad pointer to all levels of the security forces including the Police dispensing with the rules and regulations which are an intergral part of their training; all in the name of counter-subversion.

The Case of the Release of the Jeep but Disappearance of the Driver

S, a staunch SLFPer and driver of the Jeep of H. L., an opposition Member of Parliament, was abducted and taken to the local Army Camp along with the Jeep. The Jeep was at the army camp when the M. P. went there next morning and was released to him. The Army's position in the Habeas Corpus Application filed by S's wife in respect of his disappearance from custody is that he escaped from custody. There is no record of detention or contemporaneous entry re: the alleged escape from detention.

3.6 The Frequent Transfer of Detainees :

The existence of a practice of frequent transfer of detainees over several places of detention without the maintenance of adequate records was clear from the evidence of the Commission. Some examples are:

Repeated Transfers Within the District : After A's abduction from home and denial of detention by the local police and army, his brother a police officer saw him at Kamburupitiya Army Camp, but he disappeared thereafter. The Army Commander's report to the Commission: "Shot while escaping from Hettiyawala Army Camp".

Transfer Out of District : B's abduction from his home at Waskaduwa (Western Province – Kalutara District) which took place before his family, was denied by the local army and police. The family received an ICRC intimation of sighting B. in detention at the police station Ratnapura. (Sabaragamuwa Province). He has disappeared since.

The Case of Suneth B : B, a resident of Bandarawela was abducted in Colombo, held in detention at Matara Police Station, produced before the Magistrate and released, but brought back to the police station. He disappeared thereafter.[1]

3.7 The Official Position in Situations When Detention cannot be Denied :

There were situations when the fact that a person was in detention could not be denied e. g. the ICRC had sighted him "in unacknowledged custody" ; or the detention was on official record.

[1] The Court of Appeal in Habeas Corpus Application No : 89/91 has directed the HQI Matara police and the Sub-Inspetor in charge of the Counter-Subversive Unit Matara Police to pay compensation to B's father in respect of his disappearance. The Magistrate's findings in this case was

"Their evidence as a whole reveals what the respondents wanted was a judicial record of release of (S.B.) that after his release at 4.10 p. m. he was taken back to the police station, and thereafter disappeared."

The official position taken up thereafter was –

- Eacaped From custody :
- Killed in an exchange of fire with subversives.
- Released from custody :

Some examples follow

"Escaped from Custody"

- K's family traced him at Gampaha Police Head Quarters after they received an ICRC Information that he had been sighted there. They visited him on several occasions there, but on the last visit were informed he had been taken for further questions to another place which was not divulged to them. They learnt from the ICRC that the ICRC had been informed that he had "Escaped from Custody".

- J was brought from Embilipitiya police and detained at Dickwella police on Police Detention Order. The family visited him there on several occasions and the OIC gave no explanation for his absence thereafter. Police Head Quarters informed them thereafter that he had "Escaped from Custody" when he was taken out on further investigation. The police station records show that T56, S84 and sub machine guns had been taken out by the Police Party on that occasion.

- C was surrendered to the local police by a lawyer. He was visited in detention for over 3 1/2 months thereafter. The Police books have a record that he escaped from custody.

- The case of Sharon : A spectacular instance of alleged "escaped from custody" s, 19 years was abducted on 24. 4.90. from his work place in Colombo. S's detention in police custody was referred to by the Deputy Minister of Defence in Parliament on 26.4.90 during the debate to extend the Emergency.

  In regard to the continuation of the Emergency we have still a few criminals and murderers masquerading. Yesterday we caught a youth aged 19 years who confessed to me about 70 murders. There are 9 others in that gang. We are after these criminals who have got used to murder. They must be rid from this society, and the police are doing that[1]

  Police records show S was held in custody at the Crime Detection Bureau, Colombo on detention order until 16.6.90. On 16.6.90 he is alleged to have escaped from custody when taken out to point out an armory.

"Killed in an exchage of fire with subversives."

- S and C : were abducted on 12.11.88. The police did not acknowledge custody. Finally in January 1990 one parent saw them in detention at the local police station, but they disappeared after 21.1.90. The Member of

[1] Hansard Vol 64 Part 6 Column 805 Proceedings of 26.04.89.

Parliament (Opposition party) inquired about them from Secretary Deffence in June 1990. No information was divulged to him. In April 1993 the SP of the area informed one parent that these persons.

Were taken out from the police station on 30.1.90. to show an armory. they were killed in attack on the police party by subversives. Their bodies were disposed under emergency regulations.

P a 21 year old electrician was abducted from his work place by a armed gang in civilian attire who took him away in a jeep. The local police denied custody and would not record the family's complaint. P was traced in police custody but disappeared aftrer 31.12.89. The family contacted the ICRC. The ICRC has been informed by the police that P died from injuries received in cross - fire between police and subversives in a subversive attack on the police party when he was taken out on 30.1. 90. to show an armory.

" Released from Custody "

Several cases of the continued disappearance of persons alleged to heve been released from custody have been proved to this Commission.

138 instances of abduction/disappearance soon after release have been proved to this Commission.

The pattern common to these incidents of abduction following release is as follows:-

The detainee is released from custody usually towards night-fall to a relative who then signs in acknowledgement. Not long after they leave the place of detention the detenu is abducted again, this time by armed men who take him away in an unmarked vehicle. The stories are full of pathos.

- Mother and recently released son were standing at a road-side "Kiosk" having a cup of tea in celebration of his release, when an unmarked vehicle picks him up, as if a hawk had swooped for him - Mother

- Wife and newly released husband are at the bus stop in order to return to home and children; an unmarked vehicle came and he is abducted once more, never to be seen again.

- A man released from detention on the condition that he signs the register at the Army Camp once a week came to the Army camp as stipulated accompanied by his wife. He enters the camp and does not return. The authorities deny to her 'the evidence of her own eyes', the police in turn refuses to record her recital of the incidents.

A Variation on this practice was revealed by the several instances of such involuntary disappearances despite records of release by court. Some instances are:

(i) The disappearance of 5 of 7 persons whom the court record states were released by court, in circumstances leading to the clear inference that they are involuntary disappearances.– (MC Matara 10073)

(ii) Police and Army professed ignorance of the whereabouts following abductions of corpus. The Joint Operations Command (JOC) had no record of him. Subsequently the family received a communication from the ICRC that the corpus had been sighted at Eliyakanda Army Camp. Again they lost track of him; there were overtures to them for a bribe thereafter; then they traced the court record that stated corpus was one of eight persons released. The circumstances surrounding his disappearance are however strongly indicative of its involuntary nature.– (MC Matara 10018)

(iii) A 15 year old participant in school demonstrations was released to the family on 2 occasions after he was taken into detention by the Army :

(a) to sit for a public exam

(b) to observe Sil on Vesak day.

Documents certifying to such release and subsequent return of the corpus to detetion were produced to the Commission. He disappeared however after a change-in-command at the place of detention. The family has traced a court record of his release, but he remains disappeared to date. – (MC Matara 10059)

(iv) There is a court record of the release of corpus from detention at Boossa detention camp, but he has disappeared. The certificate of the Officer in Charge of the local Police Station states :
"not among the living" - (MC Galle 10469)

(v) While the court record states four persons including corpus was released by court after being produced by the police, the evidence before the Commission reveals that corpus was taken back to the Police Station concerned, and 'disappeared' that night in circumstances that reveal the use of the courts in order to transform a recorded detention (corpus originally was under a Police Detention Order) into an unrecorded detention followed by disappearance. (MC Weligama 9986)

(vi) The ICRC has been informed that the three corpora whom the ICRC had sighted in detention were released subsequently by court. Their continued disappearance however is in curcumstances strongly indicative that the production before the Magistrate was staged in order to create a record of release to off-set the ICRC's sighting in State custody. (MC Hambantota 353/90)

3.8 The continuation of the practice of abduction / disappearance alongside the efforts of the All-Party Conference 1990 to Institute a Practice of Surrender/ Rehabilitation/Release

On 14.02.90 the All-Party Conference was informed that the Government would set up an Independent Surrender Committee following a decision of the All-Party Conference and in implementation of a recommendation of the Presidential Commission on Youth Unrest. The Committee was set up and functioned from 20.04.90 to 20.08.90.the Number of people who have surrendered to the District Surrender Committees which were headed by the area Government Agent is reported to be 1871. Of these, the numbers surrendering in the three Provinces of this Commission's Mandate is 1106.[1]

The Total number of disappearances proved to this Commission for the period 01.01.90 to 31.12.90 is 1878.

This figure is comprised of :

	At Subversive Hands	Other than Subversive
01.01.90 to 31.03.90	27	941
01.04.90 to 31.08.90	21	617
01.09.90 to 31.12.90	10	262
Total	58	1820

Total : 58 + 1820 = 1878

There were several instances in which those who were released after due inquiry, made a serious effort to return to the holding centres alleging that they were being sought out by unknown groups whom they suspected to be either from the police, security forces or their former colleagues of the movement.

Report of the Independent Surrender Committee[2]

4. The provision by statute of protection from liability the Indemnity (Amendment) Act. 1988 :

The Indemnity (Amendment) Act provides –

No action or other legal proceeding whatsoever whether Civil or Criminal shall be instituted.....in respect of anything done during the period 1st August 1977 to 17th December 1988.....by a Minister, Deputy Minister or person ..... employed in the service of Government of Sri Lanka in any capacity, whether Naval, Military, Air Force, Police or Civil, or by any person acting.....under the authority" of any of them.

[2] At p. 54

There was much opposition in the country to the proposed Indemnity. The Bar Association of Sri Lanka characterised it as "Making Criminal Acts lawful". "Don't make laws to suit some individuals, this only encourages acts of personal revenge. It is we who will suffer" says a Local Government councillor introducing a condemnatory resolution at the council.

The Government's position was that the indemnity was designed solely to establish in the armed forces a sense of justice and equal treatment in view of the amnesty granted to Tamil political prisoners subsequent to the Indo-Lanka Accord 1987. While the terms of the amnesty granted to Tamil political prisoners was to Detainees as at 29th July 1987,[1] the Indemnity Act indemnified from liability in respect of acts from 1st August 1977 to 17th December 1988.

The Presidential Elections was due to be held on 18th December 1988. The Government's objective of protecting from liability Ministers and others by the enactment of legislation before the Presidential Election took place in December 1988 was achieved.

5. The failure to Move v. Persons/Institutions already Identified in other Legal Proceeding.

Some striking examples follow :

The Liyanarachchi Case :[2]

A strong recommendation in 1991 from the Court of 3 High Court Judges who heard the Liyanarachchi case that further investigations and prosecution of a DIG named by them should ensue, had no effect. No such investigation or prosecution has ensued to date.

C. A. Gunawardene Attorney at Law on behalf of K. K. K. A. Randunu and A. S. Ratnayake v. C. N. Whatmore, Officer in Charge of Ganemulla Police et al. S. C. v. Application 136/87 and 164/87.

The Supreme Court directed the state in 1990 to "inquire into and take appropriate action by way of criminal proceedings and for disciplinary action against the person responsible, namely police officers, In this case the Ganemulla police admitted arrest and alleged it was on reasonable suspicion. They showed that they had produced the two suspects before the Magistrate within the permissible period under emergency regulations.

[1] Indo-Lanka Accord signed 29.07.87. Para 2 : 11
The President of Sri Lanka will grant a general amnesty to political and other prisoners now held in custody and other Emergency laws, and to combatants, as well as to those persons accused, charged and/or convicted under these laws.

[2] HC Colombo case No: 3718/88 See Special Report in Volume II

The Supreme Court, after examining the police information book which did not contain a contemporaneous entry of arrest and the pocket note book of the arresting officer, held that the police

> Did not receive information as to the involvement of the two petitioners in vehicle robbery and JVP activities, the failure to produced documentary evidence from the police station concern establish that the OIC had no more that a vague suspicion in regard to vehicle robberies, and did not have credible information or reasonable ground for suspicion that they were concerned in an offense.

The court accordingly held that the arrest was unlawful.

On the allegation of torture the court stated as follows:

> There is overwhelming evidence of the cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment meted out, they were kept blind folded for long periods and hand-cuffed with their hands behind their back. If suspects are detained for long periods in places which are neither sufficiently secure nor designed for such purposes, instead of more suitable places provided under the law, a special duty lie upon the authorities to ensure that necessary precautions to prevent escape are reasonable and human and not cruel and inhuman. They were subjected to frequent and severe assault, and relations were often prevented from giving them food. Those who saw them during this period state that they could hardly stand; their hands were so heavy and painful that when one hand-cuff was removed for meals, that hand could not be raised to the mouth, which had to be lowered to the plate so that food could be pushed inside.

The Supreme Court further found that despite numerous complaints of cruelty and torture the police took no action to have the suspects physically examined. The court indicated it considered this omission to be significant since such a step could have effectively negatived for accusation of torture.

The Supreme Court found that the torture was for the purpose of extracting information. The court stated further "the ill-treatment meted out to the detenus was for the purpose of extracting information: It was harsh and prolonged in nature".

Awarding the detenus compensation v. the state, Supreme Court directed as follows:– "the state, through the IGP or other appropriate officer, to inquire and take appropriate action (by way of criminal proceedings and disciplinary action against the persons responsible) in respect of the treatment meted out to the Detainees".

No steps have been taken to carry out the directions delivered in July 1990. The Court's findings with regard to the kind of conduct which constitutes torture and in human treatment, and the impermissibility of such treatment for the purpose of extracting information should have been the basis of training of the police and security forces on what was not permissible for the purposes of counter-subversion.

– Porage Lakshman v. Rohan Fernando, HQI Homagama Police Station S.C. application 24/90

The Supreme Court found the police to be responsible while directing the state to pay Rs. 400,000/- compensation to the petitioner in a Fundamental Rights Application.

The series of events around this order is as follows:– The petitioner filed a breach of Fundamental Rights Application in the courts alleging torture and inhuman treatment by the HQI Homagama Police station while he was held in custody at the police station in 1989. On a date of inquiry in to the application, the petitioner stated to court that he wish to withdraw that application; but the Supreme Court, on learning that he had been brought to court in the custody of the respondent Police, gave him a further date to come to a decision on whether he wished to do so. On that further date however the petitioner was absent, and the evidence of his wife was that he had been abducted in a police vehicle. The alleged disappearance was referred for inquiry by the then Presidential Commission of Inquiry into the Involuntary Removal of Persons. That Commission reported to the Supreme Court that "there was credible evidence that the pertitioner had been involuntarily removed on 15.02.1991 in a police vehicle". The Supreme Court's award of compensation was in respect of the breach of a citizen's right to petition the Supreme Court where he feels his fundamental rights under the Constitution had been abused by executive or administrative action.

No disciplinary inquiry, further investigation or prosecution has taken place todate. The officer concerned has since been promoted to the rank of Assistant Superintendent of Police.

– Gonsalwasan Thilakasena v. Brigadier Karunathilake Co-ordination officer, Kegalle et. al. HCA 67/92.

In this case the President Court of Appeal in 1995 made an award of Rs. 100,000/- damages against an army officer in a Habeas Corpus Application case. IGP was ordered by the court to direct further investigation if there was evidence of the Commission of Cognizable offense. The compensation has been paid to court. The officer concerned continued to be in service and has received promotion. Evidence of further acts of disappearance by this officer subsequent to the award in this case has been proved before this Commission.

These are only a few examples of the failure to prosecute despite the availability of evidence.

Disappearance in custody has been proved to the satisfaction of the Court of Appeal in some Habeas Corpus Applications, while the Chief Magistrate colombo has made findings of responsibility for disappearances in several other cases referred to him for inquiry by the Court of Appeal and now awaiting final consideration by the Court of Appeal. A list of these cases is annexed to this report with the strong recommendation that the IGP and the attorney General be directed to take requisite steps for further investigations, prosecution and disciplinary action against the perpetrators.

In the few cases where evidence regarding removals of persons existed and those responsible were revealed, not only was there failure to take further action (prosecution, disciplinary actions) but some of then even received promotions and medals.

> We appealed to the Gods to punish the perpetrators. Now we appeal to the Government we created to do so. .

> The objective of the tremendous pains relatives take in respect of the disappeared is to punish the perpetrators, not compensation.

> Many senior Police and Army officers continued holding positions of power and authority in areas where there were many well documented instances of their participation in bringing about disappearances. This meant the people continued to live in a climate of fear. This is an issue of great concern even today.

CHAPTER SEVEN

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS REGARDING RESPONSIBILITY

Our terms of reference require us to inquire into and report on "the legal proceedings that can be taken against the persons" held to be responsible for the involuntary removals or disappearances during the period under investigation"

(vide: paragraph (e) of the warrant)

1. The Alleged Perpetrators

(i) The persons whose names appear in lists sent under separate cover are those who were named as perpetrators by the witnesses and where we found the information and material upon which the allegations of the witnesses was found to be prima facie credible. As a rule we took into consideration the surrounding circumstances such as antecedent threats or warnings received by the corpus and/or his family, searches of the place of residence of the corpus or his office or place of work; nature of interrogation preceding the involuntary removal; political, social and other involvements of the corpus etc; Apart from the fact that as a general rule we looked for evidence of a corroborative nature, a factor which weighed with us was eye witness accounts of named perpetrators whether they belonged to state agencies, state agencies acting in collaboration with para-military groups, individuals or combinations of any two or more of the aforesaid groups and alleged subversives.

(ii) Where the witnesses were able to identify only the particular police station or security services camp to a sufficient degree where the allegation was against state agencies or state agencies acting in collaboration with para-military groups we have named the said police stations and camps.

(iii) Consequently, we have left out from the said lists names of alleged perpetrators where we found the evidence to be based on hearsay not supported by other evidence (whether circumstantial or otherwise) or surmise and where after probing we found the political and personal motives sought to be imputed could not be substantiated.

(iv) The reasons for and the objective in sending the said lists under separate cover we have addressed in Chapter Two (ante) of this Report.

02. We are fully conscious and mindful of the feelings and concerns of the complainants who came before us Vindictam Spirantes in a committed and emotional quest crying for justice to bring to book those whom they believed had been responsible for the extra-judicial treatment meted out to their loved ones, an opportunity that had been denied to them for several years. Accordingly we recommend that the following measures be taken towards the realisation of that objective.

2. Proposed Legal Proceedings

1. The Conduct of Police Investigations

We recommend that investigations be carried out (with a view to instituting penal proceedings) through a special unit of the Police under the direct supervision of an officer not below the rank of Deputy Inspector General in respect of the persons named in the lists sent herewith (under separate confidential cover). Several years have passed since the alleged occurences Members of affected families have waited patiently all that while. Given the number of incedents that may have to be investigated the proposed special unit must be assigned only this task until its completion.

Liability of Individual Perpetrators

II. Criminal Liability

This section will discuss certain aspects relevant to the ascertainment of the legal liability of a person once the Attorney-General has filed charges based on the final outcome of the police investigations considered in I above.

(i) The present Penal Code is the same law that was prevailing at the time of the relevant incident. The offences on which criminal liability could ensue are analysed in the Chapter on 'The Indictment' in the Special Report on the Disappearances of Embilipitiya School Boys[1]. The Emergency Regulations it has been judicially observed several times by the Supreme Court, did not displace the criminal law consisting of the Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure Act.[2] The Emergency Regulations set up distinctive procedures which have to be proved to have been adhered to in order to constitute conformity with the constitutional requirement of 'conformity with procedure established by law[3]. It is upto a particular respondent to prove conformity with the required procedures.

(ii) Trials.– In accordance with the over-riding need to restore respect for law and a culture of human rights we recommend that there should be no change in the present law and practice that the forum for the decision on criminal liability should always be the courts of law (Not Special tribunals).

Evidentiary requirements of the general law must apply. [4]If detention is established however, a shift in the presumptive burden in the light of an absence of explanation from the person charged, should prevail.

(iii) Principles of procedural fairness which include the principle of 'audi alteram partem' and the right to legal representation should always be applicable.

[2] See Chapter Ten "Emergency Regulations"
[3] Constitution of Sri Lanka Art 13.
[4] Including the presuumption of innocence.

(iv) The Prosecutor.– This Commission recommends that an office of an independent human rights prosecutor[1] be created under the Constitution. This should be an independent institution similar to the Commissioner of Elections and the Auditor General, with funds provided by Parliament.

(v) Access to State records.– In 1994, Your Excellency by Presidential Directives at the Commission's request, required all officers in charge of Police Stations to preserve the Books of the Police Stations maintained in the relevant period. This Commission recommends that these Books should be handed over to the office of the Independent Human Rights Prosecutor. In the initial period of our inquiries we have come across regarettable instances of scarce heed being paid to Your Excellency's direction. The situation however showed a marked improvement within an year which we take to be a welcome sign that the requisite changes and enforcement of discipline at the intra-departmental level had commenced in the Police. We have found both Police Books and Medical Records to be valuable sources of information.

(vi) Non-availability of A Defence of 'Due Obedience'.– We recommend that no defence of due obedience is to be entertained. As stated earlier all the offences constituted by the acts in question were already well established offences under the law.

The Indemnity Act. No. 60/88 is and ex-post facto legislation. At the time of the commission of the acts in issue all persons concerened were well aware that they were acting outside the law.[2]

It is anticipated by this Commission that the provisions of the Emergency Regulations which operated at the time of any particular incident would protect a participant in any one of the series of acts leading to the disappearance, other than the ultimate act. We do not recommend any change in respect of this. The compass of the Emergency Regulations may well provide a convenient means of separating minnows from the sharks. The reaffirmation of the principle of accountability in respect of liability for past acts is required for the good of society in the future, but a spectacle of minnows being singled out for prosecution while the sharks go free would be counter-productive in this respect.

(vii) An amnesty to witnesses including perpetrators who confess to their own participation in human rights violations and give full evidence of the accompanying circumstances.– We recommend that the Human Rights Commission be directed by Your Excellency to set up machinery by way of a Special Committee of eminent persons to entertain and record evidence of and to recommend an amnesty to witnesses from within the structures who within a stated period confess to their own participation in the violation of the Human Rights at issue and give full evidence in respect of the whole incident including orders received, planning for, etc. The Provisions of the South African Truth Commission may be considered a model.

[1] See further : Chapter 8 : "the need to create an office of independent prosecutor"

[2] The Indemnity Act requires to be removed from our statute books.

[1]We consider that this would quite properly be considered to come within the Human Rights Commission's duty to advise etc. The Reports of all three Commissions should be made available to the Human rights Commission and to the Special Committee set up for this purpose.

(viii) The position of alleged individual perpetrators while they are under investigation.– Such persons should be transferred out of the area of alleged incidents under investigation. Interdiction however should not take place, until a disciplinary inquiry or a criminal prosecution is instituted.

However, if any alleged attempt – * to interfere with witnesses

* threats to lawyers
* Threats to petitioners and witnesses
* obstruct investigations are reported, they should not only be the subject of a further inquiry followed by further punishment, but such complaints should be a ground for interdiction as being evidence of unchanged attitude and conduct.

(ix) Punishment after Conviction of Individual Perpetrators

(a) Imprisonment

(b) Promotions/Advancements
  (i) The loss of promotions, and
  (ii) Further prospects of promotions/advancements.

(c) Liability to restore to the complainant an unjust enrichment. The allegation of unjust enrichment should be the subject of consideration at the trial, so as to obviate the need for a multiplicity of action.[2]

(d) The award of compensation should be a part of the punishment, never a substitute.

(x) Chain-of Command Responsibility.– The concept of chain-of-command responsibility has already been identified and its implications worked out in the Habeas Corpus jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal[3]

[1]The work of inquiry of the three Commissions set up by Your Excellency in 1994 has pre-occupied us to date. We have not had and opportunity to consult between ourselves. For example on fundamental questions of individual liability there may well be differences in the position taken up by the three Commissions.

(i) Whether individual liability should attach only to State offenders?
(ii) Whether individual liability should attach to State offenders and private individuals?
(iii) Whether individual liability should attach to private individuals who plead 'political action'?

[2]The requisite amendments to the procedural law, should form part of the "legislative package" which is the subject of consideration/recommendation post.

[3]See 'Habeas Corpus Applications' in Chapter Ten.

We recommend that the issue of the accountability of the chain-of-command structures should be referred to the Supreme Court under the constitutional provisions enabling Your Excellency to seek the opinion of the Supreme Court where

> It appears to the President of the Republic that a question of law or fact has arisen or is likely to arise which is of such nature and of such public importance that it is expedient to obtain[1] the opinion of the Supreme Court.

A full bench of the Supreme Court should constitute the division for this matter. It is very important that very clear directions are available for the future, defining the accountability of the chain-of-command structures.

III. Institution of Habeas Corpus Applications Against Named Perpetrators[2]

(i) The conduct of further investigations as contemplated in the preceding paragraph, possibility of instituting criminal prosecutions consequent thereto, ensuing trials followed by appeals will naturally involve long delays. An application in the nature of a writ of Habeas Corpus on the other hand would not involve and require further investigations as in the case of proposed penal proceedings.

(ii) The aspect of delay would not be held as a discertionary bar to a Habeas Corpus Application in the same way as in an application for a prerogative writ or a revision application. The reasons abducted by witnesses for their inaction are

(a) The fear of intimidation and/or reprisal from the persons alleged to be responsible for the acts in question. Most of the alleged perpetrators were/ are still in service (police or armed services) or in the village (alleged subversives, political suspects or personal enemies). During the relevant period according to complaints it was inconceivable how anyone could have taken any action against those named perpetrators.

(b) The prevalent climate made access to legal advice and assistance a practical impossibility.

(c) Even if access could be had to legal advice and assistance there were financial constraints and sheer illiteracy.

(d) The expectation that, with the creation of the Presidential Commission, the Commission would be able to afford the relief that had eluded them for so long.

These reasons reveal the nature of the problems faced by most of the complainants who came before us.

Recommendations

An establishment of a Legal Advisory/Assistance Bureau to entertain, process and institute Habeas Corpus Applications in the case arising for consideration during the period January, 1988 and November 1994. Adequate publicity in regard to the establishment of the aforesaid bureau.

(iii) Having regard to the Rules framed by the Supreme Court in terms of Article 136 of the Constitution particularly Rule 3(1) of the Court of Appeal (Appellate Procedure) Rules 1990, we feel the imperative need for the establishment of an adequate legal services system to respond to the problem of the aggrieved persons who were victims of a particular period and climate. It is the nature of this climate and the phenomenon emerging there from that would be required to be explained in response to Rule 3(1) referred to above. An institutional involvement with State patronage on the lines suggested above that a realistic and positive objective could be realised as an answer or explanation to the problem of the times under consideration.

IV. Civil proceedings Against Perpetrators Against Whom There Are Judicial Findings

1. Where the petitioners had been able to successfully overcome the problems highlighted in paragraph II above, in some cases the compensation ordered against the responsible respondents remains unpaid to date. We also see the absence of legal machinery to give effect to and enforce such orders made by court. We have addressed this issue further in a separeate Chapter headed "Habeas Corpus Applications".

2. We recommend that:

(i) Where there are judicial findings against perpetrators coupled with a judicial order directing the perpetrator to pay compensation on the basis of personal liability as opposed to state liability such amount (if not paid within a stipulated statutory period) be made recoverable against the person against whom such and order has been made in separate proceedings. This provision may be made applicable in the case of Habeas Corpus Applications (subject to final determination in appeal) as well as in fundamental rights violations cases.

(ii) Immediate legislation be enacted to give effect to the aforementioned proposal.

(iii) That the aforesaid proposal be extended in future to all cases where awards of compensation are made personally against a respondent in Habeas Corpus and fundamental rights violation applications.

(iv) That, the liability of a delinquent respondent in a Habeas Corpus or fundamental rights violation application where personal liability has been imposed as the award of the basis for compensation be extended to his estate.[1]

[1]See further, Chapter dealing with Habeas Corpus Applications.

V. Delictual (Tortious) Proceedings Against Perpetrators

1. The following recommendations will depend on the result of penal proceedings which in turn will depend on the outcome of further investigations envisaged in paragraph I above.

(i) In the event of any person (whose conduct has been the subject of investigation during the period under consideration) being found guilty by a criminal court of involuntarily removing or disappearing another we recommend that the disappeared person's dependents be given the right to institute civil proceedings for the recovery of damages.

(ii) In as much as we are mindful of the provisions of Section 9 of the Prescription Ordinance[1] we recommend that legislative provision be enacted making the order of the criminal court the basis for the recovery of such damages and the period of prescription to run only from the date of such order made by the criminal court.

VI. Institution of Applications for Fundamental Rights Violations

(1) As the Constitution presently stands a dependent of an "involuntarily removed and disappeared" corpus may not be entitled to invoke the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under the Fundamental Rights Chapter.

(2) Consequently, we feel the need for amendments in regard to the provisions of Article 17 and 126 of the Constitution with a view to enlarging the scope of locus standi in fundamental rights applications as contained presently in Rule 44(7) of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990[2]

(3) Recommendations :

(i) That an ad hoc committee be appointed by Your Excellency to study and make recommendations to Your Excellency's Government in the light of the Judgement of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights[3] on 10th September, 1993 in Aloeboetoe etc. v. Suriname.[4]

(ii) Specially in the case of the returned detainees we recommend that, they be permitted to make applications in terms Article 11 and/or Article 13 of the Constitution through the legal advisory (assistance) services bureau proposed above. Although we observe that the time limits contemplated in Article 126(2) of the Constitution have been interpreted liberally by the supreme Court[5] a special response to cater for the problem of the returned detainess in question may be needed by way of a Constitutional amendment to enable them overcome the problem of delay.

4. A Legislative Package.– In conclusion we recommend that a legislative package be provided incorporating the aforesaid recommendations and the recommendations with regard to relief measures contained in Chapter Nine of this report. It is our view that, this should serve as an acknowledgment on the part of Your Excellency's Government of the trauma experienced by a large number of our society be they ordinary citizens, members of families of armed services or police, members of families of suspected subversives or members of families of politicians.

CHAPTER EIGHT
PREVENTIVE MEASURES

Your Excellency has mandated this Commission under Section (f) to report on

"The measures necessary to prevent the occurrence of such alleged activities in the future"

I. Introduction

The objectives of the recommendations set out below are :

* The restoration of mutual confidence amongst citizens inter-se, and between citizens and the State

* The strengthening of the underpinnings of a just and democratic society we are mindful that our recommendations should have relevance and be meaningful to citizens living in all parts of Sri Lanka. Priority must be given at all times to the avoidance of situations of disappearances arising. The security forces and the police are necessary adjuncts of a state. They are required for the protection of the state and the protection of the citizens of the state. The average citizen looks to them for protection. The tragedy of Sri Lanka lies in the distortion of relationships between the citizens and the security forces including the police, which has resulted from the acts of both politicians and subversives.

II. Provisions Relating to Arrest, Detention and Transfer

The following recommendations shall be applicable to All arrests, detention and transfers, irrespective of whether they take place under the usual provisions of law or the extraordinary provisions under the Emergency Regulations and the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

1. The Duty to Record Arrests, Detentions, and Transfers.– All arrests, detention and transfers must be recorded, simultaneous with the event.

2. The Duty to Inform.– The nearest police station should be informed forthwith.

There shall be a concommitant duty on each police station to maintain a register of such notifications. The information to be recorded at the Police station must contain the following particulars :

(i) Name of informant and other particulars of Rank, Regiment, Army camp/ Police station.

(ii) Time and date when the information was received.

(iii) Full particualrs of the transaction informed i.e. place, time, purpose, etc.

(iv) Name and address of relatives, as supplied by the detainees.

Information to District Secretary : Additionally, there shall be a duty cast on officers in charge of the police station or the Army camp which was the arresting authority to submit to the District Secretary weekly a list of persons arrested, detained or transferred with particulars including such person's permanent address. There shall be a concommitant duty on the District Secretary to maintain a register of such information received which will be available to relations, lawyers or other persons/organisations with a legitimate interest in such information.

3. The duty to produce before the Magistrate within 24 hours.– The requirement that all persons taken into custody be produced before the Magistrate within 24 hours, wich was a long-standing salutary feature of our law, was rendered inoperative in respect of the many persons in detention under Emergency Regulations and the Prevention of Terrorism Act, with many adverse consequences, some of which have been examined by the Supreme Court in the exercise of its fundamenatl rights jurisdiction. The 24 hour rule shoule be re-ubtroduced without delay.

The Magistrate must be informed of any change in the place of custody, transfer out of the Magistrate's jurisdiction, and release.

The Magistrate's Court shall maintain a written record of such productions, which will be available at the Magistrates Courts.

4. The duty to issueA Receipt of theArrest.– The arresting officer must give at the time of arrest to a family member or friend of the person arrested a Receipt of Arrest. this receipt must contain the name of person arrested, date, place, officer arresting, with rank, place of intended detention, A copy of this Receipt of Arrest is to be given in writting to the detainee himself.

5. Detention

(i) All detention must be at authorised places of detention.

(ii) All places of detention must maintain registers of detainees, irrespective of whether the place of detention is "Permanent"/"Temporary"; whether it is maintained by Security Forces/by the Police. Particularsof Detainees held at temporary camps must also be entered in the Registers of the main Army Camp/Police station to which the officers concerned belong.

(iii) All officers-in-charge of places of detention must send to the Pradesheeya Sabha Secretary weekly, lists of persons in detention, to be entered in a Register of Detention to be maintained by him.

6. Visits by Magistrate of places of detention.– The Magistrate is required to visit all places of detention once a month. A record of the Magistrate's monthly visit and comments, if any, and of any special visit made by the Magistrate pursuant to his Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction[1] must be maintained at the place of detention as a Record available for persusal by lawyers, Court, and persons/ organisation with legitimate interest in the information.

[1] See Chapter Ten "Habeas Corpus Applications".

7. Conditions of Detention.– The Prison Rules shall apply, including the right to communicate with the detainee's family.

8. Release.– Release from detention must be.

(i) Through Courts or

(ii) To the families.

When release is to the family, a family member must sign the record of release. The Magistrate's Court and the Pradesheeya Sabha Secretary must be informed, including particulars of the person to whom the detainee was released.

III. The effect of a failure to abide by Rules regarding Arrest/Detention/Transfer

1. A failure to abide by the above regulations shall make the officer concerned subject to a Disciplinary Inquiry which shall be conducted by an inquiring officer from outside the service to which alleged defaulter belongs.

2. The failure to abide by these regulations shall be entered in the officer's service record if proved.

3. A Criminal Prosecution.– The failure or refusal to record arrests, detentions and transfers by the police and the security forces and to record complaints of abductions by the police if followed by an involuntary disappearance shall be declared a cognisable offense by Act of Parliament. A criminal prosecution shall take place.

4. A Right of Private Plaint.– The failure to record arrests, detentions and transfers coupled with the refusal to record complaints or involuntary removals or disappearances as it happened in the period under review lie at the root of the phenomenon under consideration by us. It is a frontal attack at this root that requires attention. With this objective in mind we recommend that the failure or refusal to perform the acts envisaged above per se be declared to be acts entailing penal consequences. Further, We are of the view that, in the event of the Police failing to institute proceedings against those personnel contemplated above whether at the intervention of the first complainant or any other person or institution having locus standi to do so[1] the first complainant or any other person or institution having locus standi to do so (as recommended by us) must be given the right to file a private plaint. The recognition of an appropriate agency as contemplated above as having locus standi to institute proceedings may serve to translate into practical terms the concept of the community concern in respect of the failure on the part of state agencies on whom public trust has been reposed.

IV. The Enlargement of the Jurisdiction of the Magistrate's Court Fora in Habeas Corpus Applications

The Writ of Habeas Corpus is a main plank in the prevention of disappearance from custody. First and foremost is the requirement of speed of response: The opportunity to invoke this jurisdiction no sooner a situation of unacknowledged custody arises, is the first requisite. The following recommendations are designed with the objectives of enabling a disappeared person's family to move with promptitude in a case of suspected disappearance.

(i) Enlargement of the Magistrate Court Jurisdiction in HCA matters.– Your Commissioners recommend the enlargement of the jurisdiction of the Magistrates Court to empower the Magistrate to receive the affidavits of the petitioner and his witness register the complaint

To entertain the petitioner's application that the Magistrate visits the place of alleged/unacknowledged detention[1].
Forward to the High Court the affidavit and the note of visit etc.

The existing jurisdiction to record evidence once a matter is referred to the Magistrate Court by the High Court, will continue.

The High Court shall continue to exercise jurisdiction in respect of the declaration of responsibility and compensation as at present.

(ii) A Special Division of the Magistrate's Court, Colombo.– It is advisable that a special Division of the Magistrate's Court Colombo should be established in order to deal with the more than 330 Habeas Corpus Applications to the Court of Appeal since 1988 which still await attention. It is important that notices should go out anew to the petitioners from the Court of Appeal in respect of their applications.

2. Executive Control of the Police and Security forces.– It has been brought to the notice of this Commission that an award of compensation against an official found responsible in a Habeas Corpus Case does not get reflected in his service record. Your Commissioners find this to be a very unsatisfactory situation. We accordingly recommend that Your Excellency as Commander in Chief of the Security Forces makes a direction that henceforth a finding of responsibility in respect of a disappearance by way of a judicial award in a Habeas Corpus Application shall be entered in the service record of the officer concerned, and consequently be taken into account with regard to promotions, increments, and other features of advancement in service. We consider this to be a necessary measure in order to emphasise to superior officers the need to control, and ultimately create a culture of accountability in, the security forces.

Your Excellency will doubtless ensure that these requirements are made applicable in the case of the police as well.

[1]. See further Chapter Ten, Section on Habeas Corpus Applications

3. Penal Measures on Evidence of a Lack of Public Accountability.– Criminal prosecution must also follow when there is evidence that "disappearance" is a euphemism for "death". The indictment filed in The Case of the Disappeared Embilipitiya School Boys[1] is an indication of the grave charges that can be framed under the criminal law.

V. Chain-of-Command Responsibility

Officials with Chain-of-Command responsibility who order or tolerate "disappearances" by those under their command should incur criminal liability.[2]

The Court of Appeal has already made award against officials with chain-of-command responsibility who had been found responsible in Habeas Corpus Applications.[3]

VI. The need to dismantle "Alternative Structures of Command" and the prevention of their coming into existence

The elimination of alternative structure of command within the Police force and Grama Sevaka system is a prerequisite for prevention.

Senior Police officers have described to this Commission how an alternative structure came into being in the Police of officers junior in rank and rapidly promoted through political patronage who were used by politicians for their own ends. Enormous amounts had been paid illegally as "rewards" in contravention of the provisions of the Police Ordinance; and officers against whom the Supreme Court has made order for the payment of compensation for breach of fundamental rights had been further "rewarded" by these amounts being paid by the state, accompanied by a total absence of the recovery of these amounts from the person concerned. In this context we recommend;

(i) The institution of disciplinary action against miscreants, including legal action, in the near future.

(ii) The identification of rules as regards the requisite qualifications for police officers and Grama Sevakas by a committe set up for that purpose, accompanied by the promulgation of a rule that future promotions of all officers will be decided on the basis of the possesion of the requisite qualification plus his record of past performance, with new recruitment to be strictly on the basis of the requisite qualifications.

[3] See Chapter Ten section on Habeas Corpus Applications.

(iii) A traning programme in investigations is urgently required for all police officers. The long years of recruitment and training of recruits as assistance to the military in border villages has resulted in a police force sadly deficient in the requisite skills in invistigation. Further, there was the sad spectacle of arbitrariness and an over-dependence on unreliable "informers" in the counter-subversive exercises in the south. It is essential that the reminder goes out to all levels of Police Force that they are valuable and indispensable only if they re-dedicated themselves to the proper police functions of investigations, public relations and the maintenance of law and order.

VII.A system of a Police Lay-Visitor' Panel for each Police Area

It is necessary to reestablish the community-based forces and procedures to which the citizens can turn when faced with a possible misuser of police powers state power. Such community-based structures have a valuable part to play in the spheres both of monitoring and of prevention of such misuse. A Panel of Lay-Visitors for each police station area could serve this function

- to speak to detainees
- to check conditions of detention
- to check records of the police station in respect of a detention
- to liaise in the presentation of complaints to the police station
- to liaise with the SSP/DIG of the area
- to accompany persons to the police stations when requested to do so
- to make complaints themselves in a representative capacity, inclusive of impending problems
- the coordination at local level with the Human Rights Task force(HRTF) could be an aspect of their work with importance for the restoration of Law and Order nationally.

VIII. Citizens Advisory Bureaus[1]

A System of Citizens Advisory Bureaus located in the vicinity of every district secretariat would be a valuable aid to the whole community for advise on various matters. In the context of disappearances specifically such a system is required for the assistance of bereaved persons on where to go and what to do obtain the requisite assistance.

IX. The Elemination of the Possibility of the Maintenance of a "Private Army" at state Expense.

The maintenance of a considerable number of armed personnel as security guards etc, of a politician at state expense was a feature of the period under consideration. In requires to be dismantled immediately. Persons selected by the politicians were given the rank and emoluments of an Army Officer They were paid by the Army, armed by the Army, but not controlled by the Army of employed in the Army's function of the protection of society from its enemies. These "soldiers" saw their role rather in the sphere of moving against personal enemies, acting for personal benefit or moving against the opponents of the politician concerned.

[1] See Chapter Seven" "Legal Proceedings" and annexure on ""The System of Citizens Advisory Bureaus in the United Kingdom"

The security of public figures should be provided by a special security coordination Division of the Police Officers attached to this division should be subjected to the command and supervision of superior officers in the service. All officers should be subjected to periodical transfer.

X. The Manifestation of the requisite Political Will: The appointment of the three Commissions on Disappearances in Nov. 1994 is an important manifestation of the political will to come to grips with the problems which the Commission has found to exist.

A further development lies in The Presidential Directives of July 1995 to the armed forces and the police requiring that :

No person shall be arrested or detained under any Emergency Regulations or the Prevention of Terrorism Act. No. 48/1979 except in accordance with the law and proper procedure and by a person who is authorised by law to make such arrest or order such detention, and (that) every member of the armed forces and of the Police shall "Assist and facilitate the Human Rights Task Force"[1].

These regulations go on to specify that :

- the person arresting shall identify himself by name and rank;
- the person arrested should be informed of the reason for the arrest; and
- a document acknowledging the fact of arrest should be given to a close relation or be recorded in the Police Information Book.

It is time now to harness civil society in the implementation of these provisions.

With these paramount considerations in mind we make the following recommendations additionally.

(A) the need to introduce consititutional safegurds

(B) the need to enlarge the Human Rights Commission Act

(C) the need to create the office of the Independent Human Rights Prosecutor

A. The need to introduce Constitutional safe-guards.
We recommend the following additions to the safe-guards guaranteed by the constitution on arrest.

(i) A constitutional right in the person arrested to Communicate with a relative or friend and a corresponding duty on the arresting officer to afford reasonable facility to do so, be recognised and declared.

[1] Presidential Directives issued under Regulation 8 of the Emergency (Establishment of a Human Rights Task Force) regulations No: 1 of 1995.

(ii) A constitutional right in the person arrested to have issued to his relatio with copy to him self a document acknowledging the fact of arrest inclusi of date and place, and particulars of the arresting authority inclusive name, rank and place of work, and a corresponding duty on the arresti officer to issue such document or to report to the nearest police stati within 24 hours the fact that the document was not issued and the reaso therefor, be recongnised and declared[1].

(iii) A constitutional right in any person to be represented by the Human Rig Task Force or a similar body in bringing to the notice of the Supreme Co the existence and location of a place of detention which has not be published in the Gazette to be a place authorised by the Secretary, Defen in an application to have the place declared as being an unauthorised pla of detention by the Supreme Court

(iv) A constitutional right in a person detained in such a place of detention to represented by the Human Right Task Force or a similar body to prefer indictment through the intervention of the proposed office of pub prosecutor against any persons or person alleged to have been respossible f the setting up of/or continuation of such place of detention.

(v) Principle 34 [2] of the UN Body of Principles for the Protection of All Perso Under Any Form of Detention or Imprisonment[11] be incooperated in t constitution.

B. The Need to Amend the Human Rights Commission Act

(i) A common and recurrent feature during the terror period was the lack responsibility shown by law enforcement authorities to take action complaints regarding 'disappearance'. This lack of action by the Autorit was seen even after judicial acknowledgement of 'disappearances' (T cases of Richard de Soyza and lawyer Liyanarachchi besides many oth serve as illustrations).

(ii) Consequently, as a measure to prevent future occurrences of this kind public unaccountability there is an imperative need for a separ institutional machinery to entertain and process complaints against excess by police and armed personnel. A first step towards this has already be

1. Regulation 19 (9) of the 1994 Emergency Regulations provides as follows :

"where any person shall without reasonable cause fail to issue a document acknowledging the fact arrest as required by paragraph (8) or willfully omits to make such an entry as is referred to in t proviso to paragraph (8), or to report the fact that the documents was not issued and the reas (therefor), he shall be guilty of an offence and upon conviction after trial before the High Court liable to a term of imprisonment extending to two years, and a fine."

2 Principle 34 provides that:

"when ever the death or disappearance of a detaine or imprisoned person occurs during his detenti or imprisonment, and inquiry into the cause of death or disappearance shall be held by a judicial other autority, either on its own motion or at the insistence of a member of the family of such a perso any person who has knlwledge of the case. When circumstances so warrant, such an inquiry shall held on the same procedural basis when ever the death or disappearance occurs shortly after t termination of the detention or imprisonment. The findings of such inquiry or a report thereon shal made available upon request, unless doing so would jeopardize and ongoing criminal investigatio taken by Your Excellency's Government in the form of the establishment of a permanent Human Rights Commission. However we feel the need to give more teeth to this Commission so that it can serve the function of a more effective Human rights Watch. Accordingly we recommend that the Human rights Commission Act be amended by creating an independent investigating unit to inquire into complaints received by the Commission with adequate powers for that purpose.

In any event the existing agencies with their jurisdictional limitations (for example, 500 disappearances taking place in different parts of the country in a short period of time or the phenomenon of 500 disappearances in one part of the country over a year) and other constraints (complaints to police against police personnel) are not equipped to handle this type of situation expeditiously. What is required is a quick, effective and accountable agency to address the complaint without the need for an abated healing process through investigations conducted by Disappearance Commissions long after the event with attendent political overtones. Indeed, if there is an inbuilt machanism to deal with human rights violations whatever thier magnitude as and if they arise it will serve as a Human Rights Watch. Such a Human Rights Watch would act as a deterrent, and is most likely to obviate the need to appoint ad hoc Commissions in the future.

C. Need to Create an Office of Independent Prosecutor.–

As a necessary adjunct to the measures recommended above we feel the need to create an office of an independent prosecutor with security of tenure (with a supporting staff) to institute prosecutions once evidence has been collected by the proposed investigating unit. The existing framework of the Attorney General's Office is not structured to fill this need. The Attorney General's function is to mount prosecutions and represent generally state officers in complaints against them. This appears to place that office in a paradoxical position. The sole concern of the proposed independent prosecutor's office would be to institute proceedings (criminal prosecutions) where the Human Rights Commission (with the assistance of its investigating unit) has found sufficient evidence for that purpose. We also recommend that while the salary of the proposed independent prosecutor be made a charge on the Consolidated Fund. the nomination to that office be made by and ratified by a Majority of the Members of Parliament.

CONCLUSION

The manifestation fo the requisite political will by the reaffiramation of the state's commitment to human rights, the reaffirmation of the right to peaceful dissent, free and fair elections being held at regular periods, and the commitment to overall development irrespective of race, caste, religion or region, are an essential and integral part of the national reconciliation to which Your Excellency has already committed the state and the people.

CHAPTER NINE

RELIEF MEASURES FOR AFFECTED FAMILIES

(I) In our terms of reference Your Excellency has required us to report on

"the relief, if any, that should be afforded to Parents, spouses and dependents of the persons alleged to have been so removed or to have so disappeared".

(vide: Paragraph (g) of the Warrant)

(II) Accordingly, in pursuance of our Mandate we have identified the following broad areas as necessitating relief measures:

(a) Recovery of Compensation
(b) Property Related Matters
(c) Employment Related Problems
(d) Inheritance and Succession
(e) Bank and Housing Loans
(f) Release of Moneys In Frozen Accounts
(g) Problems Relating to Civil Status
(h) Other Related Matters
(i) Problems of Emotional and/or Psychological and Economic Rehabilitation

(III) In the ensuring paragraphs we have recommended relief measures based on specific problems faced by members of affected families during the period under consideration which will be referable to one or more of the broad subject headings enumerated above.

1. Payment of Monetary Compensation.

(i) In September 1988 the Ministry of Rehabilitation and Construction had inaugurated a scheme which came to be known as the "Payment of Compensation to Most Affected Persons (MAPs)" According to the Minsitry's circular No. M/R and R/UAS/MAP/1, dated 26.09.1988. compensation would be paid in respect of "Deaths that may have occurred and injuries sustained as a result of ethnic violence, terrorist activity, related security operations and consequent civil unrest, since 24th July 1983."

However, a decision made by the Cabinet on November 22, 1989, effectively denied the benefits of the above scheme to a large number of affected families. The Cabinet decision was as follows:

The Cabinet was informed that claims of compensation were made even in respect of dead terrorists on the basis that they were killed due to terrorist action. It was decided that when considering claims for compensation on deaths due to terrorist action, care should be exercised to exclude terrorists being paid compensation."

(ii) This decision had resulted in an endemic discreminatory practice to the detriment of the well-being of the dependents of disappeared persons. The processing of applications for compensation was handled by Government Agents/ Divisional Secretaries. No precise definition was given as to the meaning of a "Terrorist", and as such, these officials had to depend on police clearance to ascertain whether the missing persons were engaged in terrorist/subversive activities. Thus, the ipse dixit of the police had come to replace judicial determination which surely must rank as being obnoxious to the Rule of Law. Assuming they were terrorists, it would still be morally incorrect to victimize the innocent members of thier families. we expressed the view in one of our Interim Reports that this discriminatory practice cannot be justified in any way as it amouted to a segregation of a certain section of socieity as "terrorists by relationship".

We are happy to note that Your Excellency's government has rectified that social injuistice in that Compensation is now being paid to all affected families during the period under consideration without reference to or such payment being non-conditional upon clearance by the police that the disappeared person was to be regarded as a terrorist/subversive or not.

(iii) However, we note two shortcomings (one procedural and the other substantive) even in regard to the present mode of payment of compensation.

(a) It was our experience that, the scheme of payment though implemented fairly consistently in certain districts of the Southern Province, has not been effective in certain other districts coming within the Commissions jurisdiction. Accordingly, we recommend that a realistic time-frame be set up with the objective of completing the payment of such compensation in all the districts as a matter of policy and priority.

It should be noted that the overhelming majority of the disappeared persons' families belong to low-income groups, and as such, the sudden disappearancer of thier family members–most of them were the bread-winners of the family–left them facing a very difficult financial situation. Under these circumstances they need a helping hand, and therefore, compensation has become a very vital isdsue in their struggle for survival. It has also become established practice that the state takes the responsibility for the breakdown of law and order in a given situation by compensating affected families.

Payment of fair and adequate compensation is an urgent necessity. This will be a tremendours financial burden on the government in the present context but it is the appropriate method of acknowldgment of the principle that the entire society should share the responsibility of helping out these affected families. In this context, We recommend the introduction of a new tax, similar to the Defence Levy, not only to generate sufficient funds for this purpose but also to create an awareness that in a national calamity such as this, society as a whole should come together and make a commitment ot solve the problems of these affected families.

(b) Re: Public Servants and Employees of Statutory Institutions and Corporations.– It should be noted that the above-mentioned scheme ("Assistance for Most Affected Persons") has not covered victims who served as employees in the Public Sector, Corporations, and other state owned institutions. They were handled by their respective employers in terms of circulars issued by the Ministry of Public Administration or under their own schemes. However, the decision of the Cabinet (referred to above) to exclude "Terrorists" from the compensation scheme had an impact on determining compensation in respect of public servants (e.g. Government Teachers), Corporation employees and employees of other Statutory Boards (e.g. employees of the National Water Supply and Drainage Board). Accordingly, we appeal to Your Excellency to give necessary instructions to the public Sector, Corporation and other Statutory Institutions to do away with the requirement of "police clearance" regarding payment of compensation to the surviving members of those disappeared employees. We also recommend that the same rationale be adopted in regard to the granting of pension rights, WOP benefits and other employment emoluments.

(c) The underlying rationale in the payment of compensation being the acknowledgement on the part of the state of its failure to enforce the Rule of Law we see no justification to draw a distinction between "a terrorist" (as labelled by the police and not found to be so judicially) and "an ordinary civilian" done to death by 'terrorists' Consequently, we see the need to pay compensation to the dependents of all disappeared persons irrespective of the label attached to them. This indeed should instil in the whole community a sense of commitment at national reconciliation.

2. Need to Exempt Compensation from Civil Claims an Seizure.

Whatever amount paid as compensation to the dependents of the disappeared persons should not be liable to be made the subject of any civil claim. We came across cases in the course of our investigations where creditors of the disappeared persons had sought to claim from the dependents of the disappeared persons debts owed to them out of the compensation money already paid by the state. In the creditors eyes the compensation in the hands of the disappeared debtors' dependents was in the nature of an inheritance to which the dependents had adiated. In this type of case there were all the trappings of future litigation, a luxury, most (if not all) the complainants in this type of case could ill afford.

Accordingly, we recommend that legislative provision be made exempting whatever amount that is paid as compensation by the state from being made the subject matter of any civil claim and seizure.

3. A Scholarship Programme for Minors.

From the perspective of the future well-being of the country, children can be considered the most adversely affected persons in the families of missing persons. The sudden disappearance of parents has affected not only their emotional security but also their econimic stability, which has a direct bearing on their education. Some are finding it difficult to continue their studies in the midst of economic hardships. To ease the situation, it would be advisable to introduce a scholarship programme whereby a monetary allocation may be granted annually or bi-annualy towards the purchase of educational material. This could be intergrated into many scholarship programmes administered by the Ministry of Education. It should be mentioned here that a large number of missing persons were unmarried, and therefore, the number of school going children involved is not very large. We would estimate this number to be around 5000 (Year 1 to G. C. E. (A/L) in the three provinces that came under our purview.

4. Vocational Training

The suffering of the affected families cannot be compensated by monetary grants alone. Besides minor children, missing persons have left behind spouses, adult children, and other dependent siblings. These families have now become female-headed households, but the wives find it difficult to maintain their families as they are not adequately skilled and gainfully employed. Even the adult children of the missing persons families are mostly unemployed.

Some form of redress should be made available to the spouses and the youth left behind in missing persons families through some of the many traning schemes and job opportunities provided by the government. Some families who came before us personally expressed their desire to benefit from such programmes.

At this stage we are unable to formulate a comprehensive scheme regarding vocational training. However, we would like to highlight the fact that vocational training to the needy members of the affected families is a vital need that requires serious attention. It goes without saying that vocational traning is a national need and opportunities should be made available to all the needy people. However, since these families have already suffered due to the sudden disappearance fo one or more of their children, it is quite justifiable to give them special consideration. The Ministry of Labour and Vocational Training, and also the Apprenticeship Training Institute should be able to accommodate a substantial number of needy people in their existing programmes.

5. Emotional Rehabilitation

(1) After the disappearance of our son, my wife has become insane. She now chases children crying out our son's name.

> I saw my Son's headless body thrown on the road. I am not in my right senses since then. (A mother who gave evidence)
> My husband's burnt body was on the road. I worshiped him and came away. My heart wished to bring him home, but no one would assist me.

(2) The foregoing illustrations reveal the traumatic and agonising experience the members of the affected families have had to undergo in dealing with the fact of disappearance. Any welfare scheme should take into consideration not only their economic problems but also their emotional rehabilitation.

The Commission has come across several incidents of suicide involving not only females but also males. A mother of twins had commited suicide a few weeks before the scheduled inquiry into the disappearance of her husband. Her husband as well as her father had been abducted by the security forces and bothe had disapeared subsequently. In a letter written to the Commission earlier, she had pleded:

You will be blessed, if you can find my husband.

In another case, an engineer (a son of an agricultural labourer) was abducted and disappeared subsequently. His father drowned while picking lotus for pooja, and then his younger son also committed suicide.

(3) Sri Lanka in the recent past has undergone several traumatic experiences two insurrections in the South and three Ealam wars-with disastrous consequences on the social psyche of the nation. People take it for granted that our culture is capable of absorbing all these shocks. Culture has its own limits. We saw how emotionally shattered people were when they came before the Commission. These people urgently need emotional help.

(4) Accordingly, we recomend that, the Educational services and Health Services plan out put and into operation a scheme for the sensitization of all their personnel to the need to be alert to this aspect; and to setting up of a referral scheme whereby affected children or adults needing attention may be referred to the counselling services. We also see the need to mobilise the mass media to make the public aware of the emotional aspects of this phenomenon, including the likely reprecussions to society as a whole, if these aspects continue to remain unaddressed.

6. Employment Emoluments Such as Unclaimed Salary, E. P. F. Gratuity Lying to the Credit of Disappeared Persons

(i) The next of kin have not been able to secure the release of moneys lying to the Credit of disappeared persons primarily due to lack of evidence of death. Sometimes the employer has regarded the "disappeared persons" as employeess who had kept off work without prior notice with the attdendant consequence of regarding them as persons who had committded an employment offence.

(ii) In this type of case we recommend that on the basis of our findings that the employee concerned has been "disappeared" the respective employers be required to deposit these moneys with the appropriate authoriy (Commissioner of Labour if the employee was attached to a private establishment) or with the relevant Divisional Secretariat within the jurisdiction in which the corpus was residing at the time of the disappearance, to enable the heirs of the disappeared persons to secure the release of those moneys upon furnishing proof of their right to claim the same.

(iii) In order that conflicting claims by heirs be avoided the Grama Niladharis of each division may be required to maintain lists of such claimants.

(iv) We would like to mention here that, during our tenure, in consequence of our requests the following institutions and establishments responded positively to resolve the dilemma faced by the next of kin of some of the disappeared persons.

(i) Seemasahitha Talangama Janatha Seva Pravahana Sevaya
(ii) Seemasahitha Homagama Janatha Seva Pravahana Sevaya
(iii) M. P. R. Jont Venture, Mulatiyana, Matara
(iv) Surveyors Department, Hambantota
(v) Lanka Electricity Co.
(vi) Ceylon Electricity Board
(vii) Namunukula Plantation Services (PVT), Limited.
(viii) Ministry of Education and Higher Education

7. Release of Moneys Lying In Bank Accounts of Disappeared Persons

As the law presently stands upon death of a bank account holder the account is frozen and it forms part of the estate of the deceased which would require testamentary proceedings in Court subject to Monetary Considerations as laid down in the Civil Procedure Code. Attempts on the part of dependents (generally spouses and children) of disappered persons to secure the release of such moneys lying to the credit of such disappeared persons had proved futile for the following reasons :-

(a) Lack of evidence of death (only an alleged disappearance)

(b) In terms of Banking Law and Practice refusal on the part of the bank to pay off money lying to the credit of X to Y.

In such cases we recommend that Act No. 2 of 1995 be amended or transitional legislation be enacted legalising the release of money lying to the credit of persons who have been found by the Commission to have disappeared upon the production of a death certificate by the heirs of the disappeared account holder.

8. Moneys Lying In the W. O. Fund

Some of the witnesses who came before us were not aware that a release of these moneys could be obtained upon furnishing a copy of the death certificate and the WOP number to the Director of Pensions. This focusses once again on the need to establish a legal services unit at Divisional Secretariat level to assist these persons to secure such moneys.

9. Recovery of Moneys on Life Insurance Policies

Since the enactment of the Registration of Deaths (Temporary Provisions) Act, No. 2 of 1995, beneficiaries of life insurance policies held by 'disappeared' persons have been able to secure on the production of a death certificate in terms of the Act the release of Moneys due on the said policies from the Insurance Corporation without the requirement of formal proof of 'death'. However, we came across cases where it was alleged that private insurance companies had not acted in the same way. It may well be that the provisions of the Act are not wide enough to compel private insurance companies to overlook the terms and conditions of the policies which might include conclusive proof of death. We recommend that your Excellency be pleased to seek the Honourable Attorney-General's view on this matter.

10. Employment Related Problems of Next of Kin of Disappeared persons

In some instances next of kin of disappeared persons (generally father or brother of the disappeared person had kept off their work places since they were engaged in trying to ascertain the whereabouts of their disappeared next of kin. Consequently, their employment had been terminated on the basis that they are deemed to have vacated their posts. We recommend that the employer (whether government, semi-government or private) be required to re-instate the employees whose employment had been so terminated (or to make a compensatory payment in lieu of reinstatement in addition to other statutory employment entitlements recognised by existing principles of labour law). However, the duty to re-instate would be conditional upon the applicant being required to establish at and appropriate inquiry that the effective cause of absence from work was the fact that the employee had been engaged in ascertaining the whereabouts of his next of kin. We would like to note here the commendable step taken by Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka in re-instating a person falling into the category contemplated above, after due inquiry on the lines suggested by us above.

11. Unauthorised Occupation of State land-Need to Regularise

In several cases we found that the dependents of disappeared persons were exposed to the risk of being evicted or had already been evicted from state lands they are presently or had been in unauthorised occupation. Poltical Motivation, personal enmity and sometimes the absence of a permit or deed were identified by as the causes for their plight. Given the fact that most of the persons exposed to this fate are female spouses of disappeared persons, (forced to fend for themselves basides maintaining their children sometimes with as small a monthly income as ranging from Rs. 400/- to Rs. 800/- owing to the enforced disappearance of the bread-winner in the family), the misery that would visit them is not difficult to envisage if they were to be rendered homleses. In fact, our investigations revealed that in some cases this calamity had already struck some, mothers and children being compelled to live in temporary abodes at the charity of frinds or sometimes in places of religious worship. We have already nighlighted in our earlier interim reports this problems of the female-headed family. We urge Your Excellency to regard this as a matter of grave urgency and to implement a state lands alienation scheme to regularise the present unauthorised occupation of state lands by the category of persons under consideration. We also recommend that those who have already been dispossessed of the lands they had been in occupation consequent upon the enforced disappearance of their bread-winner and owing to any one or more reasons envisaged above be given back those or other alternative lands after due inquiry by the Divisional Secretary of the Administration Division within which the land in question is located. We would like to mention here that, some Divisional Secretaries have already satisfied this compelling need by responding to our request and making arrangements for such families to secure or permits or deeds in respect of state lands for their occupation. Mention must be made here of the Mahaweli Authority in this context.

12. A Stipend to Maintain Mentally or Physically Handicapped Members of Devastated Families

There were a few cases where the complainant's (generally mother or wife corpus) lament was that the only source of income was the industry of the disappeared corpus which helped to maintain his mentally or physically handicapped siblings. In these cases we recommend that a reasonable stipend be arranged for the devastated families through the Department of Social Services after an appropriate inquiry conducted by the said department or the relevant Ministry.

13. Relief in Respect of payment of Bank Loans

(i) In a large number of cases we found that members of affected families were in a financially desperate situation, unable to pay off the loans obtained by the disappeared persons or by the Complianants themselves (generally wife or partent of the corups with the help of the disappeared persons). These loans had been obtained for a variety of reasons ranging from housing loans to raising a dowry to give a daughter in marriage. They also fell into the category of either 'small' loans) e.g. Rs. 7,500/- in one case obtained from the Bank of Ceylon, Beliatta Branch) to 'large' loans (e.g. Rs. 117,307.16 in one case obtained from the State Mortgage and Investment Bank). Your Excellency will be plesed to note that, most of these banks have responded favourably in some measure or other to help out those persons placed in the said financial dilemma. In the Bank of Ceylon case referred to above the interest had been waived off and the heirs of the loaner had been given the right to pay the Capital amounting to Rs. 7,500/-in twenty three monthly instalments. In the latter case the property of the loan applicant was on the verge of being auctioned publicly. At our request the bank while agreeing to stay the auction had given the heirs of the corpus (loan applicant or Mortgagor) an amnesty period of three months to pay the capital amounting to Rs. 117,307.16 after waiving off all interest due on the loan.

(ii) While we noted the humane and ready response on the part of the banks as illustrated above in depicting a spirt of community concern for the devastated families under consideration, even those relief measures may be found to be inadequate in most cases given their indigent circumstances. We are not unmindful of the conflict faced by the banks in loan recovery situations, for example, statutory constraints and answerability to the shareholders. Consequently, in deciding to waive off interest or allowing long drawn instalment payments, the Board of Directors may be compelled to act within necessary limits. Accordingly we see the need for legislative intervention in giving effect to such relief measures as adopted by the two cases which we have highlighted above.

14. Relief Measures for Fisher Families

Many fisher families have been affected by the events of the period under consideration. We note that already there is a scheme at village level to provide assistance to fisher families funded by the Asian Development Bank. We recommend that at least one member from every one of the said devastated families be considered under that scheme on a preferential basis. The project officers of the respective areas which have been brought under this scheme may be directed to collect relevant information regarding these families as a first step towards recruiting at least one member for a self-employment scheme and with a view to providing these families with other forms of assistance.

15. Issue of Death Certificates

(a) Need to Amend Act, No. 2 of 1995

(i) Section 4 of the Registration of Deaths (temporary Provisions) Act, No. 2 of 1995 (hereinafter referred to as the Act) requires "a report from the Grama Niladhari of the Grama Niladhari Division in which the person whose death is sought to be registered, was last resident, confirming the fact that such person has not been seen alive or heard of, for a period of over one year, and any other evidence in support of such application".

(ii) We came across several cases where although the applicants seeking death certificates were well in possession of evidence as contemplated by section 4 as aforesaid, they had sought them on the basis of the area from which the corpus had been involuntarily removed or had disappeared. This highlights once again the need to establish a (legal) advisory services unit to assist applicants to pursue the release of death certificates in terms of the provisions of the Act.

(iii) Lack of evidence of residence (owing to the name of the corpus not being listed in the electorial lists or householders' lists) has posed a problem to applicants desirous of obtaining death certificates. While in most cases the Viharadhipathi and/or other village dignitaries had issued writings confirming the fact of the residence of the corpus there were some cases where the applicants had failed to secure that evidence. Since the object of the Act is to grant the applicant a death certificate upon proof of the corpus in question being disappeared and his subsequent whereabout being unknown we recommend that the Act be amended to provide for the situation envisaged above.

(iv) There were cases where the corpus had been removed (and subsequently disappeared) from his work place (with no record of his residence as contemplated by Section 4 of the Act) or where he had been temporarily resident. In such cases affidavits from the employer of the corpus or the hostel (or boarding) keeper or landlord of the corpus supporting the application for a death certificate should entitle the applicant to obtain the same. In as much as a wide gamut of future actions of the dependents and/or heirs of the disappeared corpora (such as securing the release of moneys lying in bank accounts, benefits under insurance policies, employment emoluments or even a contemplated second marriage of the wife of the corpus) would depend on the availability of a death certificate we feel there is an urgent need to amend Act No. 2 of 1995 on the lines suggested above.

(v) Finally, in this context, we also feel the need to give adequate publicity to the said Act (with the proposed amendments if enacted into law) through the Media, Grama Niladharis and display at Post and Sub-Post Offices or other conspicuous (public) places in addition to the setting up of the (legal) advisory services unit recommended earlier. Such a course of action will address the problem of the "illiterate applicants".

(b) Hardship caused by Administrative Officers' Interpretation of the Act – Need to Rectify

(i) A case in point is that of M/S SU, the wife of a disappeared person residing within a Divisional Secretariat area in the Western Province who had applied for a death certificate in terms of the Act. The corpus had disappeared on 28.12.93. The Administrative Officer signing on behalf of the Divisional Secretary had informed her that "since your husband has disappeared after the period of terror, that is, on 93.12.28., we cannot take action under the Act".

(ii) This administrative action through a purported construction of the provisions of the Act runs counter to the clear provisions of Section 2 of the Act. The statutory time limit imposed by section 8 of the Act enabling an aggrieved applicant to appeal to the Registrar General against a decision or determination of the District Registrar (being one month) is now well passed.

(iii) An applicant such as the one in this case demonstrates the problems oridnary people of this country are faced with. The District Registrar in fact has even advised the applicant to "institute action under Section 108 of the Evidence Ordinance in Court and obtain a judgement from the District Court"

(iv) The availability of alternative remedies and delay are well established discretionary bars to an application of a 'prerogative' Writ. Even if an applciant is in a financially stable position to institute such an application (which is not the case in the illustration under consideration) these bars could well defeat an application. SU's case is just one case we came across. There could be many more.

(v) Accordingly, we would like to make the following recommendations in this connection.

(a) Immediate Public Administration Circular to be sent to all "District Registrars" informing them that they are not empowered to reject an application for a death certificate under the Act on the ground that the date of disappearance in his opinion falls outside the period of terror;

(b) The case of SU highlights the need for the establishment of a legal advisory services bureau to advise and assist families facing problems of a similar nature.

16. Public Relief Loans for Extermely Indigent Families

We have identified 2471 families as deserving immediate monetary relief in th form of public relief loans. These are families where the only source of income wa the income earned by the head (Male) of the family. In consequence of the loss o the bread-winner of the family these families had been left totally destitute. Thi focusses attention once again on the plight of the female headed family. In some o these families there are as many as six to eight minor children whose schooling needs even cannot be met. We would like to mention here that as a result of ou endeavours we were able to evoke a sympathetic response from some Provincia Council agencies such as the Ministry of Food, Co-operatives, Housing, Socia Services, Probation and Child Care and Women Affairs (Sothern Province) wh readily agreed to approve small public loans (generally in the range of Rs. 30 -per month) to extremely indigent families as envisaged above. We would recommend to your Excellency that abroad scheme to provide relief loans to assis the needs of school Children of devastated families be initiated.

17. Widowed Mothers Seeking Transfers

(i) There was a considerable number of cases where mothers widowed as a result of "enforced disappearances" having to live miles away from their Schooling children by reason of their palaces of employment. Most of these were teachers attached to government schools. Their emotional appeal was to secure a transfer to a school in close proximity to their village.

(ii) A variation of this theme was where some of the mothers sought admission of their minor children to the schools they were presently attached so that their children could be with them.

(iii) In these cases we recommend that steps be taken by the relavant, Ministries or Provincial Ministries to consider their appeals for such transfers, we would like to mention here the ready response on the part of St. Thomas' Boys College, Matara where a widowed mother who had failed in her endeavours to get her minor child admitted to a school to continue with his education was granted adminission at our request.

18. Relief Through Legal Aid Commission and Proposed Legal Advisory Services Bureau

(i) Dependents of some of the "disappeared persons" had found themselves unable to continue with pending litigation (mostly minor land disputes) on account of the financially destitute situation they had been placed in following the "enforced disappearance". For example, a son who had been financing the family in a partition action (going on for as many as twelve years) had been killed during the period under review. Where we found that the monthly incomes of these families fell within the monetary limit of applications entertained by the Legal Aid Commission we referred the parties to that institution to seek some relief. However, there were some cases that fell marginally outside the said monatary limit. In these cases we recommend that their cases be taken up by the proposed legal (Advisory) Services Bureau.

(ii) Being mindful of the fact that several years have passed in these cases and the implications of the provisions of the Civil Procedure code particularly Section 402 of the said code, specific provisions may be made in the law addressing this problem.

19. Employment for Qualified Members of Devastated Families

1. Since several years had passed since the "enforced disappearances" most of the complainants coming before us appeared to have resolved within that their loved ones were no more, Apart from their concern to ascertain those who were responsible for "the atrocities committed on their lives" they were also sanguine of obtaining some relief from the government as "Compensation for such atrocities." "change of regime" was an irrelevancy to them. They seemed to feel almost with a naturally Hobbesian instinct that "the government is a continuing institution for us people" One witness (the brother of a disappeared corpus) reflected thus:

> I am a graduate. I have been without a job for many years. At least if I had a job I could help my widowed sister to look after her family after 'they' killed my brother-in-law.

The ring of dissatisfaction in his voice was unmistakable and indeed representative of the mood of many youth in this country.

2. Although we are fully aware that, the problem of the Youth is not confined to members of affected families during the period under consideration, we recommend that such members (after a process through which they may be first identified perhaps at pradesheeya sabha level) be considered on a priority basis for recruitment in government employment wherever possible provided the basic qualifications for the posts contemplated are possessed by them. This would serve as an acknowledgement on the part of "the state" for its breath in failing to arrest the spate of extrajudicial killings and/or enforced disappearances during the period under consideration.

   We would like to add here that, Your Excellency be pleased to seek the Honourable Attorney Genaral's advice on the Constitutional implications (particularly Article 12 and its sub-paragraphs of the Constitution) of our recommendation.

   We would like to mention here that a scheme suggested on the lines above was in operation in 1989 with regard to the recruitment of trainee teachers.

20. Restitution In Case of Damage to Immovable Property

The evidence revealed that many families had suffered loss and damage in respect of their houses and property during the "period of terror". In these cases we recommend that monetary assistance be given to these families to rebuild their houses. It was brought to our notice during our proceedings that the Commissioner (Essential Services), at the auspices of the Ministry of Shipping had been implementing a scheme such as what is envisaged above in the Ampara District for victims of terrorist acts. We recommend a similar scheme to provide monetary assistance to the families under consideration irrespective of whether the damage and loss to property was caused by terrorist acts or state agencies.

21. Relief Measures for Cultivators

The impact of "enforced disappearances" on families engaged in cultivation as their main occupation revealed the following aspects.

(a) The Problem of Ande-Cultivators

(i) In some cases following the disappearance of the person who had been cultivating land as 'tenant-cultivator' thereof, the owner had taken up the position that, there had been "wilful neglect" on the part of the tenant cultivator to cultivate the land. The more imaginative spouses or adult children of some of the 'disappeared' ande-cultivators who had got on to the field and attempted to cultivate through a natural awareness of their legal rights as successors had been effectively evicted by the owner. The vulnerable position the tenant-cultivator's family had been placed in following the disappearance of the principal member had made the owner's act an easy task. Well over a year had passed since these evictions and the members of these families were still wondering how to get back their rights for the facts in these cases as recorded above would be sufficient to attract the provisions of the Agrarian Services Act, No. 58 0f 1979 (as amended by Act, No. 4 of 1991) to defeat their ande-cultivator rights.

(ii) In these cases we recommend that, a forum be created to receive complaints of this nature and to provide relief to these families after due inquiry into their complaints, if necessary even by enacting legislation in as much as the office of the Commissioner of Agrarian Services as envisaged by the Agrarian Services Act is not empowered, as the law presently stands, to hold such inquries and take remedial action.

(b) Occupation Hazard.– Our investigations in the Embilipitiya District revealed the nature of the problem faced by the cultivatiors of those lands. They were faced with an acute water problem. This was not due to any natural factors but brought about by a diversion scheme of the Mahaveli Waters to nurture and sustain "a Mulberry Project" that had been launched by the State. While we are fully appreciative of the fact that, it is not our function to comment on policy decidions of the government of projects of this nature, we feel an imperative need to re-locate those families (some of whom fall within the terms of our Mandate) for although they continue to live on small plots of high land adjoining the fields that they had been cultivating, they have been "constructively dispossessed" from the fields they had been so cultivating which had been the effective (or sometimes the sole) means of their livelihood.

22. Establishment of a Legal Assistance (Advisory) Scheme

The problem areas highlighted above reflect a wide spectrum. We also made mention of the constraints that may apply to the existing legal aid Commission. In any event it is to be noted that the functions of the legal aid Commission are confined to proposed or pending litigation. The role we envisage for the proposed legal assistance (or Advisory) bureau is broader as the problems faced by Members of affected families as reflected in the foregoing paragraphs amply emonstrate. Consequently, we feel the need for the creation of a legal assistance advisory) bureau to entertain not only grievances and take necessary steps to nable Members of victimised families to protect and vindicate their existing and ontingent rights and interests but also to bring to the attention of the government roblems of a particular and peculiar nature faced by some Members of the affected families such as claims for compensation by parents of disappeared hikkus; claims for compensation by wives of disappeared persons but now 'married' for a second time and conflicting claims for compensation between parents and spouses of disappeared persons. In this context we would like to make the recommendation that the Divisional Secretariats be directed to make payment of compensation without undue regard to matters of form. A refusal to pay compensation to the mother of a disappeared corpus who had produced a letter of authority from the wife of the corpus who had gone abroad for employment, would be an instance in this regard.

23. A Proposed Legislative Package

We also recommend that a legislative package be initiated to give effect to some of the recommendtions made in the foregoing paragraphs where it is considered necessary in as much as there may be some difficulty in implementing some of them through administrative measures.

24. Monitoring Committee

Finally, we recommend that, an ad-hoc Committee be appointed by Your Excellency to monitor the progress of follow up action to be taken on the basis of the aforementioned recommendations.[1]

IV Article 19 of the U. N. Declaration of the Protection of All Persons from enforced Disappearance[2] provides that,

> The victims of acts of enforced disappearance and their family shall obtain redress and shall have the right to adequate compensation, including the means for as complete a rehabilitation as possible. In the event of the death of the victim as a result of an act of enforced disappearance, their dependents shall also be entitled to compensation.

V. In conclusion we need hardly mention that there is an imperative need to address the problems faced by members of the affected families. Even when there is a national calamity such as floods or some similar vis Major the State steps in to repair the loss suffered by the victims. A number of year have passed since the acts complained of had been committed. The devastation it caused in the lives of so many people still continues. It is with the awarensess that there people should not be forgotten merely as victims of an unfortunate period that we have made the foregoing recommendations. These recommendations acted upon as part of a reparation package to those affected families will help in the process of healing and reconciliation.

PART II

CHAPTER TEN

PART II

HABEAS CORPUS APPLICATIONS

Historical use of the Writ of Habeas Corpus

1. The right to a Writ of Habeas Corpus, derived from the English legal system's recognition of the fact that every citizen has the right to protection from excessive acts of the executive and legislature, was recognized by the Sri Lankan law as early as 1889[1].

2. The concept behind the writ is the recognition of every person's right to freedom from arbitrary and/or illegal arrests and detention.

3. Historically, the Writ has been used in England for nearly four centuries as a means of compelling arresting authorities to produce the arrested persons before the authority of Court in order to determine the validity of the arrest and the subsequent detention. The arresting authority, being, an officer of the State.

4. In Sri Lanka, however, the overwhelming number of reported cases are those between private parties and the Writ has been most used in cases of custody battles over minor children with a family.

5. The earliest reported case of the use of the Writ against the State was as in 1915.[2] Until the early seventies, the cases against the State were most often based on the powers vested in the Commissioner of Immigration and Emigration. Even in the celebrated case Re: Bracegirdle[3] the Court's examination of the use of Emergency Powers occurred in the context of an arrest made in consequence of an order for deportation.

6. It was the rise of arrests and detention under Emergency Powers in the seventies that one sees the concentrated use of the Writ of Habeas Corpus as a challenge to the exercise of Emergency Powers under the Public Security Ordinance and the Preventation of Terrorism Acts.

Objectives of this Chapter

7. This Chapter concentrates on the Applications made to the Court of Appeal by a Petitioners who have given evidence before the Commission where the Petitioners have brought the fact of the application to the notice of the Commission only. This consititutes a total of 120 cases.

[1] Courts Ordinance No. 1 of 1889.

[2] 18 NLR.

[3] 39 NLR 193.

8. The Commission's attempts to ascertain for itself the actual number of cases filed regarding disappearances falling within its mandate have proved fruitless.

The Register, Court of Appeal furnished the Commission with a total number of Habeas Corpus Applications required annually in the years 1988 to may 1996, and the numbers awaiting disposel by CA as at May 1996.

Year	Number of HCA Registered	Number of HCA pending
1988	505	04
1989	483	05
1990	74	15
1991	108	30
1992	503	74
1993	543	63
1994	376	56
1995	130	54
TOTAL	2755	330

9. These cases constitute a poignant aspect of the efforts of relations to trace "disappeared: loved ones, understood by them to have been taken away by the State security forces. The poignancy lies in the fact of the denial to these petitioners of recourse to the ordinary procedures of law enforcement, i, e, reporting to the area police, the reports being followed by an invistigation by the police, the contemporaneous police record of the incident of disappearance and statements from witnesses and police reports to courts with the attendant safeguardes for witnesses including the complaints and assistance in evidence regarding finger prints, blood samples, etc. and Court's assistance in obtaining such records.

10. In the face of this denial of the right of access to the system of administration of justice, the fact that so many petitioners sought the assistance of courts via its Habeas Corpus jurisdiction bears witness to their faith, that if they could only access the Judge of the land, they would have their attention, which would in turn get them the required attention fron all official quarters. from

At the time of filling of many of these applications, it was only the Court of Appeal of Sri Lanka, situated in Colombo, which had the jurisdiction to entertain applications for Writs of Habeas Corpus. The capital city was not only an alien place to most of the Petitioners, but was so far away that many of them could barely affored the bus fare to get to the metropolis.

The fact that many of the petitioners have brought it to the attention of the Comission that they had not even visited their local police station before the incidents described by them indicated the sense of desperation that moved them to brave their way to Colombo. This was in the face of the total erasure of their experience by the official quarters including the security forces and the police, the Grama Sevakas of the village, all the way to the highest administrative services available to the citizens of this country, the Presidential Mobile Secretariat and the Co-ordinating bodies for security and police services.

Although evidence was available of the recording of these complaints by some of the authorities, the striking feature before the Commission is the signal failure by the State authorities to follow them up with any independent investigation into what were essentially statements of the misuse of State Powers.

11. These Habeas Corpus Applications by 2755 individual petitioners also bears witness to the faith of the people in the law of the land. They were faced with the denial by the authorities that what they had experienced was a "Crime", "A Wrong" they were faced with the contrast afforded by the authorities' compliance with the requisite legal procedures in respect of the parallel incidents which the authorities considered to be "subsversive acts". They were faced with the bludgeon of the Indemnity Act passed in 1988. All of these were designed to confirm to them that their experience was "different" to those of the ordinary people of the country.

In short they were confronted with the denial of their very humanity; an attitute that their loved ones were only comparable to stray animals.

The petitioners then turned to the courts in a manifestation of their belief and reliance on the Rule of Law based on generational experience prior to the era of state-sponsored terror. These cases in fact offer a moving commentary on the climate existing during this period as opposed to a preceding time.

Evidence Before the Commission

(i) Records of cases brought to the attention of the Commission by petitioners and made available by the Court of Appeal (These do not represent all the cases filed in respect of persons falling within the mandate of the Commission.)

(ii) Evidence of Registrar of the Supreme Court, Court of Appeal, High Court of Colombo and Chief Magistrate Court Colombo.

(iii) Evidence of the former Chief Magistrate of Colombo Sarath Ambepitiya Esq. - District Judge.

(iv) The evidence of the petitioners before the Commission.

1. Rate of Completion of Inquiries

Of the 120 case records made available to the Commission, the Court of Appeal has made findings in 38 cases, and the inquiry by the Magistrate Courts has been completed in 74. The Registrar of the High Court of Colombo in his evidence states that 132 cases have been inquired into by the Magistrate whilst 33 more are awaiting completion. These cases include cases that have not been taken into account by the Commission and do not include some that have been considered by the Commission.

2. Attendance of Parties in Court

Petitioners.– In 27 of the 120 cases analysed by the Commission, the cases had been dismissed for want of appearance of the petitioners. In some, the cases have been abated until appearance by the petitioner. The Registrar of the High Court has also recorded several instances of cases where the petitioner was not present in Court.

Respondents.– Although the respondents are represented in most cases, the practice has been that the respondents themselves do not have to attend courts at all through out the inquiry. Their presence is dispensed with if they are represented by counsel in Court and an application is made to court that they are unable to be physically present since they are in service in operational areas. The former Chief Magistrate in his evidence confirms this. He also revealed to the Commission that in his opinion some respondents do not present themselves in court so as to avoid positive identification by the petitioner, as had once happened before him in the case of an identification of the ASP of the Kelaniya area.

> ....certain respondents started absenting themselves from the Magistrate Courts until the petitioner's case was concluded. They would only present themselves in Court after that. By this time it was too late to record an identification in court by the petitioner.

An identification in court is an identification in Law and forms part of the evidence in the case. The District Judge went on to say that such respondents have been represented through out the proceedings and no applications had been made to postpone the hearings on the basis that they are unable to be present on that particular date.

The Magistrate's Court have on most occasions refused application on behalf of the respondents for postponements on the basis of other engagements, and have also allowed applications by the petitioner insisting on the presence of the respondents in court during the inquiry.

3. Representation of Parties

Petitioners.–In most cases perused by the Commission the petitioners have been represented by legal aid organisations.

Respondents.–The Supreme Court in the case of Seetha vs. Sharvananda (1989) 1 Sri L.R. 94 held that the Attorney General is entitled to appear on behalf of any public officer who is made a respondent in applications for Writs of Habeas Corpus regardless of whether any criminal charges can be brought against the respondent official at a later state.

The Attorney General has consistently appeared on behalf of the Army Commander and Inspector General of Police. The Attorney General has appeared for other members of the Forces where there does not seem to be a possible charge of an offense under the Penal Code to be tried later. In cases where there was such a possibility however the Attorney General has not represented the respondents, and Private counsel had been retained by the respondents to appear on their behalf.

4. Delays in Proceedings

In most of the cases analysed by the Commission, the petition to the court ha been filed quite some time after the date of disappearance of the person, in so cases the delay being over one year. Further, objections of the Respondents ha rarely been filed within three months of the filing of the petition and in some cas have taken as long as one year.

Once the order to send the case to the Magistrate Court had been made, th Court takes at least two years to complete the inquiry. Amongst the reas identified for this by the former Chief Magistrate were :

(i) the Court of Appeal when sending the case to the Magistrate Court does n notify parties of a possible date when this case will be inquired into thereby leavin the MC to notify parties all over again. In some cases, although the Court o Appeal has identified the location of the Respondents more fully than is describe in the petiton (which very often only contains an address of the temporary camps) this is not notificed to the MC and the Mc has to take steps to find the Respondent all over again. If the petitioner dies during the pending of the inquiry, there are n provosions under which the MC can act of its own volition and the case has to b referred to the CA and sent back to the MC. Further, both the Chief Magistrat and the Registrar of the High Court gave evidecne as to the volume of wor already handled by MC and the difficulty in accommodating the large influx o cases of the High Court that were sent to the Chief Magistrate in one go.

When the cases are returned to the Court of Appeal by the Magistrate's Cou ,there is usually a delay of several months before the Court hears the argumen based on the findings of the Magistrate. In fact in several cases, although report have been sent to the Court of Appeal in 1995, no final decision of the Cou ofAppeal is available as yet.

Thus, in cases where a magisterial inquiry has been ordered and findings ma by the Court of First Instance against Respondents, there is a time lag approximately 7 years from the date of disappearance to an order from the Cou of appeal regarding this disappearance. In this period, petitioners have died or le the country seeking employment or have lost interest in the case; Responden have also died and several have left the service before the completion of the acti against them thereby rendering impossible any disciplinary action that can b taken against them in cases where there are findings against them.

5. Special Aspects of Legal Procedure

The procedure for inquiry into applications for Habeas Corpus Applications now settled law.

Juwanis v. Lathif et al (1988) 2 Sri. L. R. 185 Went into the circumstanc under which a MC can inquire into the case. The courts held that when th Respondents deny the custody of the corpus, the Court of Appeal does not have t be satisfied the authorities actually have the corpus in custody in order to order inquiry by a Court of First instance.

Rasammah v. Major General Perera et al (1982) 2 Sri. L. R. 30 Court of Appeal has discretion as to when the Respondents should be ordered to produce the corpus before the Court. The Court held that it is not mandatory to order the production at the time that the petitioner establishes a prima facie case and that even if the Petitioner is unable to do so, notice may be issued upon the Respondents.

The filing of Habeas Corpus Applications is another method the bereaved have sought to use in order to assert their rights and to bring a matter to the attention of the authorities.

K. Leda Violets Case, M. Saminona, L. Beetanona v. IPVidhanapathirana, OIC, Police Station Dikwella et al– HCA 164/89, 166/89 & 171/89

S. N. de Silva, J. President, Court of Appeal in Habeas Corpus Application Numbers 164/89, 166/89 and 171/89 observed:

> Several, hundreds of applications have been filed in this court from about the year 1988 for writs of Habeas Corpus in respect of persons whose arrest and custody is denied by the named Respondents. The Respondents are named personnel of the Sri Laka Police or armed Forces.

The Principal by which the courts will guide themselves in such applications was explained by the President, Court of Appeal, as follows ;

> Article 141 of the the constitution which invests this court with jurisdiction to issue Writs of Habeas Corpus is intended to safeguard the liberty of the citizens. The Rule of law, freedom and the sfety of the subject would be completly nullified, if any person in authority can cause the disappearance of an individual who has been taken into custody and blandly deny to this court having jurisdiction to safeguard the liberty of the subject, any knowledge fo the whereabuts of such individual. Q. V. Page 10

Adopting a decision of the Indian Supreme Court and material from International Human Rights Law, the Court of Appeal held that

> Some affirmative action is necessary from a court invested with jurisdiction to issue Writs of Habeas Corpus, when confronted with a case of an obvious disappearance of an individual held in custody and a false denial of such custody by a person in authority.

The court accordingly awarded exemplary sums of Rs. 100,000/- to each petitioner.

> The court directed the Inspector General of Police to consider the evidence recorded in the Magistrates Courts as information of the commission of a cognizable offense (and) to take necessary steps to conduct proper investigations and to take steps according to law.

Court also directed a copy of the proceedings and judgement to be forwarded to the Attorney General "for apporpriate action to be taken by him"

Vajira Ranjani Madukumari vs. Douglas Peiris, OIC, Peliyagoda (now S Gampaha) et al HCA 103/91

The Court of Appeal observing that HCA cases are referred for an inquiry t court of first instance in order that evidence would be recorded, witnesses cro examined submissions made as to credibility and finding made by the judge that court on the evidence stated:

> the findings on questions of fact made by a court of first instance would not l ordinarily disturbed by this court which has not had the benefit of seeing hearing the witnesses. The learned Chief Magistrate was best equipped to coa to findings of fact on the disputed questions. His findings would be depart from by this court only if there are cogent reasons to do so.

L. S. Perera
v. 1. Inspector General of Police
2. Douglas Perera et al
HCA 13/91

On respondent Counsel's submission that the petitioner had implicated the 2n respondent for the first time only one and a half years after the alleged arrest in petition filed in this court, and that the complaint is belated, the court of Appe stated that the circumstances which existed at the relevant period were pertine to whether the complaints is belated.

> The delay in making a complaint could well be understood considering th circumstances which existed at the relevant period. No person could be fault for not making a complaint when the allegation is directly levelled at the Poli being the lawful authority to carry out such investigation. Special Leave t appeal to the Supreme Court against the findings of the Court of Appeal h been refused.[1]

V. The Difficulties Attendant on Litigation

> It is obvious that the petitioners have incurred heavy expenditure in the proceedings. They have done so with the firm belief that truth and justice w finally prevail.
> S. N. de Silva J. Q.

This is Your Commissioners' experience also.

An 84 year old father from Embilipitiya District who has lost 5 so successively in 5 incidents of abductions and disappearances described to t Commission his inability to give the requisite instructions to the Legal A organisation which was prepared to handle the matter in respect of his 4th son, a his inability to attend courts to give evidence in respect of these abductions, due the lack of the requisite bus fare.

[1] Sc Sp. L. A. 343/95. On the matter of the payment of costs the Court of Appeal stated:

> In the event of a failure to make payment on the costs further action against the 2 respondent would be considered by this Court

Habeas Corpus matters get postponed many times due to the absence of respondents who allege their absence to be due to official duties. Lawyers must be retained and paid their fees in respect of each of such days. A mother giving evidence before the Commission described how the Court of Appeal has awarded her Rs. 100,000 as exemplary damages' in respect of the abduction and disappearance of one son, while her Habeas Corpus Application in respect of her other son abducted on the same occasion has fallen by the wayside due to her inability to pay lawyers' fees.

A state-aided legal aid services for petitioners for a writ of Habeas Corpus in this category of cases of disappearances would be a public acknowledgement of the break-down of law and order that enabled such disappearances to be staged with impunity.

We recommend that a system of Citizens' Advisory Services be set up, with an office at every Provincial Secretariat.

Chain-of-Command Responsibility

Gonsalwasam Thilakasena
v. 1. OIC Wagolla sub camp
2. Col. Karunathilake Co-ordinating Officer, Kegalle
3. Lt-Gen. Cicil Wydhiyaratne, Commander, Sri Lanka Army

Habeas Corpus Application 67/92.– [Finding this to be a case where the arrest and detention of the corpus falls into the category of cases where persons who have been arrested and detained by the authorities disappear thereafter, the Court of Appeal directed the second and third respondents to pay Rs. 100,000/- as exemplary costs to the petitioner, as respondensts who have failed to account for the detention of the corpus.]

Singappulige Nimalasena v. Col. Karunathilake, Co-ordinating Officer, Kalutara et al Habeas Corpus Application 442/89

In this case also the basis of liability was chain-of-command responsibility. Once detention by the army was proved, the area co-ordination officer was held responsible.

The Observations of the WGEID As far back as 8th January 1992, the United Nations Human Rights Commission's working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearances (WGEID) reporting on its visit to Sri Lanka stated specifically on Habeas Corpus procedure:[1]

The Habeas Corpus procedure in principle the most poweful tool available to complainants on disappearance is marred in Sri Lanka by the same deficiencies the Working Group has observed in other countries. Writs of Habeas Corpus can only be filed in the capital city, Colombo. Even for those who can travel the distance and avail themselves of legal counsel, results are on the whole disappointing. Usually, even if a Writ is referred to a local Magistrate by the Court of Appeal, a flat denial of any knowledge on the part of the security forces terminates the procedure. A Magistrate is not empowered to conduct any investigation in site for example by seeking access to places of detention.

The Working Group went on to recommend (inter al)

The govenment should prosecute more vigorously those responsible for disappearances and require that severe disciplinary punishment be meted out to government officials who have failed to take adequate measures to prevent disappearances. In particular, the Group finds it necessary to enphasize disregard for the requirements on registration of detainees should be severely dealt with, as well as acts of intimidation and reprisal against witnesses and relatives of disappeared persons.

Acts found to involve grave violations of human rights, such as disappearances, should not benefit from indemnity legislation.

Human Rights records of members of armed forces and the Police should be taken into account in the consideration of promotions (a practice stated to exist in other countries of the region). Members of these Forces under investigation for involvement in cases of disappearances should be suspended from active duty until inquiries are completed.

The Working Group's Report after a second special visit to Sri Lanka[1] reiterated this.

It is the finding of this Commission that an enlargement of jurisdiction alone will not suffice to make the High Court proceedings more accessible and more effective. For this, implementation is required of the recommendation that

Human Rights records of members of the Armed Forces and the Police should be taken into account in the consideration of promotions and Members of these Forces under investigation for involvement in cases of disappearances should be suspended, from active duty until inquiries are completed[2].

Threats to Petitioners and Lawyers. – In very many instances it was brought to the attention of this Commission that petitioners in Habeas Corpus Application[3] had themselves disappeared or had a lawyer representing them in the case being killed, or been forced to abandon the case through fear for the safety of the remaining members of the family.

The lawyer who filed my Habeas Corpus Application in respect of my two sons abducted by the Army, was killed. I was afraid to go on with the case. I have younger children.

[3] Also in Applications for Breach of Fundamental Rights in the S.C.

When my undergraduate borher was abducted from home and disappeared, my father filed a Habeas Corpus Application asking for his return. On the day my father was due to give evidence before the Magistrate in this case, he set out form home, but disappeared before he reached the court. To whom could my mother and I appeal thereafter ? I withdrew the application. I was afraid for the life of my remaining son.

I withdrew the application in respect of the disappearance of my Moratuwa University Undergraduate brother as I received threats and feared for my own safety.

My brother filed a Breach of Fundamental Rights case in the Supreme Court in respect of torture suffered at the hands of the Police when he was taken in by them in connection with the robbery of a cigarette van. The Supreme Court awarded him Rs. 20,000/- and directed the Inspector General of Police to take steps against the Police Officers concerned. My brother went to sign the Book at the Police Station that week[1] as required by his Bail order. My mother went with him. As they hadn't returned by evening, my father went to the police station to look for them. All three have disappeared. Our appeals to the Superintendent of Police has not been responded to[2]

Enlargement of Magistrates Courts jurisdiction to enable prompt application.– Habeas Corpus Applications which were brought to the Commission's notice are applications filed in respect of incidents that took place, 6, 7 or 8 years ago. The experience of the petitioners who filed them and of judges who considered them, must be utilised as the basis for meaningful reforms of both the law and the administration of the law, so as to render the administration of the Writ of Habeas Corpus more responsive to the needs that arise in a situation of disappearance. First and foremost is speed of response. The opportunity to invoke this jurisdiction no sooner a situation of unacknoledged custody arises, is the first requisite.

Your Commissioners recommend the enlargement of the Magistrate's Courts jurisdiction to empower the Magistrate to receive the affidavits of the petitioner and his witnesses, to register the petition and forward to the High Court, plus the empowerment of the Magistrate to entertain the petitioner's application that the (the Magistrate) visit the place of alleged unacknowledged detention.

[1] He had been granted bail on the condition he reports to the Police Station once a week.

[2] The petitoner (and his parents) thus disappeared before they could be summoned to give evidence at any 'Disciplinary Inquiry' etc.

The reference in the evidence is to S.C. Application 24/89.

The SC order in that case passed strictures on the Police, drwing attention to the fact that in an earlier case of a similar nature, also in the same Police Station, the SC had awarded damages of Rs. 10,000/-

Neither the pronouncement of the Court nor the award made appears to have deterred the Police in resorting to the illegalities established in the instant case.

The SC ordered a copy of the judgement to be forwarded to the IGP ; "to enable him to consider further steps be way of disciplinary action or otherwise, in the light of the findihg of the Commission'.

This would have the following positive factors:

* Obviate the unsatisfactory position as at present, of the Magistrate, face with an allegation on one part and the denial by the authorities on the oth being seen to accept to denial, without more.

* Obviate the delays attendant on an initiation of action by court being on after the Attorney General/Forces Commander or Inspector General o Police/and specifically named respondents/have filed answer in court.

* If pressure is brought on the respondent by this procedure to change a unauthorised detention to an authorised one the objective of the Habea Corpus Application is already achieved. It is the Commisssion's experienc that petitioners do not file Habeas Corpus Applications in order to get a compensation award for a disappearance. Their hope and their prayer is t locate the disappeared person alive, and to transform an unauthorise custody to legal detention.

The Writ of Habeas Corpus is a civil remedy:

It is therefore within the petitioners power to initate proceedings first. Granted a speedy means of verification, the citizen would himself be able to create the firs safeguard against an eventual disappearance.

The Habeas Corpus Writ procedure would continue to be two-tired. The Magistrate's function would continue to be that of the ascertainment of fact. The High Court would continue to be the ultimate arbiter on the issues of responsibility and compensation.

The delays attendant on the present three-stage procedure (5 years, on average at present) gives the final decision of the Court of Appeal an aspect of being a commentary on history:

The disappearance has taken place-what remains for consideration is only the question of an award for a wrong suffered.

The Writ of Habeas Corpus is constitutionally enshrined in the law of Sri Lanka. The changes of procedure recommended require an amendment to the Constitution.

Your Commissioners are confident that a Bill designed to strengthen the utilitarian value of the Writ of Habeas Corpus will be passed without division by Parliament. We are strengthened in our conviction by the example of the recognition accorded at the United Nations General Assembly to the Declaration on Enforced Disappearances and the Declaration on Extra-judicial Execution, both of which were pased without division by the General Assembly.

The Effect of an Habeas Corpus Application Award.– 2 aspects need considertion.

A. The Non-Payment of the Award

Various instances of the failure to pay compensation despite a court award have been brought to the attention of this Commission.

In HCA 164/89, 171/89 and 166/89 the Court of Appeal of 16.11.94 directed the respondents[1] to pay an exemplary award of Rs. 100,000/- each to the petitioners. The respondent's application for special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court was refused. The respondent died thereafter without payment of the awards.

In HCA 103/91 and 13/91 the Court of Appeal on 15.09.95 awarded the respective petitioners Rs. 100,000/- as costs against the respondents.[2] The respondent's application for special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court was refused. The respondent Police officer has left the country without payment of the award.

It is accordingly recommended that

1. Respondents be required to deposit the sum of award in court, pending appeal
2. That the obligation to pay the award be available against a respondent's assets and, if he has died, against his estate.

B. The Effect of an Order to Pay

2. Institutional Respondent

i.e.– Commanding officer/officer-in-charge who has not cast himself in the role of individual perpetrator.

It is recommended that the fact of an award by court v. him should go into his service record and thereby affect promotion, increments etc.

Interdiction until the end of the inquiry however, is unsuitable in his case, as his culpability transpires only at the end of the inquiry, once the perpetrators culpability is affirmed.

The provision of the opportunity for a vigorous exercise of the rights inherent in the Writ of Habeas Corpus is the best safe-guard against a climate of impunity once again raising its head in Sri Lanka[14]. The exercise of the rights to bring the issue to the attention of the courts contributes to the creation of confidence in the citizen that his rights are firmly protected. The participation of civil society through the provision of assistance by legal aid organisation, goes towards strengthening civil society itself.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Publicity to be given to the availability of the remedy of Habeas Corpus and the support services available from the Bar Association of Sri Lanka / Law Commission / Movement for Development and Democratic Rights (MDDR) and Lawyers for Human rights and Development (LHRD).

2. Contributions from State funds to legal aid organisations.

3. Instructions to Commanders of Forces to co-operate with the Courts.

4. Courts of first instance to be identified wherever possible as most accessible to the petitioner i.e. the Magistrate's Court.

PART II

EMERGENCY REGULATIONS

"The Public Security Act and the fregulations made there under gave no authority to destroy persons."

"The Procedure for dealing with persons arrested and detained under the Emergency Regulations of 1989 left the way open for disappearances to take place with the greatest feast."[2]

The expansion of the powers given under the Regulations to the Police and the armed forces accompanied by the reduction of the occasions and degree of scrutiny by the judicial system, assisted in creating an environment within which the incedents reported to the Commision took place.

Emergency Regulations constitute Special legislation that amounts to a deviation from the regular law on crime previention and crime investigation. They operate along side the Code of Criminal procedure, Penal code and Evidence Ordinance which together presents a criminal justice system where in there exists the necessary safeguards for the protection of the interests of all parties regarding issues of crime prevention, investigation of crime, the detention of persons and admissibility of evidence.

The Supereme Court of Sri Lanka has repeatedly stated that the requirements laid dowm by the Regulations for the Regulations' Provisions to come into operation, should be strictly observed.

In order to prevent or minimize " disappearances" and abuses, it is of paramount importance that the requirements laid down by regulations would be strictly observed. They were not intended for merely cosmetic purposes, but for the sake of fulfilling the basic obligation of the state to ensure the personal security and liberty of all persons.[3]

Even assuming the existence of credible evidence against him the police had no power to have arrested the 6th accused under Regulations 18 (1) as stated in the detention order (2R 1). That regulation only empowers an arrest on account of an offence under Emergency Regulations. Murder as such is not such an offence. It is an offence in respect of which an arrest can only be made under Section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. As such, the impugned arrest is illegal for failure to effect it according to procedure prescribed by las and is therefore violative of Article 13 (1) of the Constitution.[4]

The Commission accordingly recommends that steps to design alternatives to the prevailing state of emergency are taken by the state, and until such steps are taken, that the utilisation of the powers under the state of emergency in minimised.

Further to the above, the Commission recommends that the under rlying principles to the Regulations made under the emergency powers should be as follows :

Scrutiny of Emergency Regulations.– This Commission recommends a mechanism be set up within Parliament entrusted with the specific task of the scrutiny of each regulation before its monthly promulgation by Parliament. Currently, whilst the extension of the Emergency itself is subjected to discussion by Parliament on a monthly basis and the Public Security Ordinance provides that Parliament may revoke, amend of modify a regulation, this rarely happpens. We consider that the provision of such a mechanism would further strengthen the resolve that "secrecy is to be displaced by publicity and openness" which the Supreme Court has identified to be the objective of the provision in the current Regulations that all places of detention authorised by the Secretaryt of Defence must be published in the Gazette and be notified to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the place of detention is located.[1]

Publicity to the content of Regulations.– It is recommended that the contents of Emergency Regulations are given wide publicity through the media each month at the time of their renewal. The regulations would be worded in clear and unambiguous language, and be drafted under the supervision of the Legal Draughtman.

Arrest :The evidence before the Commission of the arbitrary removal of persons indicates that even wher the removal was by officials of the state the persons removed were not told the reason why they were being taken. In addition, no information was made available as to who was the arresting authority or where they were being taken. A disappearance could ensue from such an irregular arrest with little poser in the law enforcement system to intervene. The Commission accordingly recommends that the regulation must :

(i) Specify the situation under which arrests without warrants can be made, and by whom ;

(ii) require that the arrestee is informed at the time of arrest of the reasons for the arrest ;

(iii) the arrestee as well as the persons who are with him must be informed of the identity of the arresting officer ;

(iv) state that the present requirement of the issue to the family of a receipt containing the above particulars will be strictly enforced without exception.

Detention

Place of Detention.–"I looked for him all over the country" was a familiar refrain in the evidence of the many petitioners before the Commission. We welcome the fact that detention is required to be only at a place which is designated as an authorised place of detention by the relevant authority. We recommend:

1. That adequate publicity be given to the authorised places of detention:
(i) at a central regional office

(ii) through public display at the Magistrate's Court, Gramasevaka's office and the District Secretary's office of the area concerned.

2. That the regulation should include the requirement of prompt handing-over to the custodial authorities:
(i) that members of armed forces hand over persons arrested by them to the officer in change of the nearest Police Station and

(ii) Custody of the arrestee be handed over to the prison authorities as soon as possible. The task of the prison authorities is detention, independent of any investigation process that may be involved.

These requirements shall apply equally to a change of place of detention.

3. Conditions of Detention.– It is recommended that:

(i) The prison rules are made applicable to the detention of persons under the emergency regulations, including the right of detainee to communicate with family and legal counsel.

(ii) That the Detainees are produced before the Magistrate within 24 hours of the arrest.

4. Detention Order.– The Commission welcomes the fact that the authority of the Secretary to the Ministry of Defence on issuing and renewing a detention order is subject to a period of one year. The Commission recommends:
(i) that the regulations require that the reason for the order be recorded on the order itself.

(ii) that the Magistrate be empowered to require the Secretary to provide supplementary information regarding the detention order when inquiring into the extension of the detention order.

5. Recording arrest and detention / Reporting it.– The Commission recommends that the regulations should be amended to include:

(i) the requirement for a Register of record of arrest and detention to be maintained

(a) at the place of detention

(b11) the main army camp/police station, where the arrest/detention is at a temporary post.

(ii) The Commission recommend that the arrest and detention of persons must be notified within 24 hours of the arrest, to:

(a) the Local Magistrate

(b) the Local Administrative Service

(c) the Human Rights Commission / Human Rights Task Force

(iii) The Commission recommends that the issue of receipts to members of the family of the detainee and/or a person elected by detainee must be strictly monitored.

(iv) That the regulations should require the issue of receipts regarding the place of detention and the details of the detention/remand order.

6. Information regarding the arrest/detention.–"We asked everywhere the a police, the Army, the ICRC, the Presidential Mobile Secretariat" was another familiar refrain before the Commission. It is recommended that a Register of all persons detained under Emergency Regulations is kept at the District Secretary's office and regularly updated[1]

7. The consequences of Non adherence to Regulations.– This Commission recommends –

(i) an alleged violation of the regulations by an officer of the state should be the subject of a disciplinary Inquiry by an Inquiring Officer from outside the service concerned.

(ii) That penalties of suspension, termination of service, loss of promotional rights and other disciplinary action be taken against persons found by the disciplinary inquiry to have violated the regulations.

(iii) When the violation amounts to a criminal act, that the Attorney General initiates criminal proceedings without delay.

[1] As at present there is no central place which information regarding the detention of persons is available to the members of the family/friends/legal representative of the detainee.

While the present regulations provides a procedure for dealing with a non-adherence of the regulations, and the Presidential directives of July 1995 under the HRTF regluations specify clearly that every member of the armed forces and of the police force shall ensure that fundamental rights of the persons arrested or detained are respected ..

no prosecutions have ensued. It is vital that the state itself is seen to be alert to the preservation of these rights by way of an institution of action in respect of alleged violators.

(iv) where the Supreme Court has found an officer to have acted in breach of fundamental rights, that –

(a) it is so recorded in his service record

(b) that action is taken against the officer concerned as given above.

8. Release from Custody/Rehabilitation.– Several cases of the disappearances of persons after a record of their release from custody has been proved before this Commission. The Commission recommends:

(i) that release should always be through courts

(ii) where the release is from detention under Emergency Regulations that the release should be to a relation who has proved his identity to the Court concerned.

(iii) While the Commission welcomes the concept of rehabilitation of detainees it is requisite that a record of released and relase to arelative be required in this case also

9. The disposal of bodies.– the phenomenon of disappearances in this Commission's experience has not been limited to the removal of person only. The result of the removal was in most cases the death of the abductee. Most families however remain unaware of the subsequent experience of their loved ones. This has in turn created many of the situations faced by the persons giving evidence before the Commission. This Commission has lost count of the number of persons who began weeping at the mention of the availability of Death Certificates, as this was the first time they had to confront this fact. This Commission further notes that wherever an inquest had been held valuable evidence of the cause of death and the circumstances of the death were available to the Commission. The Commission accordingly recommends that:

(i) The Emergency Regulations should not eliminate the requirement of an inquest before the disposal of the bodies of the deceased.

(ii) The regulation should include a requirement that the bodies of the deceased should be returned to their families.

"Secret" (unauthorised) Detention Camps:

The spectre of secret places of detention continues to haunt petitioners. "I do not want you to consider my son as disappeared. I want you to find him. I hear there are secret detention camps, please go there and find my son" was a plea addressed to the Commission on several occasions. This Commission recommemds that:

(i) That immediate steps are taken to remove any possibility of the existence of such camps; a possibility which has been established in judicial proceedings.[1]

(ii) Such steps should include a through investigation by independent parties into complaints made regarding the existence of such camps.

PART III

THE PHENOMENON OF MASS GRAVES

The phenomenon of Mass Graves is a macabre pointer to the clandestine nature of the counter-insurgency operations carried out in this period. Their very existence and the recoveries from them, bear vivid witness to a complete disregard of the constitutionally guaranteed safe-guard of the physical security of persons in detention.

The existence of twelve Mass Graves have been reported to this Commission. They are:

1. The Hokandara Mass Grave
2. The Essella School Mass Grave
3. The Wavulkelle Mass Grave
4. The Walpita Government Farm Mass Grave
   (2 to 4 are in the Gampaha District)
5. Ambagahahenakanda Mass Grave
6. Bemmulla Mass Grave
7. Kottawakella, Yakkalamulla Mass Grave–Galle District
8. The Dickwella Mass Grave at Heendeliya
9. Diyadawakelle, Deniyaya, Mass Grave
10. Wilpita Akuressa Mass Grave
    (8 to 10 are in the Matara District)
11. Angkumbura Mass Grave–Matale District
12. Suriyakanda Mass Grava–Monaragala District

The Hokandara, Essella, Wavulkelle, Walpita Farm, Angkumbura and Suriyakanda Mass Graves have been disinterred on judicial order. This Commission accepts the evidence of the existence of the others. Their existence raises the likelihood of other mass Graves being in existence, unreported as yet.

Mass Graves have been located at the sites of pits carved out by a bomb explosion as in the cases of the Hokandara, Dikwella and Angkumbura Mass Graves. The Wilpita, Akuressa Mass Grave is located at the site of an Army Camp. They may be located at public place such as a public highway (Hokandara), the village school (Essella) or a government farm (Walpita). Even when located in a remote place as in the case of the Suriyakanda Mass Grave they are often within sight and control of state security installations.

These Graves are a far cry from the shallow unmarked Grave set up in attempted concealment of an individual crime. And of an entirely different genre from the JVP's public display of brutally butchered victims' bodies. Sophisticated logistics have gone into their creation: modern fire-arms; heavy vehicles.

All these Mass Graves reported to this Commission are a matter of knowledge shared by the people of the area where the Mass Graves are located, even though unknown nationally and unacknowledged by the authorities. Several have attempted to report their knowledge to the authorities at the time when the Mass Graves came into existence. The police either do not record or record the report as merely that of a "disappearance": "I did so on superiors orders" admitted the recording officer to the Criminal Investigation Department which was conducting investigations on the Magistrate's order consequent to the disclosure of the existence of a Mass Grave (Hokandara Mass grave) in the Middle of the main road of a Colombo suburb.

Others with knowledge did not report to the authorities through fear, understandable in the circumstances.

In several instances the authorities could not have failed to have been aware themselves of the creation of the Mass Grave in question, for they occur in public places: a busy through fare as in the case of the Hokandara Mass Grave, a Government Farm or a State school (Walpita and Essella). But the recording and investigative authorities of the state are signal in their failure to record and investigate. Credible evidence has been led to the Commission that the Hokadara Mass Grave remained and open grave for a period of at least one week. And yet police officers now holding senior positions professed to the Commission complete ignorance of its existence, while producing police Books of Record of a visit so inspection to the site of the original bomb explosion. This is another hall-mark of these cases, and constitutes significant evidence of whom the recording authorities considered to be creators of the Mass Graves in question.

At another level, the lack of action by the recording and investigative authorities signified an attitude of indifference. For instance, the judicial Medical Officer in his report of his visit to the Vavulkelle site has noted the statements of a police officer as follows:

> Stated that when he visited the scene he saw the fire blazing with logs and tyres and burning bodies. He did not extinguish the fire as his superior officers have asked him to see that such bodies are destroyed and dumped off.

A female petitioner before the Commission giving evidence in respect of the same Mass Grave unknowingly corroborated the police officer's account of his conduct related above.

> When we heard bodies were burning at Wavulkelle after my husband and uncle were abducted, uncle's family hired a car and got there early. So they were able to identify the partially burnt corpses. I went on foot and by the time. I got there some one had buried the remains scattering them around. Dogs were eating some of the remains; others were scattered around; besides what was dug up by the magistrate afterwards. So I couldn't find my husband's body. His ring was found among the remains by the CID.

In several instances, the site of the Mass Grave was the scene of destruction wrought by subversive act. The bodies therein were reprisal killings in respect of that subversive act. e.g.

Hokandara Mass Grave was in a crater created by a subversive bomb explosion in which police officers died. The Mass Graves at the Walpita Farm came into existence following on the destruction by subversives of the farm building and the post office, the Rural Bank and a private shop at that junction. It is in evidence before the Commission that a pile of burning bodies had been on display at that junction that day.

The creation of a Mass Grave in the compound of the Yatagama School at Essella was preceded by the sound of the arrival of heavy trucks to the village and the sound of the gun shots, followed by a very public exhibition of the bullet-riddled bodies of several young men and women in the drain adjoining the school located in the vicinity on the ancestral home of a army officer which had suffered a subversive attack.

> Several of us from adjoining villages went to see the bodies lying in a row in the drain by the Yatagama school. Some bodies were very much charred. In some cases the clothed had burnt away and the bodies were baked. I remember in one instance the face was untouched ; it was blind-folded, with a gun shot injury on the forehead.

The above is the evidence of a petitioner in another case unconnected to the Essella Grave.

In some instances such as Essella and Hokandara, the bodies themselves were weapons of terror, and there was no attempt to conceal their existence prior to their interment in a Mass Grave, although pains had been taken to prevent individual identification. More usually, there are "disappearances", on the one hand, and there are "Mass Graves", on the other ; whether in the same area or not.

The significant relevance of the existence of Mass Graves to the subject of our mandate cannot be over-stated. The phenomenon of Mass Graves bears a sigificant correlation to the massive number of disappearances that have taken place in the period under review, independent of any idntification of a corpse disinterred to a particular person who has disappeared. There is a significant correlation also to the validity of the evidence of the alleged returned detainees describing various practices of torture in places of detention.

There are very many more Mass Graves known to the local inhabitants of the area in which they are located. In view of the nature of the evidence coming to light from the excavations to date, it is very evident that a full record of the location and other attendant particulars of such graves should be collated while personal first-hand knowledge of them still exists. This must be done without delay for a further reason. On the date that the Suriyakanda mass Grave was due to be opened on the Magistrate's order, fresh corpses dug up from fresh graves were left along the route in obvious intimidatory warning to potential witnesses : "This is what will happen to You, should you disclose what you know".

Excavation however should await until such time as the requisite forensic and technical knowledge and skills are available in Sri Lanka as valuable evidence is destroyed by the exposure of buried human remains in the absence of adequate preventive safegaurds being observed. The excavation of Mass Graves in now an area of specialised knowledge and skills.[1]

Dr. Ravindra Fernando, professor of Forensic Medicine, University of Colombo stated :

> Identification of human remains is one of the major problems in the investigations of crimes in Sri Lanka. Inadequate facilities and non-availability of expertise result in undue delay in criminal investigations where human identification is an issue. Sometimes, the investigations have to be abandoned

> It is accordingly advisable to establish a Human Identification Centre (HIC) in the University of Colombo, to:
> (a) Train forensic pathologists and scientists in all aspects of identification
> The HIC can be established by:
> (a) Providing infrastructure facilities, such as necessary buildings communication and other office facilities and other modern equipment and consumables.
> (b) Training scientists in the Scotland Yard or other similar laboratory for a period of three to six months on modern identification techniques.

This Commission recommends the establishment of a Human Identification Centre as outlined by Prof. Fernando.

There is another inference to be drawn from the phenomenon of Mass Graves in this period. In this period corpses had a value of their own independent of a particular identity. Bodies set alight with "tyre necklaces". Charred defaced bodies by the road side, bodies on lamp-posts, were a common sight intended to strike the beholder with terror. And yet the supply available of bodies was "too much" what a sad commentary of the times.

" FOR A WEEK THE MIDDLE OF OUR ROAD WAS AN OPEN MASS - GRAVE "

WOMEN

Introduction

"What right do they have to cause this loss to us and to the country?"

This chapter deals with several aspects in which women were affected during t period under scrutiny by this Commission, the continued effect on women of t excesses committed during that period and the reaction of women to the situati including the activities of women both at a socio/religious level and at a politic legal level as recognition of resistance to the existing dominant politic environment.

The Commission makes specific recommendations in respect of some of t issues arising from the experience of women.

Women as Victims

The Commission found that women were victimised in two ways: as abductees detainees and as persons left behind[1].

Abductees/Detainees

201 disappearances of females were reported to the Commission of which 17 were inquired into. The disappearance of 148 of them was establishe Approximately 50% of the cases were from the Southern Province; over 25% we from the Matara District.

Radhika Coomaraswamy, U.N. Special Rapporteur on "Violence again Woman including its Causes and Consequences", in her evidence before t Commission drew attention to the fact that the practice of sexual or other violen against women is an international trend of war in recent times, and made a specif appeal that a consideration of this aspect should form part of our Report.

The removal or killing of a person has at times been sought to be justified as a extension of the working of the criminal justice system (arrest, detentio sentencing-imprisonment and death). i.e. that this act was occasioned by a brea down in the state's or anti-state group's concept of law and order[2], The sexu violence practiced on woman however can not be sought to be justified in the sam manner.

1. Apparent Motives Attached to the Disappearances

(i) Personal involvement in political type activity - 15% Most of these wome were directly involved with political activity[3], but three were killed due to th nature of their employment[4].

[1]In this section, the term "victim" is used as in the case of a victim of an offense or as situati beyond the control of the immediate person.

[2]"Excesses"

[3]Party membership/activism, Union membership.

[4]Employment in the State sector.

(ii) Family involvement in politics - 33% These include women who were abducted as hostages instead of the actual target. Of the menbers of the families involved, there were only 2 incidents of disappearance of woman due to political activity of a female relative.

In one case, a woman was killed by soldiers who were looking for her two sons on the basis that she was "loud mouthed".

In one of the most devastating examples before the Commission of women victimised in this manner the security forces killed seven members of one family including six females (one six years old) on the basis of one male's alleged involvement with the JVP.

(iii) Personal motives – 13%.– The personal motives involved incidents when persons disappeared or were killed due to disputes within the community. However, several cases also point to a personal motive against the individual woman who had disappeared. In one case the mother of a young woman who had disappeared stated to the Commission that "my daughter was very beautiful. She refused a proposal of marriage from a police constable and disappeared a few days later". In another case, a mother of a girl who had been raped and killed and the body recovered stated to the Commission that she was killed "simply because of her womanhood".

(iv) Other political motives - 9%.– This included ideological position of various political groups such as non-cooperation with the State, not working on certain days and not assisting the "other side". As far as the state forces were concerned, a further motive of the need to cover up irregular/illegal acts was also established.

* A woman and her daughter were abducted and the woman killed by the JVP for refusing to cook/provide food for its cadres.
* A woman who provided meals for a relative who was a member of the JVP was killed by the security forces, most probably as a warning to others who assisted the JVP in some way or the other.

In a striking example of a mixture of personal motive against the disappeared women as well as evidence of a dispute within the community was a case of a disappearance of two women following a complaint made by them to the office of the Deputy Inspector General of Police regarding the disappearance of some of their male relatives from the custody of the local police. Despite overwhelming evidence the local police denied arresting the four males, and then attempted to justify the arrest and provided further information. Although the men are now, supposedly arrested in connection with some crimes, no record of these crimes exists. Inquiries reveal that some of the men had a reputation of committing petty crimes and their activities were monitored by the JVP. One of the women was a keen social worker and was involved in most village activities including supplying food to persons in hiding from the police (suspected of JVP activities). Although several members of families had visited the men in the police station, it was only the two women who disappeared. The only conclusion that the Commission is able to come to is that the women most probably disappeared due to their complaints to the D.I.G.

The dilemma of most ordinary people is highlighted by this case. One's activities were being monitored by every one. One's friends and relations needed one's assistance due to being under suspicion and not/providing assistance could in itself be dangerous. While the whole community is able to give evidence of the arrest and subsequent detention of these men for over two weeks, the police could keep denying the arrest even upto date. Requesting further investigations during that period was not only fruitless but also proved dangerous.

(v). Motive Unknown - 28%.–

* A 46 year old mother of two was killed by unknown persons who came to her house.

* One woman and another villager were killed when a soldier went on a drunken spree in the village.

(vi) Outside Mandate - 2%.– Disappearances that occurred before the date of inception of the Mandate.

2. Ages of the Disappeared

The biggest single category age-wise were within the age 20 - 30 years (approximately 35%). A relatively high number of women of between the age of 40 - 50 years (approximately 30%) also disappeared. Almost 10% of the incidents reported to the Commission involved disappearance/killings of girls under 18 years. Another 10% of the incidents reported were of women over 50 years of age. It is the opinion of the Commission that these statistics are an indication of the arbitrary nature of the disappearances and/or killing of women.

3. Experience of Women detainees and abductees

Whilst this Commission is unable to come to definite conclusions regarding the range of experience of women who disappeared due to inadequate evidence, the following cases are an indication of the sexual harassment faced by these women. In some cases where the bodies of the women were recovered, the bodies bore evidence of sexual abuse including rape. In many cases women were abducted or harassed in place of their male relatives.

* A 17 year old girl was blindfolded, stripped, subjected to various comments from the abductors and forced to participate in sexual acts with her fellow detainees. This girl together with all but one (the witness before the Commission) were killed the next day and their bodies set on fire.

* In a case presently before the Magistrate's Court of Colombo, a woman was abducted in 1990 by a group of police men and allegedly subjected to gang rape. She was returned to her home within 24 hours of her abduction by the same men. The non summary inquiry into the incident is still continuing.

* In a case presently before the Magistrate's Court of Matara, a woman was allegedly raped by a group of soldiers and her uncle, who reported the incident to the police, disappeared a week later. This inquiry is being conducted over seven years and is yet to be concluded.

* Army personnel in search of a youth who was away from home, wanted a member of the family as hostage. They rejected the father on the basis that "no use of old codgers, we'll take that girl" and did so. This girl and another girl were abducted from the same area. It has been established since then that both girls had been raped and killed and their bodies had been burnt. The mother of the first girl told the Commission "people know about this (the rape) so I have nothing to hide. She was so small and fragile. I don't know why they did this to my little girl".

* Army personnel who abducted from his home a JVP Trade Unionist, deposited him in their vehicle, and returned to abduct his 16 year old daughter too, before their departure. Both father and daughter have disappeared.

* A women was assaulted and her ten month old daughter was buried upto her neck in the garden by Army personnel in search of her husband. Her ten year old son was abducted at the same time. Reports indicate that the husband was later killed but there is no news of her son to date.

* A man was killed by persons who were allegedly attached to the neighbourhood Navy camp. His wife told the Commission that "my husband was shattered into pieces by the gun fire. Then, they took away my only two daughters". The two girls remain missing to date. The mother continues to list them as part of her family, even up to the date of giving evidence before the Commission.

These are some examples.

4. The Climate of Impunity

"Any one could behave in this manner during this period"

The Commission is of the opinion that the climate of impunity existing during the major part of the period under scrutiny lead to the victimisation of women as much as men. Not only were personal scores settled but some of the personal scores seem to be linked directly with the femaleness of the victim. Further, all parties to the civil conflict had an established pattern of warning off potential members of the other side by killing or harassing relatives of known members of the opposite camp. This practice obviously affected the persons who were most at home –women and children."Rape is never in good faith"[1].

[1] Rabhika Commeraswamy.

The Commission has recommended that the contents of and the need for the Indemnity Act requires serious reconsideration[1]. The Commission is particularly concerned with the fact that the present Act indemnifies acts which are done in "good faith". As far as women are concerned, much of their experience does not tally with any possible involvement of the concept of "good faith".

Shooting while you are being shot at could be an act done in good faith even if it results in death. Rape can never be in "good faith" – killing and burning one and a half year olds is not in "good faith".

Many violations of the rights of women and many acts of violence against women which cannot be considered necessary in the ordinary course of law enforcement were committed upon persons who gave evidence before us and may have been committed on many more. Presently, there are several cases pending in courts of charges of rape and sexual abuse against members of the armed forces and the police. In this context, we urge that urgent action be taken with regard to the Indemnity Act of 1982 as amnded in 1988.

1. Effects of Disappearance of Women on Families

It is the children of the mothers who disappear who suffer the most the disgusting activities of both the governmental and anti-state forces during that period has lead to the deprivation of many mothers of many young children

Over 50% of the incidents analysed by the Commission were of women who had children. over 30% of the incidents analysed by the Commission were of several members of the family being killed or disappearing.

* In a case where a women was taken hostage instead of her husband, her neighbours refused to open their doors to her twelve year old son.

2. Effect of Disappearances of Family Members on Women

I am like Patachara – driven from police station to police station looking for first my husband and then my two sons.

(i) Breadwinner of the Family

Someone has to find the money to feed the rest
My mother is in the Middle East
My husband/children do not want to/can not work so I work as a labourer
I take care of my mother-on-law as well.

There was overwhelming evidence of women being thrust into, the role of primary breadwinner of a family due to the disappearance. In some incidents, the sole or primary breadwinner had disappeared. In some, the primary breadwinner has been rendered incapable by the fact of the disappearance of another (illness depression).

[1] See Chapter Seven.

any women, although initially uncomfortable with the role seen to have esponded positively to this further challenge to their survival. The fact of isappearance thus effected a further transformation of the role of women into an economic force at local level.

(ii) Loss of financial support

Help me by helping to educate my twins

The social fabric within which the disappearances recorded by this Commission occurred included very few employment opportunities for women. Thus, they had no alternative but low-paid or non employment. The family under these circumstances as a whole suffer.

(iii) Deprivation of Inheritance

They told me that it does not belong to me or the children.

The Commission recorded several instances where women have been deprived of their lawful inheritance by their in-laws on the pretext that the husband is not necessarily dead. Many of the women also complain of being edged out of their husband's property, highlighting their vulnerability.

(iv) Uncertainty

They want me to get married again but he might still be alive
Tell me whether to celebrate his birthday or commemorate his death
If he died of fever, a bus accident, I would have been informed
Its very difficult to explain to a child the absence of a father countless women bore witness to the fact that the most devastating aspect of isappearances as oppoesed to a killing and recovery of a body lay in the inability o cope with the loss due to uncertainty. Many believe that their loved ones are eing held in secret detention camps. The need to know the "truth" was clearly itnessed at the exhumation of the mass grave at Sooriyakanda in 1983. Several ersons kept vigil desperately attempting to identify the exhumed remains as that f their disappeared loved one.

(v) Trauma

Widow/mother/sister commited suicide
My heart wished to bring him (corpse) home but no one would help me
Now I am not in my right senses
I am consumed by flames each and every moment
Returned destitute from Lebanon due to the war to find sons missing

(vi) Precious resources used up in looking for the disappeared .

I mortgaged my dowery look for my son-please find him

I looked everywhere for my daughter but it was of no avail. Now I have give up, partly because I can no longer continue on the same basis and partly becau I am emotionally exhausted.

(vii) Guilt

Many Women feel that they were responsible for the disappearance.

* A woman who visited her parent's home had her husband abducted b police officers who were searching for her brothers. The husband remai missing to date. This woman still deals with the double trauma of th disappearance of her husband and the sense that she is in some way or the othe responsible for his disappearance.

Reaction

(a) Legal/Political –

I went to the police station and they chased me away like a dog

I filed a Habeas Corpus Case but it is in Colombo and that's very far.

I did not know of Habeas Copus but I complained to the Presidenti Commission but was told I was out of time.

I wrote about 100 letters but got replies only from the ICRC.

The police station did not record the statement so I went to the Army ca and they did.

I signed a petition.

I went to the JOC – never heard of it until then – I am illiterate – othe told me.

This Commission wishes to record the fact that many of the women who ga evidence before it did not have a functional level of literacy but had taken at le some of the basic steps towards an inquiry into the disappearance/killing of th loved ones. However, the responses to these attempts were, at best, lukewarm a in some instances actively hostile. the attempts of the ICRC to trace t whereabouts of persons and the sensitivity with which they responded was borne by the numerous letters produced before the Commission which were pro replies in Sinhala and followup letters where relevant from the ICRC to famil While several non governmental organisations provided free legal assistance persons wishing to access the legal system, and actively encouraged perso resort to legal action, the lengthy delays and the distances to be cove discouraged many women from pursuing these cases to their end.

I went to the police station and they chased me away like a dog.

(b) Women's Organisations

I am the branch President of the Mother's Front..

I went for many Meetings/Marches

The political response to disappearances and removal of persons by women had the capacity of shaking the system to a fair extent. Many women who had rarely left their home areas went in search of politicians with a reputation for or, in their perception, a duty to help trace the disappeared. The formation of groups of women into organisations, such as the Mother's Front and the Mothers and Daughters of Lanka as well as the Organisation of Parents of Families of disappeared in 1989 and 1990 also signalled a change in the activities of the patterns of disappearances. These organisations not only proved to the women their own strength and political power but also provided for the first time a platform for shared grief.

(c) Last Resort

I consulted 72 soothsayers.

I am still doing Bodhi Poojas.

As many as 50 mothers stay near the camp at a time to catch a glimps of their child.

This Commission notes that in addition to attempting to have their complaints/ statements recorded and going around looking for the disappeared, many women consulted astrologers and soothsayers to verify whether their loved ones were still alive and if so their places of detention. They conducted religious ceremonies to protect the disappeared from any harm. An informal network of information regarding possible places of detention and places to complain to existed and also, in some situations, support from others congregated at the same place on the same quest.

The Commission was stuck by the fact that whilst different women had been involved in a variety of activity and many had taken some steps to locate their loved one, an overwhelming number of women consistently consulted astrologers and soothsayers and conducted religious ceremonies. This leads to the conclusion that these were people losing faith in the legal and political system in place and preferring to rely on the least threatening and, in many ways, the most reliable source of comfort, for information. This may seem the response of illiterate, uneducated peasants, However, the Commission notes that persons of all educational and social backgrounds had relied on this last-resort remedy available.

Problems

(a) Erasure of Abductees' experience.– Much of the evidence of the experience of abductees has been gathered by this Commission on the basis of post-mortem reports or other evidence in cases where a corpse had been found. Although this is sufficient to assesr the physical impact of the abduction, it is no guide to the emotional experiences of abductees. Only a few returned detainees were available to give evidence before the Commission of their experience and of the experience of others.

* It is recommended that steps be taken to ensure the investigation of th arbitrary removal and experiences in detention of returned detainees.

The other source of information regarding the abductees' experience is th abductor or persons assisting the abductor and the Commission identifies th importance of encouraging persons who may have been involved with th abductors, especially those who were only peripherally involved to give eviden of scenes witnessed by them.

* It is recommended that the possoibility of awarding indemnities based on th extent of these people's involvement or their ability to make reparation b explored.

(b) Sexual Abuse.– The issue of sexual abuse of detainees including of men ha been brought to the attention of the Commission on many occasions. It i apparent that sexual abuse is being used as an further form of punishment an control. The Commission recommends that :

(b) The reversal of the burden of proof in cases of custodial sexual abuse an also the award of punitive damages following conviction.

In many cases, the first medical officer a detainee comes into contact with is th Judicial Medical officer (JMO). It is recommended that"

(b) Effective counselling services are made available to the victims, bo while they are in custody and after the are relesed.

(c) Continuing Victimisation.– "Quite spontaneously, swamped by grief whi seemed to come from the bottom of their hearts, they began to beat their hands : their chests and will"[1]

(i) FINANCIAL

I spent the compensation on an alms giving
I don't want to gain money for my husband's loss.

* It is recommended that compensation to families of the disappeared or ki during this period goes beyond mere "cash" to the provision of scholarship employment.

* Further, when financial assistence is provided, that effective traini counselling is provided on savings including encouraging group activit

* Assistance for/training on home based self employment for wome another alternative that needs urgent implementation.

[1] Mathulatha, District Secretary of the Mothers' Front, Matara, describing the first meeti the Mothers' Front in 1990.

(ii) INABILITY TO COPE

I am out of my senses since I saw my son's headless cropse in the river
I beg in order to eke out a living for my children
I can not bear the uncertainty for much longer

One of the most obvious effects of this period has been the devastation of people's emotional ability to cope. Many witnesses before the Commission seem at the end of their tether. It is recommended that :

* Speedy action is taken to establish couselling services all over the country. Assistance can be sought from non governmental organisations which are already involved in providing these services to a cerain extent.

* It is further recommended that as far as the exhumation of mass grave in concerned, the exhumation is conducted in a scientific manner by qualified investigators[1]

(iii) STIGMA/COMMUNITY HOSTILITY

The Commission noted that many familes of the disappeared or killed suffer from being stigmatised on the basis of the disappeared person's political activity. Considerable tension exists between members of families of persons who belonged to rival camps. The community hostility towards families affected by the removal of persons was heightened by the former system of the distribution of compensation only to families affecte by subversive act.

It is recommended that:

* Both the counselling and the compensation be based on the need for rehabilitation of the whole community and reparation to the community. The counselling should include attempts at reconciling families of members of different parties to each other on the basis of shared loss, and to reconciling the community to the fact that families can not be held responsible for the acts of individuals, and to the reality of the additional sense of loss suffered by the families concerned. It is also recommended that as part of the process of reparation activities which are of common benefit like the repair of public amenities or the provision of public services be undertaken.

CONCLUSION

Women are always victims – The future of this country hangs on these women's ideas and ideologies[2]

[1] Suriya Wickremesinghe, Secretary, Civil Rights Movement, also recommended the same.

[2] Dr. Manorani Saravanamuttu

Disappearances started before 1989....did not stop after 1989....even if on disappearance occurs now it is evident that the system is still in place. If there no investigation - discovering the truth and acknowledgement - it can contin to happen[1].

This Commission notes that violence against women was used as a tool c control of a community (family, village, peers). The Commission also notes tha much of the pain of the violence against the men is borne by women and familie In this event, the Commission also recognises that it is the women who will play major role in the possible prevention of events of this nature from occurring agai

The conflict which lead to the establishment of this Commission, on the oth hand, has had very little input from women at a decision making level. Duri much of the period under serutiny by the Commission there were no women in th Politbureau of the JVP and the Commanders of the armed forces, Inspecto General of Police and the Ministers in charge of Defence were all men.

Under these circumstances, the socio/political impact of the establishment o the political groups by the women and their religious activities can not b underestimated. An unprecedented merger between the political and cultura forces was witnessed in 1993 when the political forces appropriated the religio rituals at the Kali Kovil in Colombo and the Devale at Kataragama in "appeals t the Gods" for justice.

This Commission concludes that the encouragement of active politica participation of women at all levels including at decision making levels cou minimise the possibility of the eruption of similar violence in the future.

PART II

THE CLERGY

Introduction

This section will assess the issues arising out of the disapperance of several members of the Buddhist clergy in the three Provinces[1]. The Commission is of the opinion that the impact of the disappearance of Buddhist monks merit special discussion for two reasons: that of placing the Buddhist clergy within the situation which arose during the period under the scrutiny of the Commission and to assess the impact of the disappearance of members of this clergy on society.

Where do they belong?

Persons ordered as Buddhist monks are placed in a special situation in the community. By the ordination, they leave their community of family and friends behind and join the community of Buddhist monks, Thus, at one level they no longer belong to their family.

This Commission concludes from the evidence before it that in practice, many monks belonged to both the community of monks and their original community of friends and colleagues. The traditional training of the clergy which was restricted to special institutions has changed and the clergy now access education and employment in multi cultural institutions. Not only did this create a different awarensess within the clergy but also this was the opportunity for interaction between the clergy and the community at a completely different level from the historic role played by the clergy.

What do they do?

A monk has do so much

He was killed while going to perform his duty[2]

He blessed someone who was about to start his election campaign

He chanted Pirith one hundred thousand times for peace

He was politically active and participated in the demonstrations against the Indo-Lanka Accord.

Traditionally and by vocation the clergy were expected to perform the dual function of religious leadership and service to the general community. The clergy has also been increasingly involved in political activity. Rev. Walpola Rahula, in his treatise in Sinhala on "The Heritage of a Bhikku" (Bhikshuwagey Urumaya) states:

We belive that every activity of benefit to mankind today belongs to politics. Everyone accepts that it is the duty of a Bhikku to develop the religion. The development of religion in a country depends on the development of its citizens.... Thus, it is suitable that a bhikku engages in activity geared tow the advancement of the citizens without taking into consideration that activity is political or not, provided that such activity does not contradict way of life of a Bhukku.

1. The Persons reported to have disappeared were all members of the Buddhist clergy.

2. This monk was killed on his way to an almsgiving for a supporter of the United National Party who had been himself killed, allegedly by subversives.

However the increasing politicisation of violence in the period under review, reduced the space available for non-violent means of engaging in democr political activity, thus giving rise to several new means of resistance to dominant political culture of this period.

Manawa Hithawadee Bhikku Peramuna and The Vinivida Magazine

Monks who were of the opinion that the clergy needed to respond as organisational collective to the threat posed, had organised themselves into Manawa Hithawadee Bhikku Peramuna to raise the voice of the monks on t issues. Though this organisation like many others was influenced by the preva anti-government sentiments and may have had a leaning towards the JVP the no evidence to show that it was ivolved as an organisation in activity. The Man Hithwadee Bhikku Peramuna published for a short period a magazine nam Vinividha. The founding Secretary Rev. Pitawela Dharmakirthi, 46 years old a teacher by profession, had been arrested on 20.08.89. and has since disappear

Who Cared

48% of the incidents reported to the Commission were solely by the families the monks who had disappeared. In some incidents, the temples that t disappeared person belonged to were reluctant to provide any informati whatsoever about the incidents.

In 27% of the incidents, both the temple concerned and the families of the disappeared persons participated at various levels to ascertain the whereabouts of the disappeared persons, to report the disappearance to the authorities concerned and to follow it up to the time of giving evidence before the Commission.

In 25% of the incidents, only the temples followed up the incident. In some cases the families of the disappeared persons were unable to provide much information to the Commission. Some members of the families had died since the incident and in other the families did not seem interested in following up the cases at all.

In almost 50% of the incidents, witnesses included lay persons including friends, colleagues and neighbours.

These statistics are an indication to the Commission of the relationships maintained by the clergy with the various communities to which they belonged.

How did these Incidents Take Place

1. Responsibility

4.98% of the incidents were at subversive hands. In over 50% the perpetrators were agents of the state. In the remaining 45% the Commission was not able to identify the category of perpetrators involved on the evidence available. However, there were no allegations against personel enemies in cases of disappearance of members of the clergy.

The reason for my son's disappearance was his apparent opposition to the Peace Accord. Is this fair? My son was only 17 at the time that the Accord was signed.

I did not complain to the police–I have a son at home.

Law had turned to unlaw at that time.

2. Impunity

The Commission notes that the pattern of the establishment of the climate of impunity as discussed in Chapter Six was apparent in the evidence of the petitioners in these cases as well. The evidence before the Commission shows that the arrivl of arresting authorities in vehicles without number plates at any time of the day and night, the breaking down of doors and forcible entry, intimidation and assault in public or in the temple or even on the highway, were common occurrences in respect of monks as well.

3. Political Opposition to the governing party

There is evidence that some monks were arrested because of their political opposition to the governing party at that time. As a witness stated in connection with the abduction of a monk from Abhinawaramaya, Papiliyawela. "His SLFP membership was the cause of his abduction".

Abductions during curfew hours were clearly with official authority. Veh without registration numbers were used in some incidents. The abduction ' Jayasumnaramaya of Mount Lavinia is one such instance. An instance w Bhikkus and attendants of Sri Jinaraja Viharaya, Veyangoda in Gampaha Di were shot and their bodies left at the foot of the Bo Tree by armed persons came in heavy vehicles in the curfew hours is another.

Evidence was given to the Commission of instances of lay-people as we Bhikkus who had implicated other Bhikkus in order to obtain the custodianshi the temple concerned.

4. Activities of the JVP

There is evidence of monks who were opposed to the JVP and held c political views being assassinated. Ven. Pohoddaramulla Pemaloka, C Advisor of the Sri Lanka Mahajana Party, and Ven. Kotikawatte Suddhatiss two exmples. Reports were received that in some areas from the South monks shot in the mouth for preaching Bana at the traditional memorial ceremon those killed by the JVP.

Impact of the Disappearance

This Commission has already made a detailed analysis of the impa disappearances on the community in Chapter Twelve and shall only outline special issues related to the clergy at this juncture.

1. Disjunction between Communities

> No one connected with the temple took any interest regarding this abduc
> I spent 14 years, the best part of my life, in the temple, why do they no any more ?[3]
> We don't even know where his family is any more, he was with us since h ten years old.

The Commission notes that it was only in respect of 27% of the incidents the clergy and the laity acted together in respect of following up disappearances. In all the other ceses, only one group was interested in follo up the incidents although the Commission took steps to notify all parties c complaints made to it.

2. The failure of the traditional organisational structures of Buddhist mon respond to the crisis situation

Many withnesses reported to the Commission that the traditional orgnisat structure of Buddhist monks – Nikayas, Sanga Sabha etc. did not have struc for the entertainment of complaints or for intervention in incidents of abdu and disappearance of member-monks. The teacher-pupil relationship ar between the abducted monk and the senior monk who inducted him in to the had mainly failed to respond to this new crisis situation.

[1] Letter to the family from a monk who was in detention at the time that the letter was writt has subsequently disappeared.

3. The Clergy at Risk

So many young priests gave up robes because of the situation during this period.

Several of the lay witnesses who gave evidence before the Commission were monks who had disrobed since the incident described by them. The evidence before the Commission of some Viharadhipathi's perception was that they were an increasingly vulnerable groups of person. Their dress and manner set them apart, easy to indentify, but at the same time, the idendification was very often skewed by their robes.

The destruction of a clever priest like this with a brilliant future is a loss to the country and to the sasana.

This temple was built at the request of the villagers, despite immense obstacles. He is the one who was always working. Now there is no one to ensure its continuance after me.

Almost all the priests whose disappearance/killing was reported to the Commission were persons who were outstanding in the temple and/or the area they came from. Many of them had been involved in political activity at various levels and were often identified as dynamic personalities on whom many persons and ideologies depended.

4. Grief

He was ten years old when he came to me. I am constantly pained by his loss. By looking for him, I am now ill – physically and mentally – his mother is also ill.

This Commission notes that both members of the clergy as well as the family are deeply grieved by these disappearances.

Loss of Support

All my other children are unemployed – only this son could help.

Please find him – if he is not there, find suitable employment for my other children.

The temple is not the same without him – he did so much.

The Commission notes that many of the disappeared monks whilst being within the temple, continued to support their families as well.

Recommendations

COMPENSATION

His mother is 75, Please help her – someone will help us.

This Commission recommends that the compensation payable in respect of a disappearance of a monk should be payable to the family.

PART III
TRADE UNIONS

It is an accepted fact that Trade Unions play a vital role in social development as a social force and pressure group. This fact is recognised and further consolidated in the UN Declaration on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights as well as various covenants of the Internal Labour Organisation to all of which Sri Lanka has acceded. The emergence and development of Trade Unions in Sri Lanka dates back to the 1930s and the right to form Trade Unions and take Trade Union action is guaranteed in the constitution.

In the relevant period however the state seems not to have seen Trade Unions in this light. The attitude of the state towards Trade Unions and Trade Union activists needs to be taken into consideration in analysing the disappearances of a number of Trade Union activists. The general strike called out by a large number of Trade Unions belonging to the Joint Council of Trade Union Organisations in 1980 July was suppressed utilizing the Emergency Regulations and the Essential Services Act which enabled the President to make any Trade Union actions illegal by the expedient of declaring that service to be an essential service. Attacks by legal as well as extra-legal forces were used to suppress the various protest activities of the J. CTU. O. in these years. The Greater Colombo Economic Commission Bill which proposed to establish Free Trade Zones, originally contained a provision banning the formation of Trade Unions in the FTZs. This provision barring the formation of trade unions was dropped from the Act after the Constitutional Court ruled it to be an infringement of rights under the Constitution. The reality in the FTZ, however, continued to be that no labour action was tolerated, and even representation at labour courts was looked upon as a threat to the establishment.

Trade Unions were perceived by the government to be a disinducement to foreign industrial capital investing in Sri Lanka. Trade Unions action in the FTZ as well as in other places like the Ceylon Tobacco Company, ABM etc. were seen not only as adversely affecting the economy, but also as sabotage by JVP activists. Hence the abductions by forces or para military groups of trade union activists. Another aim was to frighten the rest of the work force. There are instances where whole group of workers residing in one place being arrested and the majority being later released, but a few 'hard - core' individuals disappearing.

The equation of "anti - government" to "pro JVP" was a feature of the period and meant the trade union activists were a fair target for arrest, interrogation and disappearances.

The actions of the JVP and its armed wing, the DJV also indicate clearly that these organisations did not acknowledge the true role of Trade Unions. They intimidated and threatened dire consequences to those who resisted their calls for frequent work stoppages and 'Wild - cat' strikes. The slogans of the JVP were:

The mother - land first: the work place thereafter

Those not with us are against us

Trade union activists were frequently forced by threats to act as front - men for the JVP in the work stoppages, thus setting them up as targets for arrests by the State forces. This strategy was most apparent in the transport sector, in the hospitals, in the Banking sector as well as in some government corporations.

Nationally known trade unionists like L. W. Panditha, General Secretary, Ceylon Federation of Trade Unions, Wimalasena, General Secretary Government Workers Trade Union Federation, and Mahinda Bahu of Palawatta Sugar Company have been assassinated. Trade union activists of the Jathika Sevaka Sangamaya were specially targeted.

Some Illustrations Follow

Ranjith and Lionel were actively involved in promoting welfare and rights of the employees in the investment promotion Zone in Katunayake. Lionel was a full time activist who worked in a broad parameter and was a legal adviser attached to the workers 'Advisory Centre', a voluntary Organisation at Katunayake. Ranjith was involved in activities at his work place 'Floral Greens' situated in the Free Trade Zone.

Ranjith spoke up on behalf of workers at the work - place and organised a protest by workers at the inaction of the management when a fellow - worker injured his hand in the use of machinery. On 8th August the management forbade him to enter the premises on the allegation of a quarrel with a fellow employee. In September 89 Ranjith obtained a letter from the then Minister of Finance, D. B. Wijetunga that he was a supporter of the government, and a disciplinary inquiry was scheduled to be held on 27th October, 89. Ranjith and Lionel left the work - place on a cycle at the end of the inquiry around 8.00 p.m. Their charred bodies were identified the next morning at a public junction in the vicinity of the FTZ. Jeyaraj Fernandopulle, Attorney-at-law presently a Cabinet Minister who had conducted a Disciplinary Inquiry on the previous evening identified the items of attire. When Ranjith's and Lionel's friends went to that spot a while later they didn't find the bodies but found the marks of burial by the side of the road. The Police wouldn't record the complaint of Ranjith's fiancee. Mr. Jeyaraj moved in the matter and a distorted police investigation ensued into Lionel and Ranjith's political activities with the objective of showing they were JVPers. The CID is conducting an investigation from 1989. There has been no application to the Magistrate to a disinternment of the grave, let alone an inquest. The case accordingly remains one of "Disappearance" SASA, a Diamond-cutter at Blue Diamonds Factory FTZ who was abducted on 14.9.89 at his house by armed persons who came in a Delica van 3 days after the police had searched for him at the work-place is one of six employees of Blue Diamonds whose abduction and disappearance over a period of labour unrest there has been proved to the Commission. The police wouldn't entertain the complaint of SASA's father.

In August '89 there was industrial unrest and a struke at Ceylon Tobacco Company, a subsidiary of Imperial Tobacco Company. SC is one of the 10 emlpoyees who was abducted during the course of this strike. On 1.9.89 the army who came in search of SC on finding him absent took away his bother who was released after questioning at the Sugathadasa Stadium army camp. Thereafter the local police searched their house. On 24th September SC himself was abducted in the same van that police had used when they came to search the House. The Commission's inquiries have revealed that the Number plate of the vehicle used on the occasion to be a false number plate. SC's father says "I need to know what happened to my Son".

HMP, Preseident of the Branch Union at Ceylon Tobacco who had been released for full time work in the employees' welfare society at the work place, was abducted at the main gate of the work place in the lunch hour on 1.12.89 and taken away by armed persons in a van. HMP had stayed away from office during the strike, allegedly on grounds of ill health, and gone in the day on special summon from middle level management. Ceylon Tobacco Comany had paid Rs. 100,000/- to the bereaved families of SC and HMP.

AMGA, a Committee Member of the Ceylon Bank Employees' Union and an activist of the Mahajana Eksath Peramuna who had been injured in demonstrations against the Indo-Lanka Accord was abducted on 24.11.89. The army had searched his house a few days earlier and taken away his photos. His wife, a graduate lecturer states that his son, now 14 years is very depressed and still sheds tears at meal-times remembering his father.

GV, a mechanic in the Ceylon Transport Board a SLFP trade unionist, was an active participant in the strike at CTB in August 1989. The arrears due to workers was granted by the management, but GV was abducted on 8.9.89 and has disappeared. His fellow activist in the strike presented himself to the co-ordinating officer, Gampaha through the intercession of the Christian Service Organisation, was released after questioning, and is alive today. GV however, taken-in "procedures not in accordance with the law", has disappeared. His wife has reported to the Commission that the repayment of his Employees' provident fund contribution is held up despite her presentation of his Death Certificate to the fund, "as they are unable to decide how to deduct the Rs. 4/- due in respect of the loss of his Employee's card".

WU, a machine operator at Elephant House and President of the Ceylon Workers' Congress Branch there, was abducted on 2.1.90 from home in a vehicle registred by the Government Agent. Kilinochchi (ie. a government vehicle). The government in power at the time was a CWS/UNP coalition. However there was a CWC/UNP trade union dispute at the work plaace.

JHAJ, a trade unionist at the National Textile Coproration was abducted at the work place on 2.11.89 along with four other employees. There was industrial unrest at the work place at the time. The employees struck work as protest to the abduction, but no inquiry had taken place however. The women of JHAJ's family reported to the Commission the comfort they found through participation in the protest actions of the Mother's Front, including the "long Walk" in pilgriamage to Kataragama bearing the disappeared persons' portraits.

WAS and SIDP, orderlies at Sri Jayawardenapura Hospital, Branch President and Secretary of the NSSP led Minor Employees' Union they, were abducted on 11.12.89 by army commandoes days after they had engaged in a fast in protest at a dismissal of minor employee by the management. The police recorded the relations' complaints only on 1992.

The estate sector in the Southern Province was particularly adversely affected in late 1988 by the JVP's attempt to bring out the work-force. SPW, a field officer on a Southern Province State Plantation was killed by the subversives on the day he returned to work, after a JVP led work-stoppage. His widow's words to the Commission summing it up was "We were under presure from both sides. From the JVP to strike, from the police not to; either way we were the losers".

Repression, Killings, and disappearances of trade union activists and the resultant weakening of the trade union movement as a whole has had and will continue to have an adverse effect on society at large and the working peoples specifically, significantly affecting the capacity of civil society to resist intimidation and politically motivated violence.

PART IV

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

The universities remained closed for almost three years begining from July 1987. however, a large numberof university students had also disappeared during this period.

In response to the complaints made by affected parents and student unions against the large-scale arrests of university students, the government appointed in May 1989 a monitoring committee to look into those complaints and to provide welfare facilities to detained students. This committee known as the " Ad-hoc Committee to Monitor Arrest, Custody & Release of University Students" functioned under the Chairmanship of Justice O.S.M. Seneviratna ; Mr. L. Liyanarachchi, the Additional Secretaty/UGC, acted as its Secretary. According to a position report prepared by this Committee, 294 university students had disappeared by October 1990 (they belong to the universities of Peradeniya Colombo, Sri Jayewardenepura, Kelaniya, Moratuwa, and Ruhuna). By this time 208 students were also in custody , and 342 had been released.

Our Commission requested all the universities to provide us with information regarding missing students. We also wrote to student Unions of all the universities and the Peradeniya University Student Union had sent us a list of names of students missing from that university. According to the information received from the universities (except from the Jaffna University and the Eastern University) the number of disappeared students is estimated at 246.

We also tried to make contact with the parents by writing to them at the addresses given by the Universities (some addresses were incomplete).38 letters were returned undelivered. It may be that the addresses were incorrect or maybe that the parents have changed their residence. In seven cases, parents informed the Commission that their children are alive, It should also be mentioned that among the complaints received by the Commission in respect of disappeared university students, we found 24 new cases which were not mentioned in the university lists. Accordingly, the number of missing students is in the range of 26 (246-07 = 239 + 24 = 263).

This lower figure (compared to 294 as reported by the monitoring Committee may be due to the fact that some students who alleged to have disappeared were found later. The figures given by various universities were based on the information given to them by parents and relatives (some may have not reported at all), and therefore, the above number should not be treated as complete and conclusive.

The breakdown of this number according to universities is as follows :

Peradeniya	: 60
Colombo	: 32
Sri Jayewardenepura	: 63
Kelaniya	: 41
Moratuwa	: 13
Ruhuna	: 51
Open University	: 03
Total	: 263

The discipline–wise distribution is as follows :

Medical, Dental, and Veterinary	: 45
Engineering (including N. D. T. Students)	: 26
Science	: 34
Agriculture	: 07
Law	: 06
Arts (Social Sciences and Humanities)	: 93
Commerce and Management	: 29
(Faculty not Specified)	: 23
Total	: 263

What is striking from the above figures is the fact that the phenomenon of student disappearances figured in all the faculties, and even the " prestigious" faculties were badly affected by the political crisis during this period.

It should be noted that only a part of the above–mentioned cases were reported to this Commission as it covers only Western Southern, and Sabaragamuwa provinces. Others may have been reported to the other two Commissions. This Commissions has received complaints in respect of 129 disappearances of university students, of them, 26 are in respect of undergraduate Bikkhus.

*This is inrespect of disappeared students only.

As mentioned elsewhere in this report (see Chapter Three), 60% of the total number of disappearances from the western, Sorthern and Sabaragamuwa Provinces took place between August 1989 and January 1990 – the worst period of the crises. As table 1 above shows, 96 out of 129 university students had also disappeared during the same period. This accounts for nearly 75% of the disappearances in respect of university students reported to this Commission.

We found that most of the parents who came before the Commission were not in position to reveal much information about the political activities of their chilcdren. From the available evidence, however, several observations can be made as to the causes for their disappearances.

University students belonged to a high-risk category at this time. According to Professor Arjuna Aluvihare, former Vice-Chancellor of the Peradeniya University, some students when arrested had even tried to hide their university identity by giving false information through fear. During this period, the word "university students" carried a certain stigma. Mr. Lal Liyanarachchi, Secretary of the Monitoring Committee, had made the following observation in his position paper dated October 26, 1990 : "No charges have been framed against most of the students in custody. Most of the other suspects in custody who get to rehabilitation camps later get released and go home after a few months of rehabilitation. But the university students are even denied that consolation due to the mere fact that they attended universities." Parents were also deeply concerned about the safety of their children who happened to be university students. A father told the Commission that after the disappearance of his son, he decided not to send his daughter to the university even though she had also been selected.

Why did the university students become a target group during this period ? In order to understand this aspect, one has to look at the situation which prevailed in the universities in the 1980's.

The politicisation of university students is not an unusual phenomenon; however, the majority of the student population was not politically active. Some students were politically involved not necessarily because the they were JVP sympathiers but because there were several common issues supported by student groups of different political persuasions. In the early 1980's they protested against the White Paper on Education. In the mid-1980's they were involved with the protest campaign against the North Colombo Private Medical College. University students (including undergraduate Bikkhus) played an active role in the protest campaign against the 1987 Indo-Lanka Peace Accord, and the Provincial Council Bill.

It should be acknowledged that a certain section of the undergraduate population played a prominent role in JVP politics. The Samajavadi Shishya Sangamaya (Socialist Students Union or the SSU) was a JVP union active in university politics. The SSU operated not only at the university level but also at district levle to organize student activities in the country. University leadership was also important in the functioning of the Jathika Shishya Madyastanaya, an organization set up in mid-1988 to coordinate the activities among school children.

By 1987 the JVP dominated the Inter-University Student Federation (I.U.S.F.), and other student groups such as the Independent Student Union (ISU) and the SLFP group had withdrawn from it. It should be noted that within the student movement, there were groups against the JVP. In fact, there were violent clashes between the JVP group and the ISU.

The I.U.S.F. became so closely associated with the JVP that it was the representatives of the I.U.S.F. who had participated on behalf of the JVP in the negotiations with the seven-party alliance in late 1988 on the issue of the presidential election.

Among the cases inquired by us, there were several medical students who got involved in politics beginning with the North Colombo Medical College issue. There were also several students who were either members or the supporters of the USF. Three students (from the faculties of Medicine, Veterinary Science, and Engineering) had been arrested for allegedly making an attempt on the life of Mr. Ranjan Wijeratna, Minister of State for Defence, and they were also shown on national television. In an answer to a question in parliament about their whereabouts, Mr. Wijeratna later announced that the suspects were taken to the jungles of Embilipitiya in an operation to trace a hidden cache of arms and two suspects had escaped from custody and two others were dead. In still another incident, another student (Engineering) worked under Mr. Richard de Soyza (a human rights journalist who was abducted and killed later) at Inter Press Services Ltd., as the universities were closed and on his way to work, he was abducted by some unknown persons.

There were also certain other factors which were responsible for student disappearances. As the universities remained closed for almost three years beginning from July 1987, students returned home, and were subjected to the vagaries of their local areas. Giving evidence before the Commission, several parents insisted that their children were not at all politically involved, but their personal enemies had sent petitions to security forces implicating them in JVP activities. As we found out in the course of our hearings, this was a very common phenomenon during this period. We were struck by the fact that it was not always the political activities of the victims that caused their disappearances during this period. People tried to make use of the anarchy in the existing situation to settle their personal grudges and private jealousies by providing false information about their enemies. Several parents said that their families were very poor, and the villagers became very jealous when their children entered the university. In one case, the disappeared student was the only person in that area who could enter th university. In anoter case, a mother said that people were envious of her fam because four of her children could enter the university within four consecuti years. In some cases, It was not the students but their parents who were active involved in opposition politics, but young people became more vulnerable t political revenge.

PART V

TAMILS LOST IN COLOMBO

The evidence before this commission is that the issue of the involuntary removal/ disappearances in Colombo of persons of Tamil origin should not be subsumed in the phenomenon of involuntary removals/disappearances that occured in the period under review in the context of the insurrection in Southern Sri Lanka.

Around 8% of all incidents from Colombo District reported to this Commission relate to persons of Tamil Origin[1]. This percentage rises to 21.7% when the reports to the North Eastern Commission from this category are taken into account.[2] Additionally, the following assassinations in the period 1989/1990 have been brought to our notice :

July 1989: Mr. A Amirthalingam, M. P. Attorney-at-law, leader of the TULF Group in Parliament and Mr. P. Yogeswaram, Attorney-at-law, former M. P. for Jaffna. Mr. P. Annamalai Attorney-at-law. Mr. Sam Tambimuttu M. P. TULF, Batticaloa Distraict and Mrs. Thambimuttu in May 1990.
Mr. Amirthalingam MP and Mr. Thambimuttu MP were Members of parliament after the July 1989 Election in the newly formed North Eastern Province.

The following paragraph which are based on the cases reported to the Commission will pinpoint.

(AA) certain features of divergence of the category under consideration from the total figures.

(CC) certain features of divergence of the category under consideration from the total figures.

(ii) Temporary residence in Colombo

(a) in re: incidents where corpus of Tamil origin: 53%
(b) In re: Colombo District including (a) above: 37.6%
(c) In re: Colombo District excluding (a) above: 29.5%

(iii) Response to summons in respect of temporary residents of Colombo District

(a) In re: Temporary residents of Tamil Origin: 64.8%
(b) In re: Colombo District inclusive of (a) above: 84.0%
(c) In re: Colombo District exclusive of (a) above: 97.6%

1. 70 incidents.
2. 150 incidents.

(iii) Availability of evidence to the Commission

(a) Purported Eye-witnesses summoned by the Commission often proved evasive. When they responded to summons, their position was one of denial to beating an eye-witness. In many other cases the summons were returned. This was particularly marked in instances where the corpus was alleged to have been staying at a 'Lodge'.[1]

(b) Another obstacle has been the practice of non-disclosure of the source of information by petitioners, who instead, file affidavits to the effect "I was informed", "I belive . . . .", "he has been . . . ." etc. stated in form as fact, though the deponent is not a witness to the incident.

(c) Evidence of the conduct of the petitioner's family's on learning of the disappearance: theair endless search for inforamation of him, their numerous letters of inquiry to the authorities contemporaneous V. the alleged disappearance, have been the strongest evidence of the truth of the allegation on involuntary dissappearance[2]

Alleged Perpetrators

---

[1] 27% of cases reported to this Commission allege the corpus was abducted or otherwise disappeared while staying at a Lodge. Not a single eye-witness has come forward to give evidence in respect of these incidents.

The situation is different when they have been residing in a home.

[2] This is a feature common to cases from all 3 provinces.

"Would I have been searching like this, had I news of him?" said a father from Matara giving evidence before the Commission in respect of the disappearance of his son in Matara. His words are equally apposite to the cases under consideration in this chapter.

[3] eg: (i) We have received reports of cases of the payment of considerable sums to a job agent who then decamps with the money after providing misinformation to security forces who acting on it abducted the corpus from the 'Lodge' where he is staying.

(ii) 2 brothers from tenement in Colombo, were abducted by the security forces just prior to the date when their evidence was due to be recorded as eye-witnesses in a murder trial in the High Court. The accused in the murder inquiry were discharged thereafter for want of evidence.

(c) Re: Colombo District excluding (a) above:

Security Forces	:	75.63%
Subversive act	:	3.82%
Private enemy	:	0.03%

IB. Certain Features Common to All Groups of Incidents

1. The attiude of recording/investigating authorities.– One prosecution and 2 police Declarations of Death have resulted from complaints to the police.

The prosecution is in respect of the abduction and murder of a University Student by a mob in ostensible retaliation for a subversive raid and murder of Sinhala persons.

The police Declarations of Death[1] are in respect of 2 persons who have disappeared after abduction following a fight between 2 gangs in a tenement area of Colombo. These Declarations do not contain the grounds on which the Declaration is made, and the issuing officers have been evasive in revealing the grounds to the Commission.

In the other cases, the line of investigation is seen to be one of "Our records do not show (the security forces) to be responsible", rather than an approach of: "who did it?"

Eg:–

(i) In 1989 a Jaffna resident wrote to the Minister of Defence alleging the Army had abducted from a Colombo lodge[2] his son and 2 other youths who had paid large amounts to a job Agent in expectation of employment abroad. He heard no more, and petitioned this Commission in respect of the disappearance of his son. The Commisson's inquiry from the Ministry of Defence as the action taken on the father's complaint in 1989, elicited the response: "Inquiries made no information forthcoming to date as to the whereabouts of these persons or being taken into custody by security forces."

(ii) In another case, where a Tamil youth and 2 Sinhala youths were abducted by the Army-Police 3 days after they had gone voluntarily to the Army-Police to give a statement, the responses of the Army-Police to the Commission's Inquiry is: "All Books were destroyed in the 1992 floods".

(iii) The abduction of K, a Human Rights activist and employee of the Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corporation abducted in a police jeep was witnessed by a senior official of the SLBC, who gave detailed evidence before the

[1] A police declaration of death by the officer-in Charge of a police station states that it is his opinion that a person who was resident in his area is no longer alive. Commission. K had been abducted 3 months earlier too by the police. O that occasion he was released without charge after Human Righ organisations traced him to police station concerned. There is n acknowledgement of arrest or detention by the police. The CID's report is also to the same effect. The motor cycle K was riding at the time he wa abducted has been returned to family by the police with the statement that it was found on the road[1].

2. Effect on Families.– The same feeling of emotional devastation and unjus persecution, the same scene of economic hardship and insecurity, as was evident i respect of other families of the disappeared, were evident here.

A Colombo Tamil mother who had lost 3 sons, was desperate about the plight o her grand-children (whose mother had deserted them). She had a record of severa attempts to commit suicide.

The Negombo Tamil wife of a Jaffna Tamil, both devout Hindus, related how she had her self and her children had converted to Roman Catholicism in search o spiritual comfort on the abduction and disappearance of her husband.

A high-ranking civil servant who had taken early retirement consequent on the disappearance of his son, gave graphic description of the continuing emotional ill-effects on his son due to his transfer from Batticaloa to detention at Boossa; the mental instability created in the boy (who was physically big made though only 16) by reason of the physical aggression of non-Tamil speaking guards at the detention camp; so that the boy still tremble when addressed in Sinhala, and longed to be back in Batticaloa. The father did not speak of the emotional damage to himself by reason of his son's experience, but it was very evident to the Commission.

The same theme of the continuing ill-effects to an indvidual and his family wa reflected in the evidence of a very humble family of Narahenpita who described how their son who had lost his power of speech after the sight of bodies by the road - side in the '83 Riots, was picked up by a passing Army jeep on Haveloc Road, as the family stood by the road - side near the Kovil a mile from the spo where Ranjan Wijeratne Minister of Defence had come by his death in a bom attack on the previous day. The medical reports of the boy, and news pape advertisements placed by the family asking for news of him were produced to the Commission.

The sense of isolation and being singled out for prosecution, felt by many, wa expressed vividly in the letter to the Commission of a father whose Moratuw University qualified son had disappeared after abduction in '89 in Colombo. H wrote:

> May be you are not aware that letters reach us only occasionally, and the persons wait months after the purchase of a ticket for passage to Colombo Please give me at least 6 months notice of the date of inquiry.

[1] The failure to investigate is discussed further in Chapter Six.

3. The Reason for the Abduction/Disappearance.–The reasons for acting outside the law, are immaterial both in National law and in Human Rights law[1].

A brief consideration of this aspect is rendered relevant however by reason of the perceptions of petitioners.

The petitioner's perception was that the reason for the abduction/ disappearance lay in a factor specified to the corpus[2] or that it was explicable wholly in terms of "being a Tamil"/"being a Tamil in Colombo"

An ignorance of/a reluctance to acknowledge, any involvement of the corpus in subversive activity, was apparent in the position taken up by the petitioners in respect of this group of the disappeared. This is with the position taken up by the families affected by the Southern insurrection.

There is no evidence before the Commission that the politicisation of violence inherent in subversive action has won the acceptance or approval of any of the families who came before the Commission or the communities they belong to However, the state should refrain from taking a form which comes to be seen by those families and communities as rendering the state itself a co-participant in the politicisation of violence.

[2]Ex: The Job Agent who was defaulting with the money paid to him by the corpus, had laid false information against him, either with the secuirty forces or with the Armed Political Groups.

[3]i.e. placed these events in the context of "reprisals against Tamils".

CHAPTER TWELVE

THE CLIMATE OF TERROR: ITS IMPACT ON SOCIETY

Nearly 10,000 witnesses appeared before this Commission to give evidence i respect of the disappearances of their family members. Their personal acounts o this period form a very rich source of information for the understanding of socie at the time.

It was a crisis period. The functioning of society, its administration, and la enforcement, were put to severe test. The merits and defects of a systm can b better judged by its performance during a crisis situation. the evidence as a whol is a damning indictment of what happened during that dark era, whether i happened at the hands of the agents of the state, private persons who tried to tak advantage of the situation to settle their personal grudges, or subversives. Th evidence echoed the common yearning: "Never Again."

1. The Use of Violence

When one says that terrorism has to be countered even by resorting to violence the rationale offered is that it is done "in good faith" to safeguard society and t save the country. When one says that excesses should be tolerated, the assumptio is that they are unavoidable. Can you explain this logic to the affected familie who have undergone the kind of experiences described below?

A. Hostage–taking.–A group of army personnel had come in search of a youth who was alleged to have been involved in subversive activities. Since he wa not at home that night, they had threatened to take somebody from the family as a hostage. When the father volunteered to go with them, they had ridiculed him by saying: "No use of old codgers, we want to take that girl." Another girl was als abducted from the same area, and it was later found that both girls had bee raped, killed and thier bodies burnt. The person who had come to her house th night had been a well-built, tall person with a moustache. With eyes filled wit tears, the mother said: "People know about this, so I have nothing to hide. Sh was so small and fragile. I don't know how they could do a thing like that to m little girl."

Some army personnel had come in search of a man, who was involved i subversive activities. Since he was in hiding, they had wanted to extrac information from his wife as to his whereabouts. Not only had they assaulted he but had also dug a whole in the ground and put her 10 month old daughter in it an covered her in soil up to her shoulders. They had also taken with them her 10 year old son as a hostage. Her husband was later abducted and killed but the ten-yea old boy was never returned home and is still missing.

A young woman had been visiting her parents with her husband. At night a group of police officers had come to the house in search of her brother who wa suspected of subversive activities. When they were told that the brother wa staying at her place, they had taken her husband as a decoy to find him and subsequently, both of them had disppeared. When the family met the A.S.P. of the area, they were told: "At a time like this, we can't choose between good and bad people. Don't ask us. Go and ask the government. Don't pursue this matter any more because you only making enemies in vain."

The evidence placed before this Commission has reveled that hostage-taking was a common practice in all the three provinces investigated by us. In some cases, hostages were released after the surrender of the suspects, but in many cases, hostages never returned.

B. Revenge Killings.– We came across mny cases where women, little children, and elderly parents had to make the supreme sacrifice for the "sins" committed by their family members.

When a group of army personnel hd come in search of an army deserter who was suspected of subversive activities, he had run away and escaped. Then they locked up his wife inside the house and set it on fire. They had also abducted his brother who is reported missing since then.

The person involved in this case had not been an active subversive but one who had expresed "leftist" ideas very critical of the government. He had used very abusive language when he got drunk and had antagonized people as a result. He had also been questioned several times by the army. One day at night a group of persons had come to his house and killed eight inmates and set the house on fire. Among the dead were an 89yr. old man, a woman, and five children.

In another case, a death squad had killed 8 persons (belonging to two fmilies) and burnt the house. One girl escaped with stap injuries. Among the dead were three adults and six children (between the ages 3 and 10).

C. Indiscriminate Killings.– Reflecting on the indiscriminate and senseless nature of killings during this period, a witness told the Commission that people were treated like stray dogs. But he added: "Even a dog is killed only when it is mad."

Another said: "People in our area were scared even to go to town, because the army had abducted many boys at the time. Even 12-year old boys were rrested. Therefore, young boys did not go to town even to get their hair cut. That was all done at home." The father of a Muslim scholarship student at Ananda College recounted the loss of his son caught in the curfew on his return journey from the Maradana Mosque and disappeared since.

My son was not doing any kind of JVP politics. He can't even write One day he went with a crowd to do street decorations for a SLFP meeting. If it was thought that he was doing politics, that was the only political work he did. He went there not because he was a SLFP supproter but to earn a living. We have no time to engage in politics. For our day-to-day existence, he had to do odd jobs to earn a daily wage.

We did not do anything wrong, so we stayed at home. That's why we became an easy prey. The real subversives were in hiding, and have now returned to our villages.

When terrorist attacks took place, people around the area were taken in for questioning and subsequently some of them disappeared as a result of reprisal killings. In certain area, the security forces were looking for a person named "Shantha," and several youth in the area by the same name had been arrested and they never returned home. During this period, the subversives had made a habit of collecting identity cards from people. Therefore, some people found it difficult to prove their identity when they were arrested at road blocks or in search operations.

In a few cases, we found that people with mental and physical disabilities had also disappeared One mother said that her son who had a severe stammering problem was abducted by security forces at a bus stand and he never returned home. According to the mother, her son was not involved in any kind of subversive activity, but she suspected that her son would not have been able to prove his innocence due to his speech disability.

D. Corruption.– Some people tried to make money out of the misery of the family members of the disappeared. Using thei~ contacts with police stations and army camps, some brokers had asked for money from families to secure the release of their lived ones. There were also allegations against police and army personnel for demanding money to release the suspects. A wife of an army lieutenant, nicknamed "Rose Madam," had allegedly taken large sums of money to secure the release of detainees. There were also several allegations against police and army personnel for soliciting sexual favours from the wives of disappeared persons, offering assistance to secure the release of their husbands.

E. Disappearances Due to Personal Animosities.– Personal jealousies, animosities, family disputes due to property-related issues, and even controversies surrounding love affairs, caused untold misery to people during this period. Caste rivalry also featured in a few cases of disappearances. As there was no proper investigation, even innocent people could be implicated in subversive activities. It happened in several ways: some provided false information to the authorities; some got the assistance of state agents to eliminate thrir opponents; some organized their own gangs to elimlnate their enemies. The last category of cases simply amounts to private murder, but since the normal laws of the land were silent during this period, many such crimes were not properly investigated, and as a result, they were also passed off as political crimes. One more body burning on a tyre did not arouse any undue suspicion during this period.

We had several complaints where the controversies surrounding love affairs had led to disappearances of persons. One girl directly accused her father of being instrumental in the disappearance of her boy friend. In another case, a sister attributed the disappearance of her brother to a love affair he had with a girl of a wealthy family. He had received threats from this family to lay off the girl. On an earlier occasion too, they had tried to threaten him through the police. It was revealed in another case that a police officer in a clandestine love affair with a school girl had objected to another boy in the same school having a similar affair with this girl's sister. That boy and his friend who challenged the police officer's objections subsequently disappeared. The evidence revealed that this police officer had played a certain role in their abductions.

The kind of incidents described so far reflects a very dangerous situation in the sense that nobody is safe in a crisis situation. One cannot rest assured that he is safe just because he is a law - abiding citizen. In a normal situation, one can have recourse to the judicial process and other safeguards provided by the law, but it is quite different in a situation similar to the one that existed in the late 1980's. Usually a curfew is meant to keep people at home. But during the "reign of terror", curfews were very often used to "lift" people from their homes.

II. Breach of Public Trust and Disenchantment with Law Enforcement

During this period, many police stations had flatly refused to entertain complaints from persons whose family members were abducted by security forces. A common complaint was: "We were chased away like dogs." One mother described how an officer whom she knew by name had denied to her face that her son had been brought to the police station. "This was unbelievable. Only two hours prior to that my son had been removed from home by these very persons." Asked whether she had made a complaint to any other police station or state authority, she promptly replied: "No, it would have been like asking the thief's mother to catch the thief."

It was inevitable then, that the police functions of recording and investigating into complaints of the general public, so central to the effective administration of the criminal law, completely broke down. "The police drove me away. The Grama Sevaka said: go to the new Grama Sevaka. The New Grama Sevaka said: Go to the old," said a mother who had lost two sons. Another witness said: "I appealed to the IGP for assistance as the area - police refused to record my complaint of the abduction of my son. The IGP referred the matter for inquiry to the very same person who had refused in the first place. He is the A. S. P. of the area now."

In response to an appeal made by the government for those involved in subversive activities to surrender, a person had surrendered himself to the authorities, but had subsequently disappeared. On inquiring from the particular law enforcement officers to whom he had surrendered, the mother of the corpus had been told that her son had escaped from custody. The mother said: "I feel that we were fooled. We thought my son's life will be saved if he surrendered." Another witness said:

> When my son, a Technical College Scholarship student was released on Amnesty after the 1988 Presidential Election, the police said: "don't think you have escaped", he was abducted soon afterwards and has since disappeared.

It was revealed in a number of cases that suspects, released from police/army custody, were abducted again no sooner they had left that place. In another set of cases, the police had produced the suspects before court reporting that there was no sufficient evidence for prosecution. When they were released from court, the victims had simply disappeared on their way back home.

Several witnesses complained that the real culprits referred to by them were not produced when identification parades were held. In one such case, our investigations revealed the following facts. The corpus was abducted by "X" (name given) attached to a certain police station in the South. On a complaint made by his father, an inquiry was held by another police station, and this matter was subsequently referred to the Magistrate. An identification parade was held in court. Twelve police constables attached to this particular police station had been produced at the parade. The P. C. referred to by the complainant was not produced at the parade although he had been attached to this particular police station when the abduction took place on 14.12.1990. There is no record at this particular police station regarding the arrest and detention of the corpus on the given date.

Many families belived that justice has not been meted out to the affected families. They lamented that those who were responsible for the disappearances of their children have not been punished; they have not even been transferred out of those areas; instead they have got promotions and are doing well. As one wittness put it:

> The Govenor who imposed Marshal Law in 1915 was recalled by the British Government. But persons identifiable, who have been responsible for acts such as the enforced disappearance of my son are still at large.

> I lived during the Second World War. There were even foreign soldiers on Sri Lankan soil at that time. But there was a law at that time. There was always some senior officer to whom one could make a complaint. But during 1988-89 there was no law. They just wanted to kill somebody.

III. The Destruction of the Democratic base of Society

The "reign of terror" was not simply a two-sided conflict between the government and the ruling party on the one side and the JVP movement on the other. Other oppositional parties also became tragets of attack by both the government and the JVP. A systematic repression and general intolerance of the democratic opposition was spoken to by withnesses in the case after another.

As incidents of disappearances of candidated and active supporters occurred and arson and murder of policical opponents in the guise of anti-subversive activities increase, a disgust of elections was brought about in the people. "This is what happens when you participate in elections", said the mother of a political activist who has disappeared.

The suppression of the freedom of speech association was also spoken of by petitioners giving evidence on the abduction and disappearance of journalists, of human rights activists, of trade unionists, and of NGO activists in these fields. The following are some of the incidents that transpired in our evidence.

A mother spoke of her son, an undergraduate working as a journalist in human rights while the University was closed, who was abducted and has disappeared since.

Witnesses spoke of how a Habeas Corpus application had to be withdrawn due to threats to their lawyer; and of the actual murder of another lawyer who was appearing for them.

A brother of the then General Secaretary of the SLFP Trade Union Federation, "disappeared without trace on a bus journey to Colombo." – wife My mother, a trained family planning advisor, was an active member of the Mid-Wives Union. They came in the night and took her away while she was still in her night-dress; she has since disappeared. – daughter.

My husband was a supervisor at the Kotmale work site and was abducted when he formed a trade union there. – wife.

My husband tried to form a trade Union in the Free Trade Zone, Katunayake. He and four others were abducted on the same day and have disappeared since. – wife.

IV. The destruction of Community Initiatives

The for psychosis had gripped the enatire soceity. In the face of the anxiety and uncertainty engendered, people became passive onlookers to the many tragic events of this period.

We who would move to a side the body of a dog found dead on the roadside saying "aney" were rendered passive spectators to the sight of young mutilated bodies burning at the cross-roads.

I didn't report the abduction and disappearance of my widowed sister's only son as I have a son and I feared for his safety should I do so.

The army took away my two sons as they were walking by the road. One of them has returned. We are rendered passive victims as regards the disappearance of the other through fear our surviving son too will be lost to us.

My heart wished to bring him (corpse) home no one would help me.

In a case where a women was hostage instead of her husband, the neighbours refused to open their doors to her twelve year old son.

The temple, the hospital – the traditional symbols of refuge and help – became associated instead with the destroyer. "We had no one to turn to. Even our temple had been turned into an Army-Camp", said a sorrowing mother. "When we found my brother with gun-shot injuries, my husband took him to the Government Hospital, and remained in the ward with him. But the Army abducted my brother from the ward and there is no news of him since", said a sister, vividly describing how doctors and medical staff became passive by-standers.

V. Lost Hopes and Shattered Dreams

In Sri Lanka, the free education system has provided the poor and the under-privileged majority with considerable opportunities for upward social mobility. They feel that it is only through education that they can surmount the barriers that keep them disadvantaged, whether these barriers are created by race, caste, creed, class, or other social and economic factors. In our survey on university students, we found that most of the disappeared students (even in the "prestigious" faculties such as Medicine and Engineering) came from very humble social backgrounds. Besides university students, a large number of school children had also disappeared during this period. Considering the meager income of these families, it is obvious that they would have made tremendous sacrifices to bring them up to that level. They were the ultimate hope of their parents for the security and social status of the family. Their disappearance shattered beyond repair all their hopes and dreams.

The potential that article 12 of our constitution carries in providing rights and opportunities to persons who would otherwise be subject to certain barriers was blighted in the guise of counter-subversive operations. Some incidents revealed in our inquiries were in relation to families who had suffered disadvantages on the ground apparently of caste and on account of being economically disadvantaged families.

A witness giving evidence regarding the disappearance of his son, a second-year university student, said:

> Anything can be robbed but not education. So we educated our child. But somebody has robbed him of his life. We can't understand this. My wife has become a mental patient thinking about our son all the time. Now she mutters nonsense. She was treated at Angoda and Mulleriyawa hospitals. She is still undergoing treatment.

A young woman who gave evidence before the Commission regarding the disappearance of her brother (third-year medical student) had subsequently sent a letter to the Commission saying:

> At the end of the inquiry, I realized that my brother is no more. I swear that the most painful moment I have experienced in my life was when I was told that I can get a death certificate for him. We wanted my brother to get a Medical degree certificate. We don't want a death certificate for him. My father died ten years ago, and my mother had to beat coconut husks by hand to obtain the fibre for the manufacture of coir rope in order to bring up nine children. When my brother disappeared, we had to spend a lot in our search for him and we got into a worse financial situation.....

"My son was the only educated person my village had. If you suspect a person, take him to courts; don't kill him" said a father, depressed caste, recounting the abduction and subsequent disappearance of his bright younger son. In his evidence he described how the elder brother coming in from minding the cattle would ask eagerly "has malli (younger brother) been found?" and how that son too committed suicide thereafter.

VI. Killings by subversives

779 killings by subversives have been reported to this Commission. Among the victims were personnel of the security forces, their relations, grama niladharis, gramarakshakas, politicians, and ordinary citizens.

In one case, subversives had killed 9 inmates of a house (belonging to two families) and also set the house on fire.

Among the dead were an old woman, two middle-aged women, two men, and four youths. The reason was that when subversives had come to collect money on a previous occasion, they had been assaulted by two members of this family.

The wife of a cultivator in the Sabaragamuwa province giving evidence before the Commission stated that in July 1989 subversives had come to her house and killed her husband. He had been first stabbed several times and later shot with a gun. She attributed this killing to the fact that her busband had worked for and was closely associated with a prominent politician of the ruling party at the time. Consequently, the state had paid her compensation for the loss of her husband. A couple of days later a gang of persons whom she suspected to be of the same group that had killed her husband had come home and looted money and provisions at home.

Killings by subversives led to reprisal killings by the agents of the state. At one of the monthly meetings of a certain Provincial Council, a member has said (the minutes of the meeting on 27.2.1992 was produced in evidence):

> No other person has suffered from terror as much as I did. My eldest daughter was 17 years old. The other was only 5. Both of them were brutally murdered by JVPers.... my 17 year old daughter was still a school girl. What was the crime she committed to deserve such a death. They came in disguise to destroy us. Three JVPers were killed in my own house. Eleven others who killed my childern were burnt on tyres. Karmic cycle has taken over. A few others are still in rehabilitation camps. Revenge will be taken when they are released.

Some witnesses produced threatening letters that their families had received from subversives. In one case, a father of 9 childern who had lost his wife two years back, had been abducted by subversives and tied to a lamp post and shot dead. A threatening note he had received reads as follows:

> We know that J. R. Jayewardene, the murderer, will not conduct the Presidential Election scheduled to be held on December 19th in a free and fair manner as his aim is to extend the tenure of his regime. Therefore we have named the UNP, SLFP, and the USA as banned parties. It will be considered and unpatriotic and treacherous act to serve at any election center as a party representative or to give any support at the election. You are strictly warned not to participate as a party representative. If this order is defied, punishment will be death. (signed by Commanding Officer, Anadena Mulasthanaya, Deshapremi Sannaddha Balakaya, Kegalle.)

The person involved in the above case was a UNP supporter who was killed even before the election. Several supporters of the Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP), and the United Socialist Alliance (USA), also received equally brutal treatment at subversive hands. We also came across several cases where citizens were killed for exercising their right to vote at elections.

Most of the anti-government subversive activities during this period were carried out by an organization which called itself the "Deshapremi Janatha Vyaparaya" (Patriotic People's Movement). The JVP always claimed that the DJV was a separate organization notwithstanding the fact that both organizations shared common political views and their membership overlapped with each other. Mr. Tylvin Silv, presently the Secretary of the JVP, who gave evidence before the Commission reiterated this position and maintained that the JVP cannot take responsibility for the actions of the DJV. However, several special witnesses from political parties and other organizations who appeared before the Commission strongly believed that the DJV was only a front organization of the JVP. Some went to the extent of saying that the DJV had no separate existence and was an integral part of the JVP movement. What was the popular perception? Thousands of witnesses who came before us saw no difference between the two; they used the name "JVP" through out.

VII. A Society Caught Between Two Forces

Many witnesses said that, caught between two forces as they were, their life during this period was like a "nut in a nut-cracker" (girayata ahu vecăcha puwak gediyak vagei). They felt that there existed a kind of "dual-power" situation in the country. The state had lost its hegemony, and some referred to the authority of the JVP as Punci Aanduwa (small government). The JVP had imposed its own curfews, organized island-wide hartals, and called for frequent strikes. Some joined these protest movements under JVP threats.

Many witnesses said that their families suffered at the hands of both the security forces and the JVP during this period.

> In our erea a group of JVP supporters went from house to house and asked people to assemble for a meeting. Later the army had raided the place and arrested people My son was among those who were arrested, and he never came back home.

> As a punishment for supporting the SLFP in the 1988 election. The JVP asked me to kneel down on the road for three hours. However, it was the security forces who abducted my brother on a later occatiŏn.

The resultant sense of isolation was portrayed time and again in the evidence. "There was no one to complain to. The government was deaf; the oppositon absent; the police drove us away like dogs. The JVP killed, the army killed," said a mother who had lost three sŏns taken away in three different rounding-up operations never to return.

The police and armed forces are not alien institutions to this society. The affected families also had their own children and relatives serving in the police and armed forces. We came across several instances where one member of the family was killed by subversives as a punishment for serving in the police or in the army; another member of the same family was abducted by security forces for alleged subversive activities.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

THE IMPACT OF THE DISAPPEARANCES ON AFFECTED FAMILI

A country may go through a period of utter chaos and destruction, but at the en it can also embark on a period of rapid recovery in terms of physical grow Society in general may also tend to have short memories, and some may even su "let's forget the past."

Those who cannot forget the past that easily are the immediate family membe of the victims. This Commission became a forum for thousands of such affecte families whose children or spouses had been abducted and disappeared during th "reign of terror" in Southern Sri Lanka in the late 1980's. They related to us wi their own experience the pain and misery they have been undergoing for the la seven or eight years. It appears that the mere passage of time has not significant helped the healing process.

I. Economic Problems of the Affected Families

Death is a disaster to any family whether it is rich or poor. But the poor have th added problem of not having the means even to satisfy the basic needs of th family. We found that this is the case with an overwhelming majority of th affected families of the disappeared persons. The disastrous consequences of the economic backwardness, further aggravated by the loss of their ma breadwinners, had an impact on may aspects of their lives.

(i) Women Left Behind

The plight of the women left behind has been discussed in detail elsewhere in this report (see the section on "Women" in Chapter Eleven). As discussed in tha section, women were suddenly thrust into the role of primary breadwinner of the family due to the disappearances of their husbands. There are very fe employment opportunities for women in the communities they live, and as such they have been engaged in very law-paid employment. However, we have observed that many of the women, although initialy uncomfortable with the role, seem to have responded positively to this additional challenge to their survival. The disappearances have affected a transformation of the role of women as an economic force at local levle. This phenonenon of female-headed household needs to be addressed in the formulation of development plans both at the centre and at the periphery.

(ii) The Trauma of Children

It's very difficult to explain to a child the absence of a father.

Help me by helping to educate my twins.

What we need is not compensation. Plese find a job for my dauther. She ha passed her A/L examination.

Children's education was adversely affected by these disappearances. In one case, the principal of a school had written to the Commisson saying that three children (girls) of a certain family had stopped comming to school due to extreme poverty. Their father was a 39 year old fisherman who had been abducted when he was returining home from hospital with his wife. When asked for the reasons for the discontinuation of the children's education, the mother said:

I have five children. When my husband was abducted, my youngest child was only three months old. I find it very difficult to manage my family. It is true that the government gives free school uniforms. But I don't have money to buy clothes for my daughters' underskirts and also to by their other school needs.

In aonther case, the daughter of a disappeared persons said:

After my father's disappearance, my mother did not have money to support us. Two years back, she went to Lebanon for employment. Before she left, she asked me to stop schooling in order to look after my three sisters and brother. I was studying quite well and I am sad that I had to give up my studies. But I can console myself thinking of the future of my sisters and brother.

Besides their education, the children's normal upbringing was also disrupted by the loss of their parents. We came across a lrge number of cases involving wives who were pregnant at the time of the disappearance of their husbnds; they had to go through the pregnancy with a sense of tremendous insecurity, hopelessness, and despair; babies were born to widowed mothers as victims of an era they had never seen but the effects of which were soon felt bythem. Children often suffered separation from each other as they were parcelled out to several relatives out of economic necessity. Without the support of their husbands, wives found it difficult to provide for their children, and some had to go to the Middle-East leaving the children behind.

One may think that this is a very common phenomenon in Sri Lanka, and the children of the disappeared persons are not an exception. To a certain extent, that observation is correct. The difference is that many of these children were also eyewitnesses to abductions and gruesome killings of their loved ones, and these terrible experiences left an indelible mark on their psyche.

In one such instance, the security forces had killed six members in one family (husband, wife daughter, and three sons-ages 21, 14, 11) and the house was also burnt down. They had abandoned two children, aged 8 and 3, in the middle of a paddy field. In another case, security forces had abducted both parents at night leaving two children without any adult at home. A mother of three children giving evidence had stated that one night subversives had come to their house, dragged her husband out of the house along with his cousin and shot them both. Her eldest son who was a witness to this incident was six years old at the time. Ever since the incident he had become subject to fits and occasional outbursts. On the advice of the head priest of the temple he had been ordained recently.

II. The Emotional Dimension

(i) Uncertainty about the present whereabouts of their loved ones

In eighty percent of the cases inquired into by us, family members were unab to find and indentify the bodies of the victims and perform religious rites usual associated with death. We found that it is very difficult and agonizing for fam members to cope with the uncertainty in not knowing what actually happened t their loved ones. Some parents, though very few in number, belive that the children are still alive and are being detained in secret camps. One mother begge the Commission not to treat her son as "disappeared," because she thinks that he i still alive. She was not interested in receiving compenstion and had told othe family members not to apply for a death certificte. In another case, the witnes asked the Commission: "Is nobody going to inform me as to what happened to m child since his abduction? Am I to celebrate his birthday or observe his deat anniversary?. Aren't there certain basic social cum religious obligations one has t perform? Is the rest of society unconcerned about all these?" Several years hav passed since the worst period of disappearances. The mere passage of the tim however has not significantly helped the healing process.

> I am economically well-off. I don't want compensation. I beg the Commissio to find my son. I still hold Bodhi Pujas for him. I have heard stories about peop who have reappeared after a long spell of disappearance ..... I am hopeful tha he will return home someday. Astrologers have told me that he is still alive.

> I thought that my son was alive. Therefore, when I had to give my land to m children, I wrote it in the name of all my three sons, including the disappeare son. You can see that his name is still in the deed.

> We heard that our son's body was burnt on a roadside. With the help of the prie of our church, we brought the burnt body and buried it. But later another pas from Negombo came and said that the body belonged to one of their peop Therefore, we are not sure whether our son is dead or still alive. We had t mortage our land to find money to search for our son. We spent a lot o soothsayers.

As the mother of Richard de Zoysa, a journalist who was killed during th period, said; "I am one of the luckiest mothers because I saw my son's body." story of another grieving mother of a similar social and educational backgro clearly illustrates the importance of seeing the dead body for men reconciliaation.

A fourth-year medical student of the Colombo University was planning t continue his studies in England, and in order to expedite his travel plans, he we to Jaffna by train to meet his parents. The train terminated at Medawachch and he was apparently caught by three persons and relived of his belongings - gold chain, wrist watch and money. He was severly beaten and killed and the bo was burnt in place close to the railway station. According to the O. I. C Anuradhapura, there had been a terrorist attack the previous day in a near village and area was tense. According to some evidence, those three persons h marched the victims along the road saying that they had caught a "tiger" and th they wanted to hand him over to an army camp. The student had pleaded his innocence saying that he was only a medical student and that his father was a university professor.

The police had arrested the three suspects and when they were shown a photograph of the student, they had recognized that the person in the photograph was similar to the one who was killed by them. The police had also recovered the gold chain from a jewelery shop.

A post mortem was held and a burnt tooth was sent to America for analysis, but the report said that the tooth might belong to and elderly person. Giving evidence before the Commission, the O.I.C., Anuradahapura, said that he was not sure whether the bones collected by him belonged to one single person, and a body of another person could have been burnt in the same place.

The father, Professor of Forensic Medicine, Jaffna University, died two years later suffering depressaion over the sudden disappearance of his son. The mother is also a well-qualified doctor. They were not at all convinced that their son had been killed, particularly after the finding that the tooth could belong to an elderly person. Moreover, they had received several messages saying that their son had been seen at various army camps. The mother still pleads : "We have heard many strories and rumours but nothing is definite ..... I therefore beg of you to please make inquiries and uncover this ravel and bring our son back to us." Her sentiments clearly demonstrate that it is the mental reconciliation that has been denied to the family members of the disappeared.

(ii) Guilt

Even those who were "lucky" to find the bodies still suffer from a terrible feeling of guilt that the remains of their loved ones could not be accorded a decent burial. Both the agents of the state and subversives used dead bodies as a weapon to terrorize society. Not only did they kill people but also inflicted humiliation and insult on the remains of the dead. Subversives very often gave instructions to the affected families on how to conduct the funeral - not to perform any religious rites, not to perform any rituals such as beating drums, not to lift the coffin above knee - level when carrying it to the cemetery. They also ordered the villagers not to attend the funerals of the victims. Very few people dared to defy the orders of the subversives.

Even when family members had identified half- burnt bodies in tyre pyres, security forces had not released the bodies to be taken home. The security forces either removed the bodies or let them rot in the same plsce for days and days, allowing dogs and animals to feed on them. In some cases, victims were beheaded and the heads were kept on display at public places.

In one such case, two youths were killed by security forces, and the mutilated bodies were kept against the wall of a bridge. According to the post-mortem reports, in one body, the head was completely severed from the neck; both hands and both legs were cut off; the penis and scrotum were also cut off from the body and hung around the neck of the second deceased. The second body was also without hands and legs. Both bodies were completely naked. Such a scene would be grossly offensive and repulsive to any human being; one can imagine the psychological impact of such a scene on an immediate family member.

III. Emotional Disrurbances, Insanity, and Suicide

When witnesses came to give evidence before the Commission, we observed on many an occasion that some witnesses were completely shattered emotionally by the loss of their loved ones through disappearances. Only a very few of them had already sought psychiatric treatment, but our observation is that there are many more who require counselling and emotional rehabilitation.

A witness told this Commission that his wife has become insane after the disappearance of her son. As her other son is mentally retarded, it was the missing son who had supported the family by working in a gem-pit. Her husband said that his wife now chases after children on the street crying out her son's name.

This Commission has come across several incidents of suicide involving both males and females. Unfortunately, a mother of twins committed suicide a few weeks before the scheduled inquiry by this Commission into the disappearance of her husband. Her husbnand as well as her father had been abducted by thde security forces and subsequently disappeared. She became very depressed after the disapperance of her loved ones, and being unable to cope with the upbringing of her five-year old twins, she decided to end her life by taking poison. "You will be blessed, if you can find my husband," she had said in a letter sent to the Commission earlier.

It was revealed in another case that a person became very depressed after his brother was abducted by the army. One day he went out wearing the clothes of the disappeared brother and committed suicide by jumping into the Nilwala river. We came across several cases where fathers had committed suicide by taking poison after the disappearances of their sons.

A moher gave evidence before the Commission saying that one night a group of armed men had abducted three of her sons and another relative who was sleeping in her place at the time. A few minutes later she had heard several gunshots, and when she rushed to the scene, she had seen the burning bodies of her children. One year later, her other son was also abducted. Unable to cope with these tragedies, the only remining son had also committed suicide.

In another case, an Engineer was abducted and subsequently disappeared. His father, an agricultural labourer, drowned while picking lotuses for pooja, and then his younger son also committed suicide.

Subversive killings also brought untold misery to the affected families. A police inspector (C. I. D.) was killed by subversives, and his wife, a teacher with a 10 month old son by the time of this incident, became insane; she committed suicide by setting herself on fire two years later.

Human rehabilitation is much more difficult and complicated than physical reconstruction of a war-ravaged area. An old factory, if destroyed, can be rebuilt in a way more suited to modern requirements and efficient management. A society cannot be re-built in the same way. Apart from the human aspect involved, we also found that there has been no concerted effort or "intervention " on the part of the state or society to help these affected families to re-build their lives. They were left to themselves. Society has not been sensitized to the special needs of these families. Apart from material assistance, many of these families also need emotional rehabilitation. This is a rather neglected aspect in our society.

Sri Lanka in the recent past has undergone several traumatic experiences - two insurrections in the South and a continuing war in the North and the East - with disastrous repercussions on the social psyche of the nation. No systematic work has been done to study this aspect. We assume that our culture has its own in-built mechanisms to absorb or cushion these shocks. But one should realize that culture has its own limits. When societies are confronted with catastrophes of unprecedented magnitude, special mechanisms should be evolved to cope with those problems.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

A SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

I. Relief Measures

1. Payment of Monetary Compensation :

(i) Expeditions payment of fair and adequate compensation be made to dependents of disappeared persons within a time-frame in all the districts. Such payment should cover dependents of employees of the public sector, corporations and other state-owned institutions. The idea of introducing a new tax similar to the Defence Levy may be considered in order to generate funds for this purpose.

(ii) A scheme to provide monetary assistance to affected families who had suffered loss and damage to property be initiated. A forum be created to receive complaints of successors of disappeared persons.

(iii) Legislative provision be made exempting whatever amount paid as compensation from being made the subject matter of a civil claim and seizure.

2. Homelessness :

(i) A swift remedy for the homelessness by settling such families on state-owned land, preferably in the area of their residence prior to the displacement, and the provision of financial assistance in the construction of a house.

(ii) The allocation of state land for cultivation - the permit to the land and house to be in the name of the female head of the household.

3. Land :

A NOTE ON ADVISORY BUREAUS IN THE UK

The inception of the present day Citizens Advisory Bureau was a volunt organisation set up by a few citizens in London in 1939 to assist the soldiers w have been in the war-front of the Second World War vis-a-vis their displa families/loved ones, to make a contact between them. This little organisation h grown up today to be the world's largest advisory organisation. The Citiz Advisory Bureau Service handled nearly 6.5 million enquiries in 1995[1] provid free, confidential and impartial advise on every subject, It was consulted by o over five million people. The service is independent and draws on its experience client problems to suggest where improvments can be made to local and natio social policy and services.

Bureau rely primarily on local authorities for their funding NACAB receiv core grant from the development of Trade and Industry. The Citizens Advis Bureau service also receives funding from other parts of the public sector such a health authorities and probation service and donations from the private sector a charitable trusts.

Today the areas of assistance have expended from the initial area of assista to find information of misplaced persons to virtually "anything". The main are relate to matters of social security, debt, consumer credit, employment, hous legal, relationships, tax immigration, asylum and others.

It is of some interest to set out how the CAB's work-load is distributed. 69% its work-load is detailed information and advice empowering the clients to reso their problems. This includes benefit calculations, outlining rights a responsibilities, providing guidance on legal procedures, explaining h government and private services work, and helping to draft letters. 16% of t work-load are matters of advocacy and negotiation for instance with credit landlords and the benefit agencies. 8% simple requests for information a referrals, 4% providing simply a listening ear. 3% preparing cases f representation at courts and tribunals primary dealing with social security, a industrial tribunals.

Most employers have great faith in the role played by the CABX in sett dispute between them and their employees; though often than not the advic unfavourable to the employment.

The whole concept behind CAB service is to give free unbiased quality advis its clients and to improve their awareness of social needs. Where the governme proposing to introduce some legislation or a tax often it will be the CAB that w build up in an advance awareness in the public of the implications of it.

[1]National Association of Citizens' Advisory Bureaus Annual report of 1995/96.

The independance and impartibility in the role of the CABX and the soundness of their advise to clients are matters well acknowledged both public and private sectors.

The CABX is a success because of their independence and impartiality. The dedication and the commitment of its employees, 90% of whom are volunteers, is well known. It commands respect and obedience from both public and private organisations as a valuable instrument in the rebuilding of civil society.
